Japan to Quit Naval Parley In Deadlock Over Parity

Restatement of Demand for Sea Equality to Be Made.

Hirohito May Issue Rescript to Empire

U. S., British Refusal to Accept Plan Blamed For Failure.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Jan. 13.—Japan has decided to withdraw from the five-power naval limitation conference because of the refusal of Britain and the United States to grant her demand for naval equality, it was announced officially tonight.

Japan will restate her position about naval limitation, just as she did before resigning from the League of Nations when the League denounced her actions in Manchuria, and then will walk out of the naval parleys.

The Japanese decision was conveyed to the British delegation, as hosts of the conference, by short, stocky Admiral Osami Nagano, chief Nipponese delegate, the United States delegation was informed later.

Emperor May Act.

The restatement of the Japanese attitude was expected to be in the nature of a general statement to the world outlining again Tokyo's contention that Japan must be recognized as the equal in all respects of the greatest of world powers.

It was considered possible that Emperor Hirohito, as he did when Japan withdrew from the League, might issue a rescript to the empire setting forth national policy.

Admiral Nagano and Ambassador Matsuzo Nagi, his associate, probably will return to Tokyo via the United States. If Washington shows interest, it was said, they may talk informally about the possibility of a separate Japanese-American naval understanding.

Others to Continue.

Admiral Nagano was said to have informed British officials that Japan is withdrawing from the conference after they rejected his suggestion for sine die adjournment.

It was learned that other delegations have agreed to continue the conference on a four-power basis, primarily with a view to agreement on limiting the sizes of individual types of warships and their gun calibers.

The American and British delegations probably will discuss further plans tomorrow, while it is possible that the session scheduled for Wednesday will be postponed to allow Japan to prepare the text of its final declaration.

It is expected that the Japanese will attend the next meeting of the conference, whenever it is held, but that it will be their last.

Possible Results.

The London Daily Telegraph's naval expert was informed that among other reasons why Japan's claim to parity was doomed to fail was because a treaty drafted on such principle automatically would over-ride the Anglo-German naval convention and give Germany the moral right to build a fleet second to none.

British experts saw these repercussions as likely to follow the Japanese withdrawal:

Japan's position in eastern Asia will be strengthened and she will be able to hasten her program for domination of China and to impress upon all Asiatics her determination to make real her declaration that Japan is to be the dominant force in all the Far East.

Understanding Sought.

The movement for an Anglo-Japanese understanding with regard to mutual rights in China will be abandoned.

Britain will seek a general understanding with the United States, particularly, with regard to the Pacific Ocean and the Orient where Britain hopes for American support in curbing Japanese expansion.

Militarist domination of Japanese life will be intensified and the civilian groups supporting parliamentary government again overshadowed as they were in the wave of intense nationalism which followed the Manchurian adventure of the Japanese army.

The conference convened at historic Clarence House on December 9 with representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy attending.

Parity Demand Shelved.

It was evident that the conference was doomed to failure from the start. Statesmen and observers were unanimous in the opinion that it was the "conference to end naval conferences."

Prior to the opening session, Japan announced that it would not enter into any negotiations until its demand for naval parity with the United States and Great Britain was recognized.

The United States delegation refused the demand on grounds that Japan could concentrate her entire fleet in the Pacific, whereas the United States must have fleets both in the Atlantic and Pacific.

British diplomacy then saved the conference from an earlier death. Viscount Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, obtained what was regarded as a slight concession from Japan when the island empire's delegation agreed to shelve parity demands temporarily during discussion of the British proposal that all powers exchange building programs over a period of six years.

Crippled Man Goes on Trial For Killing of Son, 5, by Gas

Hopeless Paralytic Sobs as Counsel Describes Prisoner's Love for Child and Blames Wife's Infidelity for Tragedy; Defense Is Insanity.

A broken-hearted father—David L. Ashcraft, 45, a hopeless paralytic—sobbed convulsively in his wheel chair in Justice Daniel O'Donoghue's courtroom yesterday as his attorney told a jury of 12 stern-faced men the love he felt for his son, David Ashcraft, jr., 5, whom he held over an open gas jet until he was dead.

The stark and tragic story of how the crippled paper vendor first bought the boy ice cream, which he dished into two saucers, and then sat up for hours in a basement room at 227 Third street while the child slept and he pondered the question of whether to kill him was related by Fred J. Icenhower, defense attorney.

As Icenhower addressed the jurors and told them that he would attempt to show Ashcraft was the victim of an irresistible impulse which drove him to take his son's life, the prisoner, shifting in the wheel chair, appeared but slightly moved.

But when Icenhower described the inner struggle through which he

Britain to Urge New Sanctions Against Italy

Defense Ministers Discuss Policy to Be Followed at League Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 13.—A strong possibility that the sanctions ring around Italy will be drawn tighter was indicated tonight.

The British government, it was learned, is ready to proceed collectively at Geneva when the League Council meets January 20 with a further use of punitive machinery against Premier Mussolini.

Addition of oil to the sanctions list rests with the League, if and when such a boycott could be made effective, which in turn depends partly upon the American viewpoint—a viewpoint which is not yet fully clarified.

Disclosure that Britain is ready to go ahead followed a long meeting today of defense ministers and army, navy and air force officials. The full cabinet probably will meet Wednesday, but it was said in responsible quarters the government already has decided Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, will go to Geneva prepared to pledge full British support of further sanctions.

Showdown Expected.

Indications in London were that the powers may temporarily play for time in Geneva, but eventually will proceed to a showdown vote on oil.

In anticipation of that action—which the British recognize will be a critical stage—steps have been taken for further defense preparedness in case of an attack.

While the defense requirements committee met at length with Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today to review the situation of preparedness for action, the Admiralty gave out details of the home fleet's spring cruise, which will take the ships to Gibraltar and vicinity four days hence.

This fleet is made up of 19 warships, representing the sadly depleted remnant of Britain's home fleet—most of it having been sent to the Mediterranean. It is composed of the battleships Rodney and

Morgan Denies Pressure to Aid Allies' Finances

Banker Also Tells Senators Company Did Not Delay U. S. War Supplies.

By Felix Bruner.

With J. P. Morgan and two of his partners still on the witness stand, the Senate Munitions Committee yesterday continued its efforts to prove that commercial interests influenced entry of the United States into the World War.

Particularly, the committee understood to show:

That American munition plants pushed foreign orders for guns and ammunition ahead of those of the United States Government.

That influence was brought to bear on the Federal Reserve Board to persuade it to approve foreign acceptances used in munition and war material transactions.

In both instances, Morgan denied that J. P. Morgan & Co. was in any way involved. Morgan also stated emphatically that he believed increases in exports helped this country but that they did not lead it into war.

Put Bond Talk in Record.

Morgan put into the record at the opening of the second week's hearing a talk he made to representatives of bond houses when the Anglo-French loan of $500,000,000 was floated in this country in 1915. The talk was put into the record as indicative of the Morgan attitude at that time. In the course of his talk to the bond house representatives, the head of J. P. Morgan & Co. said:

"This bond, in my opinion, is not a war bond, it is giving America's customers time; the best customers that America has and has had for years, ask for time to pay for what they are buying here. They are buying much more than they usually do, and they are selling much less than they usually do. It seems to me that a country which is starting out to be a world power in trade, must learn that it must give its customers time wisely, properly, when their credit deserves it, as a bank has to do, and, therefore, this is not a pro-ally affair or an anti-

Rich Chicagoan Kills Lawyer, Judge Flees in Wild Barrage

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—An adverse ruling was the spark that caused a gray-haired member of an aristocratic Chicago family to run amuck today in a wild outburst of courtroom shooting that killed an attorney and sent a circuit judge hurrying to safety.

A few hours later a psychopathic expert declared the mild-appearing John W. Keogh insane.

"I'm glad I did it," Keogh asserted, in explaining why he had slain Attorney Christopher G. Kinney and fired three bullets that missed Judge John Prystalski by inches. "I hope this will promote enough ballyhoo to prove my point—that there have been no legal tax receiverships or foreclosures in Cook County since 1910. I did it as a soldier, not as a murderer."

Keogh's rampage turned the circuit court room into a bedlam of shouting, pushing, fighting humanity. Judge Prystalski ruled against him in a mortgage lawsuit. Keogh drew a pistol. He fired a bullet into the heart of Kinney, 54-year-old lawyer who represented an insurance firm that had obtained a judgment against him.

Keogh turned the weapon on the judge. The first bullet struck the bench, three inches below the target as the jurist dropped to the floor. The second pierced the chair Prystalski had just vacated. The third thudded against the bench.

Judge Prystalski crawled to his

Hauptmann's Counsel Maps 11th-Hr. Plea

Agree on Plan to Carry His Appeal to U. S. Supreme Court.

Hoffman Silent on Stay; Doomed Man Begs World for Chance.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 13.—Counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, at a secret conference outside the city tonight, agreed to try to carry the fight for their client's life back to the United States Supreme Court.

Working with the benefit of the advice of two Washington attorneys, experts on constitutional law, C. Lloyd Fisher, Frederick A. Pope and Egbert Rosecrans, the lawyers who defended Hauptmann, planned to try to get an entering wedge into the supreme tribunal through the Federal District Court.

The strategy, it was understood, will be to go into Federal District Court, either here or in Newark, and apply for a write. There are a dozen types of writs they could ask for, but they probably will stake all on a demand for a writ of habeas corpus.

Expect Denial in Court.

Stripped of its legal language, that means that the attorneys will ask for an order to "produce the body of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in court." In case their application is denied—and it probably will be, because judges are reluctant to remove condemned men from the death house—the lawyers then could appeal to a higher Federal court until they reached the nine justices in Washington who are the supreme arbiters of the law.

The Washington attorneys who have been brought into the case are Nugent Dodds and Neil Burkinshaw. Much of their practice has been before the United States Supreme Court. They were not present at today's conference.

It was a desperate race against time that the lawyers were running when they met in Pope's office at Somerville, N. J., today for a three-hour conference.

Hauptmann will be executed Friday night unless some court stays the executioner's hand or Gov. Harold G. Hoffman grants a reprieve.

Hoffman stayed away from his office all day. He was in New York, reportedly on business connected with the opening o fthe New Jersey Legislature tomorrow. He will return tomorrow to face an Assembly and Senate containing many persons hostile to him because of his intervention in the Hauptmann case.

Threats Are Heard.

Threats were heard among New Jersey legislators that an investigation of the Governor would be proposed if he grants a reprieve and there even was some talk of impeachment proceedings. Most of it came from Democrats like Assemblyman Crawford Jamieson, who, weeks ago threatened to investigate Hoffman's participation in the Hauptmann case from the time the Governor paid his secret visit to the death house last October.

Hoffman, a Republican, has a small majority in both houses. Sentiment among his opponents apparently had not become strong enough to bring out any concerted plan of action, but the galleries will be crowded at noon tomorrow for the convening of the Legislature.

Late today William Conklin, press secretary to Hoffman, said there was no possibility of a decision on a reprieve tonight and scant chance of one tomorrow. He also disposed of the issue of whether Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon would be detained when his boat touches Panama. Conklin said the Governor never had any intention of bringing Condon back for questioning.

It was learned that another possibility would be for Hauptmann's lawyers to ask a writ of habeas corpus with the understanding that they would waive "production in court of the body of the said Bruno

Mayors Ask 2.3 Billion Relief; Senate Speeds Bonus Action; Processors Win Tax Recovery

Bill for Bond Payment Is Sent to Finance Unit for Discussion.

Veterans' Leaders Indorse Proposal

Total Cost to U. S. Is Set at $2,187,000,000; Passage Seen.

Payment of the bonus in bonds of $50 and upward, non-negotiable, but immediately redeemable by the Government at full face value, was called for yesterday in a coalition bill introduced in the Senate and considered at once by the Senate Finance Committee.

Proposed as a substitute for the cash payment bill overwhelmingly swept through the House last week, the new measure received unresistating support from three major organized veterans groups, which previously indorsed the House bill.

"My opinion is that this bill will be enacted into law," said Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Finance Commitee, one of the four Senate sponsors of the measure, which also has the reported support of Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson.

No conclusive action was taken at yesterday's meeting of the Finance Committee, but Budget Director Daniel Bell and Veterans Administrator Frank T. Hines were questioned at length.

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., has been asked to appear before the committee today to testify on the probable effect of the new bond issue on the market. He is said to have been summoned at suggestion of Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina.

Others Behind Bill.

Joining with Harrison in introducing the bond payment bill were Senators James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Frederic Steiwer (Republican), of Oregon, who together had been pushing an alternate bond payment plan, and Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, who was to have introduced the House bill.

Immediately after the bill was made public, heads of the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans, said in a joint statement:

"We are of the opinion that the Senate bill introduced today merits the support of all friends of payment of the adjusted service certificates and we are united in support of the measure."

Although Harrison insisted the White House has had nothing to do with preparation of the revised measure and has expressed neither approval or disapproval, speculation turned at once on the possibility that the President might sign the legislation if it passes Senate and House. This belief was enhanced by the fact that Senate Majority Leader Robinson participated in conferences leading to its introduction and indorsed the printed measure.

Sees No Need for Taxing.

Representatives of both the Treasury Department and the Veterans' Administration also are known to have played an influential role in the framing of the measure, which is designed to stave off necessity for huge new Treasury financing operations.

"To the extent that the bonds are held by the veterans, it will, in my opinion, make unnecessary any additional public financing by the Treasury," Harrison told newspapermen. "It is the belief that under this method of payment, it will

Supreme Court Orders Return Of $180,000,000 AAA Levies

Fate of Billion Now Paid Left in Air; Cotton Suit Dismissed.

By Robert C. Albright.

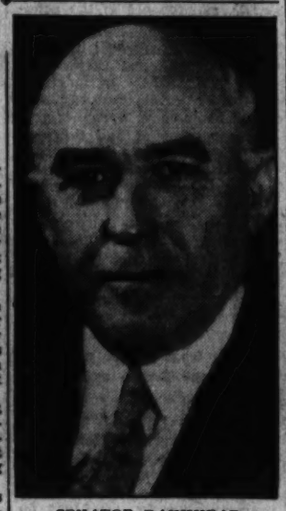

The right of processors to recover approximately $1,000,000,000 in unlawful AAA taxes and the future of Federal farm regulation outside of invalid AAA confines were plunged into uncertainty yesterday by two inconclusive Supreme Court opinions only slightly narrowing the legal scope of the New Deal.

The court reversed its decision to take jurisdiction in the Lee Moor Bankhead act test, leaving legality of the cotton-control act and its ginning taxes undecided, although the court has plainly intimated that law also is unconstitutional.

Sustaining its injunction against Government collection of rice processing taxes, the justices unanimously directed repayment to eight Southern rice millers of processing taxes now held in depositary.

This ruling will enable processors generally to recover some $180,000,000 from escrow or depositaries as a result of lower court injunctiins. But the court offered no encouragement to processors from whom the Government already has collected more than $1,000,000,000.

Justices said they had "no occasion to discuss or decide" whether AAA requirements that processors must show inability to pass on their taxes "affords an adequate remedy at law."

Thus the fate of the great bulk of AAA taxes assessed against processors under an invalid law and the constitutionality of the Bank-

Grayson's Bond Held Forfeited; Trial Ordered

Ex-U. S. Aid May Be Taken From Hospital Bed to Face Jury.

John Cooke Grayson, former Treasury Department official, may be physically removed from bed in University Hospital, Charlottesville, Va., from which physicians have prophesied he might never arise, to face a jury in the District Supreme Court, is was indicated yesterday when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue ordered his $2,000 bond forfeited and issued a bench warrant for his arrest.

Grayson has been confined to the hospital with what six physicians have said was a critical heart ailment. Because of his precarious health, his trial on a charge of conspiring with Robert Stunz, former executive officer of the Park Savings Bank, to defraud the Government, has been repeatedly postponed for over two years.

3 Doctors Report.

Late Saturday two Washington medical specialists, Dr. John E. Lind, of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, and Dr. James Alexander Lyon, a heart specialist, secretly visited Grayson and made a report to United States Attorney L. C. Garnett on what they learned. Their report was not offered to the public.

In denying the plea of Defense Attorney William E. Leahy for further continuance of the trial, Justice O'Donoghue said, "It is far better that one man should die in the administration of justice than that the public should lose confidence in its fair administration by the courts."

The statement was made after Mr. Leahy had offered affidavits stating that in the opinion of three specialists it might prove fatal to remove Grayson from his hospital bed to stand trial here. The statement was prepared by Drs. Frank Leech, James W. Ealer, and Walter A. Bloedorn, all of whom are recognized heart specialists.

The three reported:

"The future outlook for this patient is distinctly bad. The frequent attacks of angina pectoris, the high blood pressure, the evidence of degeneration of arteries supplying vital organs, the presence of pulsus alternans indicate that the present downward course

Fletcher Lays Air Censorship ToRadioChains

Fear of Pumitive Action by U. S. Also Charged by Party Chairman.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, last night charged the country's two major radio broadcasting systems with either exercising "unwarranted censorship" or succumbing to "fear" of punitive action by the Federal Communications Commission."

Fletcher made his accusation in letters to the executives of the Columbia and National broadcasting systems after they flatly refused to sell the Republican national committee "time on the air" for the presentation of skits dramatizing the issues of the forthcoming Presidential campaign.

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia system, rejected the dramatic skits on the ground that "appeals to the electorate should be intellectual and not based on emotion, passion or prejudice" and that "dramatization would throw the radio campaign almost wholly over the emotional side."

Policy Violation Seen.

He added that "the dramatic method by its very nature would tend to over-emphasize incidents of minor importance and significance, simply because of the dramatic value" and that American voters might not be able to "discriminate fairly among dramatizations, so that the turn of national issues might well depend on the skill of warring dramatists rather than on the merits of the issue debated."

Leo R. Lohr, president of the National system, contended that "the programs which you have offered to us using actors to give dramatic skits on the air involve the fictionalizing of important political issues now before the country." He said "these presentations would violate the policies" upon which his system based its service to the public.

"To accept such dramatic programs as you have offered," Lohr added, "would place the discussion of vital political and national issues on the basis of dramatic license rather than upon a basis of responsibly stated fact or opinion."

Grand Jury, Heavily Guarded, Acts Monday in Wilson Killing

Indictments to Be Sought Against Sutton, Cleary, McDermott, Meyers; Case 'Clinched,' Says Pugh; 12 Secret Witnesses Called.

By Phillip J. Austensen.

A Staff Correspondent.

Rockville, Md., Jan. 13.—In a courthouse crowded with armed guards, the Montgomery County grand jury on Monday will be asked to return indictments against four men, charged with the murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper delivery man, victim of "mistake" gang shooting in October, 1934.

Twelve witnesses will appear before the grand jury, including two who saw Wilson brought down by professional killers. Elaborate arrangements have been made to shield the identity of all witnesses.

The four men whom the county hopes to indict for the murder are:

ALBERT S. SUTTON, now in the District Jail in Washington.

WILLIAM THOMAS CLEARY, under arrest in Washington.

ALBERT McDERMOTT, alias John "Slim" Dunn, a prisoner at the Alcatraz Island Federal Prison off the California coast.

ERNEST S. MEYERS, a prisoner at Lorton Reformatory.

The grand jury also will be asked to indict these four men for the attempted "murder by explosives" of Mickey McDonald, Washington gambler, in front of whose Maryland home Wilson was slain. Indictments charging all four with carrying concealed weapons also will be sought, State's Attorney James H. Pugh announced today.

Judge Charles W. Woodward issued the order today calling back the regular Montgomery County jury for two days, especially to consider the Wilson slaying. If indictments are returned, the case probably will not go to trial for a month, pending the return of McDermott from Alcatraz.

Summoning newspaper reporters to his office yesterday, State's Attorney Pugh announced that with the return from New York yesterday of three members of the Washington Police Detective Bureau, sufficient evidence was at hand to warrant taking the case to the grand jury.

He said that 12 witnesses would be called to tell what they know, and that their identity would be kept secret. Judge Woodward, Pugh said, had warned members of the jury from talking about the Senator Glass' Opponent Sues Creel and Magazine for 'Slur'

Charging an article in Collier's Weekly by its Washington political correspondent, George Creel, was libelous, Randolph Leigh, McLean (Va.) opponent of Senator Carter Glass in the approaching Virginia primary, filed suit for $200,000 damages in District Supreme Court yesterday. Both the magazine and Creel are made defendants.

Commenting on Leigh's candidacy, according to the petition, the article questioned rumors that the veteran Virginia Senator would be defeated because of his opposition to many phases of the New Deal.

"Anybody wanting a good hearty laugh," according to the petition, Creel wrote, touching the prediction Glass would be defeated, "has only to take this prophecy with him on a leisurely trip to the Old Dominion.

"True, one man has announced himself as a candidate against Senator Glass in the Democratic primaries next year, but he is about the lonesomest human being in the entire State," the petition alleges the article states.

"When Virginians gather for a meeting of any kind, even a church social, they post pickets to make sure that the presumptuous creature does not sneak his way into the hall, and men and women cross the street at the sight of the persons, afraid that their vaccinations may not be in working order. A few laughed at the candidacy as an amusing impertinence, but the major sentiment is one of actual outrage."

In his suit Leigh claims that the story indicates that as a result of his candidacy he has suffered social ostracism.

Huge Fund for Federal Program to Re-employ 3 Million Urged.

Plan Would Boost Deficit in Budget

Sum Would Be Added to Money Already on Tap for the Needy.

Predicting that 3,000,000 heads of families will be jobless and in need of assistance in the fiscal year beginning July 1, the mayors of eight big cities yesterday called for expenditure by the Federal Government of $2,340,000,000 to provide work for the needy idle. They said the Government thus could "take care of 12,000,000 men, women and children."

The vast program would add $2,340,000,000 to the President's estimated budget deficit of $1,098,000,000 to make a grand total deficit for 1936-37 of $3,438,000,000.

The mayors, meeting in Washington as the executive committee of the United States Conference of Mayors, prepared the memorandum for submission to Vice President Garner of the Senate and Speaker Byrns of the House of Representatives, carrying their plea for the huge work-relief appropriation directly to the Congress over the President's head.

Fund Entirely New.

The appropriation would be an entirely new and additional supplementing the $1,100,000,000 that the President carried over in his budget as unexpended, although allocated for recovery and relief.

The mayors indicated they would have asked for even more than the $2,340,000,000 stipulated, except that they expected:

That the funds for the Civilian Conservation Corps and the PWA included in the regular budget would be provided;

That carry-over of present funds other than WPA will keep some people working during 1936-37;

And that private industry will continue to absorb additional persons from the relief rolls.

The mayors, holding it essential that "the facts regarding the present relief problem be frankly stated and squarely faced," said there are 3,200,000 employable persons from relief rolls now working on the Federal works program; that their estimates show at least 500,000 employable persons still on relief uncared for in WPA, CCC and PWA, and that there would still remain 2,000,000 relief cases to be cared for by the cities, counties and States.

For the last group the mayors predicted that the States, counties and municipalities would be forced to raise $800,000,000, besides the average of 22 per cent of the WPA cost which their ordinarily bear.

Estimate Is "Minimum."

The eight mayors, headed by Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, president of the conference, pointed out that the $2,340,000,000 was a "minimum figure" of the funds needed for which Federal aid is required if a critical situation is to be avoided."

In breaking down the relief problem, the mayors reported that the city, county and State load is approximately 2,000,000 cases, embracing between 7,000,000 and 9,000,000 persons. Of these, they said that at least 500,000 employable unemployed, involving about 2,000,000 persons, have not been and will not be absorbed by the existing Government work and relief agencies. The report then states:

"* * * It is an impossibility for the cities, States and counties to carry this 500,000 load of employable relief cases in addition to meeting the full and complete costs for care of the unemployable group."

The mayors arrived at the figure of 500,000 employables unemployed by deducting the certified relief roll employment figure of October 21—3,652,800—from the FERA census of May, 1934, when 4,011,278 employable cases were listed. They noted, in proof of the assertion that their estimates were "careful and conservative," that:

"The May, 1935, census was taken at a time when seasonal employment was at a high point and when relief rolls were somewhat decreased."

The report also noted the need for placing the work-relief program on "a planned and adequate basis for the next fiscal period of the Federal Government," in order that other units of government could

Keep Gang Out, Farley Offers As 1936 Slogan

Foes of Roosevelt Called 'Arrant Demagogues' in N. Y. Speech.

By the Associated Press.

Tuckahoe, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Postmaster General James A. Farley tonight sounded the Democratic rallying cry for the 1936 Presidential campaign: "Keep Roosevelt in—and keep the gang out."

In an address couched in sharp and vigorous phrases, the Democratic national chairman arraigned "the self-professed gangsters of big business" as "arrant demagogues" and "hirelings of privilege," whose "stock in trade is talk."

Farley prepared his speech for delivery at a delayed Jackson Day dinner of the Westchester County Democratic committee. His words were a clear amplification of the President's declaration to Congress of "no retreat."

Called "Brigands."

He accused what he called the "unprincipled brigands" of money and big business with crying for quarter in 1932, but now attempting to "muscle in" on the fruits of a general prosperity.

"In the light of the progress that has been made, the destiny of this country rests upon the continued war that has been made in the interest of the people of this country.

"This war started as a war against depression. The war against depression has been won, but the forces which have so successfully attained this victory cannot yet be demobilized because we are faced with another enemy, an enemy who would snatch the fruits of our victory and use them to undermine again the foundations on which we are striving to build a permanent prosperity.

"These are the ones who would 'gang up on the Government.'

"There is only one answer: 'Keep Roosevelt in—and keep the gang out.'"

Too Stupid, He Says.

Farley charged that attacks on New Deal legislation were attacks on legislative enactments which did not directly benefit the attackers.

"Why do they not attack the legislation which benefited them directly?" he continued. "They do not because they are perfectly willing to be on the receiving end.

"Stupid as they are, they can distinguish direct benefits, but they are too stupid to also see that the limiting of agricultural production, such as was done under the AAA, indirectly benefited them by bringing farm income to a point where it provided impetus to industrial income and, because of increased consumption, made it possible for machinery long idle to operate and produce dividends."

Dispute Divides Sailors' Union At Convention

Two Boston Delegates Are Refused Seats; Federation Is Assailed.

By the United Press.

The bitter battle between two factions of unionized seamen was carried into the thirty-third convention of the International Seamen's Union of America last night when two Boston delegates were refused seats.

The Boston firemen, Moe Byne and J. Montal, were refused admission to the convention, the first in six years, although they insisted they were elected representatives of 730 New England union members. The pair candidly admitted they were sympathetic with the maritime federation on the Pacific Coast of which Harry Bridges, leading figure in the San Francisco general strike, is spokesman.

After refusing seats to the two Boston firemen, officials explained they considered their presence an attempt by the federation to intrude into the convention. International officials have worried over the gradual accretion of power by the federation.

Byne and Montal claimed that the three delegates from the Boston district were "self-appointed." The three who already have been seated were Oscar Carlson, John Bley and Patrick Keane.

Additional controversy is expected later during the ten-day convention at the election of officers. Victor A. Orlander, secretary-treasurer and a leading union figure, announced last night that he is resigning.

In filling his post, it is expected the Pacific Coast delegates may make an effort to elect a federation man.

Andrew Furuseth, president since 1893, was chairman at the opening session.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who had been invited to address the opening session, was not present, nor had she provided a substitute.

Orlander reported that the maritime federation was seeking "to eliminate the International Seamen' Union of America from the Pacific agreements and awards" by attempting to make its own contracts with shipowners and promising peace on the Pacific in return for a closed shop.

His report showed 194,957 able seaman certificates have been issued by the Department of Commerce. The union claims membership of somewhat over 50,000.

On the Hustings

Action on Neutrality Bill May Affect Trade With World for Generations to Come.

FRAMERS of the American neutrality program gradually are learning that they are handling one of the most complicated subjects ever to come up on Capitol Hill. The course of action they take may not only be a decisive factor in whether this country again becomes involved in a European war, but it may seriously affect this Nation's foreign trade as well as the direction of world affairs for generations to come.

For instance, this question, which few apparently have thought about, arises: Will not the United States encourage economic nationalism and thus intensify the entire world problem by authorizing the President to deny to belligerents essential war materials in excess of peace-time levels, as proposed in the pending bills?

In other words will not this action of the United States force every major power to undertake to become as economically self-sufficient as possible, paying government subsidies and throwing up tariff barriers, to encourage in peace time increased production of those commodities in which they are deficient? Will not Italy, Germany, Japan and other countries lacking raw material resources redouble their efforts, impelled by the necessity of national defense, to obtain colonies to supply the missing commodities?

Cables from London and Paris indicate the British and French are thinking of these possibilities. The French, represented as believing that war with Germany is inevitable, are determined, according to one cable, that "new sources of supply must be sought to compensate for what can no longer be expected from America." Hastening of a tight alliance between France and Russia is predicted as one consequence of the American neutrality plan.

The British are reported to be led toward furthering their encouragement of cotton growing by Brazil. This country is the chief supplier of cotton to the world. Cotton linters are an essential in the manufacture of explosives. Is it not natural that the British, the French and the Germans should be looking around for sources of that commodity in addition to the United States? But in order to expect the volume which they will need in war time, these countries must support in peace time the development of cotton production in Brazil, India, Egypt and Africa—thus lessening the world market for American cotton. Who can predict the ultimate effect on the South?

This is not fanciful. The United States for years has been doing that very thing. We vote millions of dollars annually from the Treasury in peace time to subsidize the merchant marine and aviation, chiefly in order that the country might have adequate shipyard facilities and airplane factories in time of war. For years the American consumer has been paying a bounty on sugar in order to encourage a beet sugar industry on the plea that unless this were done the country might be without sugar in time of war. The manganese producers have won exorbitant tariff protection in the name of national defense.

It is true that the threat of League of Nations sanctions may move some countries toward greater self-sufficiency. But it is now clear that League sanctions are ineffective without the cooperation of this country and, in any event, the nation desirous of keeping the peace has no need to fear sanctions. That weapon is pointed only at the aggressor, but the American neutrality policy would punish the attacked nation along with the aggressor.

All of this is not to say that the United States should not seek by every device to remain neutral, nor is it to say that this Government should align itself with the League of Nations in the punishment of aggressors. But it is intended to point out one of the hazardous difficulties of framing a neutrality policy in a world so closely knit together as this one.

One hard-working laborer in the field of neutrality legislation, who has received little public mention, is Green H. Hackworth, solicitor of the State Department. An accomplished diplomat, as well as an outstanding authority on international law, he has struggled with the legalities and technicalities of the neutrality problem for more than a year now. Instead of making speeches on the subject, it is his task to plug up the loopholes in the legislation and to make certain that words say what they are intended to say.

A prophet apparently without power in his own country: Students at Kansas State College in a straw vote favored President Roosevelt over their Governor, Alf M. Landon, as the next occupant of the White House. The vote was 595 to 496. More amazing was a vote of 684 to 596 against the Supreme Court's invalidation decision. In other words only 53.5 per cent of the students voting disapproved of the Supreme Court decision. Pretty good substantiation of the accuracy of the "America Speaks" poll figure showing only 42 per cent of Kansans favoring AAA, eh, what?

Pro-Townsend Congress Sure, Fr. Cox Asserts

Says No Member Can Be Elected Without Pledging Aid to Cause.

The Rev. James R. Cox, liberal pastor of St. atrick's Church, Pittsburgh, started back home last night leaving behind a warning that no man will get into the next Congress "unless he indorses the Townsend plan."

Traveling in a bus with the Pittsburgh priest were 35 men and women who came here to show Congress that, "contrary to reports, sentiment for the Townsend plan is not confined to the West."

"It is sweeping through Pennsylvania and the entire East," Father Cox said.

At the headquarters of the Townsend organization, in the Southern Building, the arrival of Father Cox and his delegation caused considerable concern. The Townsend leaders are opposed to such "expeditions," and they had sent word to Father Cox to that effect.

Meets Dr. Townsend.

"They can't tell me what to do," Father Cox said. "I am for the Townsend plan of $200 a month pension for every person 60 years of age or more. But Idon't necessarily subscribe to the Townsend organization's methods of getting that pension."

There was no sign of ill feeling, however, when Father Cox, on a visit to the Southern Building, met Dr. Francis E. Townsend, the author of the pension plan. The two men shook hands and wished each other well.

Father Cox then went to Capitol Hill, conferred with Senator Joseph Guffey, of Pennsylvania, looked in on the Morgan hearing and set out for the White House.

President Roosevelt, the Pittsburgh priest announced later, had given him a stone that was taken from the White House when it was remodeled last year.

"The stone is from that part of the White House where Andrew Jackson kept two cows," Father Cox explained. "I am going to put it in the vestibule of my new church along with some stones I got from the Holy Land."

Comment on Gallup Poll.

Father Cox predicted that President Roosevelt would be re-elected in November, and expressed the opinion that he "most certainly" would carry Pennsylvania.

Father Cox said he was not surprised to note that the poll of Dr. George Gallup the results of which were published in The Post, showed 89 per cent of the voters favoring Government pensions for the aged, but only 3.8 per cent favoring the Townsend plan.

"The reason for that small percentage favoring the Townsend plan," he said, "is the ridicule that has been directed at it. But watch that percentage grow."

In Chicago yesterday, Robert E. Clements, secretary and directing head of the Townsend organization, said that the chances of the Townsend plan being adopted by Congress have been greatly increased as a result of House approval of the soldiers' bonus bill.

Eskimos' Welfare Work Is Praised

Edmonton, Alta., (U.P.).—Eskimos are years ahead in social credit ideas, according to R. A. Learmont, factor of the Hudson Bay Co.'s post at King William Island.

"If social credit means sharing with the other fellow, Eskimos have been doing that for years," he said when he reached here recently after a 1,700-mile air journey from the Arctic.

The trip was Learmont's first taste of civilization in seven years.

Alley Authority Work Expands To 14 Squares

Ihlder Report to Congress Lists Accomplishment in 13 Months.

The Alley Dwelling Authority in the first 13 months of its existence has engaged in operations involving 14 squares and containing 17 inhabited alleys out of a total of 200 squares with alley dwellings, a report to Congress disclosed yesterday.

Lising its accomplishments since November 10, 1934, when $500,000 was made available, the Alley Dwelling Authority reported it has:

Acquired all the requisite property in five squares containing seven inhabited alleys, all except one parcel each in two other squares, part of the property in one other square;

Secured options on properties in six other squares, including seven inhabited alleys; started condemnation proceedings in one of these squares;

Cleared all acquired property in four squares that formerly contained six inhabited alleys;

Let contracts for the redevelopment of three squares;

Is ready to advertise for bids for redevlopment of one other square;

Has detail plans in preparation for redevelopment of five other squares.

Rehousing Problem.

Rehousing of persons deprived of their slum dwellings and the prevention of new slums has been one of the foremost problems confronting the authority, the report states. It was expected, John Ihlder, executive officer said, that the authority could proceed for two years on its ten-year program before facing the necessity of providing for those whose dwellings it demolished. And during those two years it was expected private enterprise would add to the supply of low-rent houses.

"The depression, however, changed this condition," the report explains, "both by curtailing the construction of dwellings, especially in the low-rental ranges, and by increasing the number of families in the lowest income groups and on relief.

"Unless private enterprise materially increases the number of low-rental dwellings it may prove necessary to amend the alley dwelling act so that the authority may construct low-rental housing on cheap sites outside the 'old' city, but within the District to an extent not exceeding the number of dwelling units it demolishes. Otherwise the authority soon will be under the practical necessity of making provision of low-rental housing at a great loss due to site costs."

Disposition of Alleys.

The authority refrained, however, from proposing any amendments to its organic act or any new legislation on the ground that it would be in a better position to make such recommendations at the end of the second year.

Explaining what is done with alleys acquired, the authority cited some of its redevelopment projects.

In Rupperts court, for instance, a one-story brick garage is under construction. Preliminary plans have been drawn for one-story brick storage garages in Douglas court. O'Brien court, square 104, is to be used for a parking area from one to five years so that the plot may be held, in case a Federal department desires it for building purposes.

Another garage is planned for Browns court, while in London court the plan is to build two wings to the existing eleven alley dwellings as a low-rental housing project. All residences will face on a wide open area facing the street. Stanton court is to have a storage garage, and more low-rental dwellings are under consideration for other sites.

Board of Trade To Seek Better Fire Apparatus

Chief Schrom Tells Committe Many Trucks, Engines Are Unfit.

The Washington Fire Department rapidly is becoming antiquated, due to failure to acquire modern trucks, engines, masks and other equipment and apparatus, Chief Charles E. Schrom told the Board of Trade law and order committee yesterday.

Impressed by the statements of Chief Schrom, and the findings of a special sub-committee which has been investigating departmental needs, the committee voted to recommend that the Board of Trade crusade for additional fire-fighting appropriations.

Only 140 gas masks, all but 12 of which are virtually obsolete, are owned by the Fire Department, said Chief Schrom. He told of a piece of apparatus that has been out of commission since last spring because the $2,400 needed to repair it was not available.

There are in use 43 pieces of apparatus which are entirely obsolete, Chief Schrom declared. Twenty-four of these, he said, are in active service, while the remainder are held in reserve. Many neighborhood fire stations house trucks or engines which should not be taken out on the streets, Chief Schrom asserted.

Not only have funds been withheld for buying new apparatus, but present appropriations are too small even to keep existing equipment in repair, he declared.

Air Censored, Says Fletcher

Republican radio division, in Chicago last night told the Associated Press he would undertake to have these skits broadcast through local arrangements with individual stations. The first of the skits—entitled "Liberty at the Cross Roads"—will be brodacast, he said, from station WGN at Chicago from 9 to 9:30 tonight.

Paley, in addition, refused to sell either Republicans or Democrats time for the presentation of political speeches until after the party convention. He said his company would continue to operate on "a completely nonpartisan basis" and from time to time would give free periods for the discussion of political issues by Republican spokesmen, but that the company reserved the right to exercise "its editorial judgment" in arranging such broadcasts.

Reserves Judgment.

Lohr said his company would follow "our established policy of furnishing to political parties the opportunity to present the views of their responsible spokesmen on the public questions involved." He also insisted, however, that the company must reserve the right "to exercise the necessary judgment and discretion with respect to programs."

This controversy, which started as a result of President Roosevelt's decision to address Congress—and through the radio the Nation—on "the state of the Union" at night, is becoming one of the most interesting ever to take place on the eve of a Presidential campaign.

It raises for the first time such vital questions in the promotion of discussion over public issues as the relationship of radio broadcasting systems to political parties; whether one party is entitled to the exact treatment given another and also raises the question of the propriety of broadcasts for which political parties are willing to pay.

Admits Right to Choose.

Fletcher in a letter to Paley, also sent to Lohr, asserted that "I do not for a moment question your right to determine for yourselves what policies should be exercised by the Columbia Broadcasting System in the use of its facilities."

"I cannot, however, free myself of the impression," he continued, "that the attitude you have taken is affected and perhaps involuntarily controlled by the political party in power which regulates the issuance of your licenses."

Fletcher said he believed that Columbia's policy "not to sell time for political broadcasts until after the regular party conventions next summer" would "leave in the minds of the American public the distinct impression that you are either exercising an unwarranted degree of censorship or that you fear punitive action by the Federal Communications Commission."

Pointing out that both broadcasting systems "cleared the air of all programs on the nights of January 3 and January 8 for the President, so that 180 stations were made available for what were in large part political talks of a candidate," Fletcher contended that "the services of the great radio chains should be as nonpartisan and free from governmental domination as are great news services like the A. P., U. P., International News, etc., and give both sides an absolutely equal break."

"Now as to the refusal of both the major broadcasting systems to rent or lease us time on their networks prior to the national conventions," Mr. Fletcher continued. "It is precisely because the Republican national committee desires to bring home to the voters the effect of the Administration's aims and policies and the vital issues affecting the very foundations of constitutional government before the heat and fury of the political campaign that we have planned to take advantage now of modern radio technique to convey our message.

"Your letter speaks of objections to the use of dramatic sketches in political programs. So long as these are truly represented—as they would be—by the announcer as dramatic sketches, as is done in the presentation of commercial programs. I fail to see any legitimate reason for your refusing them, nor have we any intention of cluttering up or overcrowding your facilities.

"The statement in your letter that 'appeal to the electorate should be intellectual, and not based on emotion, passion or prejudice,' seems almost funny in the light of the impassioned appeal to class prejudice made by the President in his Congressional broadcast on January 3. To my mind the use of what you are pleased to call your 'editorial judgment' amounts in practice to censorship."

Paley Explains.

Fletcher's letter was in reply to letters from the two broadcasting executives, setting forth the policies and viewpoints of their companies. Lohr's letter was comparatively brief. Paley, however, undertook to explain and justify at some length Columbia's attitude.

Paley in discussing his refusal to sell the Republicans time for their dramatic skits asserted that "we never sell time except for use in conformance with our general program policies, since responsibility for the structure of broadcasting lies with us, rather than with those who buy from us."

"Before we decided that we would not allow political parties to present the issues in dramatized form," he said, "we considered this question wholly in the light of the public service we might render or the public disservice we might do. We actually listened to one of these dramatizations in audition with great care before we reached our decision.

"Not a single person in this organization among the numerous ones with whom we discussed it dissented from the view that such dramatizations by the political parties should not go on the air through the Columbia Broadcasting System."

In discussing the decisions not to sell the Republicans any time prior to the convention, and not then to sell them time for dramatic skits, Paley expressed to Fletcher the policies of the company as follows:

"With regard to these particular decisions," Paley wrote, "let me tell you, first of all, that it is our fixed policy not to sell time for propaganda of any sort. When we think that the public is sufficiently interested in a subject suitable for discussion over the air so that propagandists of opposing sides should be heard, we allot the time without charge.

"Our decision to forego the immense revenues which could be had from the sale of time for propaganda was based on two main grounds:

"1. We felt that the exercise of the wisest editorial judgment we are able to bring to bear, rather than the ability of others to pay, should govern decisions as to what subjects should be discussed and what subjects lacked sufficient public interest in proportion to other things to merit discussion and, further, that such editorial judgment should govern the amount of time devoted to such discussion in a given case.

"2. We have an absolute conviction that the air would be misused were such discussion confined to those causes or advocates of causes who were able to pay and we would very quickly build up an undemocratic and un-American situation in which the air belonged to those with money. This would result in some things not being heard at all and in one side of others being preponderantly presented.

Difficult to Define.

"I realize that it is difficult to define precisely what we mean by propaganda; in fact, this company has tried as far as possible to keep away from rigid definitions and arbitrary decisions, and to rely upon commonsense and the editorial judgment of those who operate it.

"What I mean in a general way, however, is this:

"We would not, for example, sell time to the public utilities holding companies to agitate against proposed legislation restricting or regulating their operations. We would and did give them time in which to argue against such proposed legislation, just as we gave the advocates time to argue in favor of such legislation.

"On the other hand, if the public utilities wanted to buy time to advertise their goods and services—that is, to promote the use of gas and electricity—we would unhesitatingly sell them available time for such use. To illustrate further, we sell time to commercial sponsors for the promotion of the sale of their goods or services or the creation of institutional good will, but we do not allow them to use such bought time to agitate for high or low tariffs, changes in Nation or city or State tax structures, or other things of that nature.

To Withhold Sale.

"It is in pursuance of this general policy, with regard to propaganda that we have decided that we will not now sell to the Republican Party, the Democratic Party, or any other political organization, until after the conventions next summer. It is our intention to continue to devote as much time as seems to us to constitute good broadcasting to the use of political speakers without charge.

"I hope I have made clear to you why we will not sell you time at present, and now let me explain our reason for intending to sell it to you, if you wish to buy it, after the conventions. When the candidates are actually nominated, and the parties are campaigning for votes we recognize that a good deal of broadcasting time should, in the public interest, be devoted to political discussion. While we are wholly in accord with the wish of the parties to use such an amount of time—and to use it on a more or less regular basis—we cannot economically afford to allow such use without pay.

"We shall, therefore, as in past years, treat such broadcasting as commercial and charge our regular rates, selling you available time in such amounts as you desire to buy, provided, of course, your requirements are not so great as in our judgment to upset our program structure."

Auto-Bus Crash Kills 2, Hurts 1 Near Marlboro

Author, Woman Cousin Thrown to Death; Lost Sign Blamed.

Edwin L. Mattern, 66, author and retired attorney of Washington, Pittsburgh and Erie, Pa., and his second cousin, Katherine Grace Snyder, 50, of New York, were killed yesterday in a bus-auto collision on the Crain highway, for which removal of a "stop" sign was held indirectly responsible.

The third passenger in the Mattern car, the attorney's wife, Mrs. Gertrude Lewis Mattern, 63, was critically injured. She is at Casualty Hospital, where slight hope is held for her recovery.

The accident occurred at the intersection of the Crain highway and Central avenue, about 7 miles from Marlboro, Md. Mattern and Miss Snyder were instantly killed in the collision between their car and a Peninsula Lines bus bound for Baltimore from Richmond.

Identified by Clerk.

At first unidetnified, Miss Snyder's body, which was removed with that of Mattern to the Ritchie funeral home at Marlboro, was recognized by G. H. Parrish, a clerk at the Lafayette Hotel, where she had registered on January 6 from New York.

The Mattern car, Annapolis-bound on Central avenue, was about half-way across the Crain highway when struck by the bus. Claude W. Blythe, 32, of Franklin, Va., the driver, said he did not see the machine until he was within 25 feet of it.

Turns Several Times.

An embankment on the right cuts off vision of traffic northbound on the highway, a factor held at least partly responsible for the fatal crash.

Another contributing cause, according to police, was the fact that the "stop" sign which should have warned the Mattern car was demolished by an autoist a few days before Christmas. For a week or so it lay on the ground, according to Paul Kidwell, operator of an oil station at the dangerous intersection, and then it was removed by someone.

Rammed amidship by the bus, the heavy coach in which the three were riding turned over several times and landed on its top in a ditch. Mattern and Miss Snyder were hurled to the ground, their necks broken. Mrs. Mattern was extricated from the wreckage by the Bladensburg rescue squad, which took her to Casualty Hospital.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie and William Gray and John Dent, Prince Georges County policemen, investigated the accident. Blythe was released under $1,000 bond to appear at the inquest, Upper Marlboro, at 8 p. m. Friday before Acting Coroner Horace J. Taylor. Joe Fanville, bus porter, of Richmond, was freed under $200 bond as a State witness.

Papers found in the brief case indicated Mattern was en route to Annapolis to obtain genealogical data on his family. This was borne out later by Dr. William H. Syme, retired physician, in whose Calvert street home the Matterns had an apartment.

The couple had spent the last four winters in Washington, coming here from their home at Erie, Pa. Dr. Syme said Mattern had been engaged in genealogical research since he and his wife came here last November.

Robert J. Mattern, Mayor of Collingswood, N. J., arrived in the Capital last night from Philadelphia to take charge of the bodies and make funeral arrangements for his brother.

Born in Huntingdon, Pa., August 10, 1869, Mattern became a reporter on the Brooklyn Eagle after completing his education. Later he was assistant telegraph editor of the Pittsburgh Post. In 1891 he began the study of law and received the degree of LL. B. from New York University in 1894.

He practiced law in Pittsburgh until 1926, when he retired to devote full time to writing. He was a prominent ritualist for Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, revising the rituals in 1916, and again in 1922. Mattern married Gertrude Lewis in Pittsburgh in 1901.

He was a member of the University, Cosmos and Arts clubs here.

5-Year Term Imposed For Extortion Attempt

Kansas City, Jan. 13 (AP).—Edward E. (Jack) Deegan, 27, was sentenced to five years in State prison today upon his plea of guilty to attempting to extort $3,000 from T. J. Pendergast, Kansas City Democratic leader.

Deegan was arrested Saturday night. He admitted he had sent three letters threatening Pendergast's life.

He said he needed the money to pay debts and care for his wife, who, he said, is an expectant mother.

$25,000 Ransom Paid, More Promised Gang

Havana, Jan. 13 (AP).—A small son of Paulino Gorostiza was kidnaped today and held for $50,000 ransom, half of which has been paid.

The kidnapers threatened to kill the youth unless $50,000 was paid within one hour. The family delivered $25,000 within the time limit and agreed to pay the balance tonight, it was disclosed.

Police hoped to trap the kidnapers when they received the second payment, but declined to discuss the case.

Gorostiza is one of the owners of a large mirror factory here.

Proposal to Ban Parking Starts Committee Row

Business Representatives to Attack Plan to Bar Downtown Area.

Proposals that parking of vehicles be prohibited in the downtown area and that a general street widening program be undertaken precipitated a fight at a meeting of the Commissioners' traffic committee of 13 yesterday in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Representatives of business concerns on the committee lined up against the parking ban. They favored widening of streets as a measure which would permit what they said was necessary parking and at the same time provide more space for traffic.

Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, said that if any street widening program were launched it should be limited to so-called arterial highways on which parking of vehicles should be forbidden.

Traffic congestion and downtown parking was blamed by officers of the Capital Traction Co. for almost all the ills of the mass transportation system at recent hearings before the Public Utilities Commission.

The downtown parking ban proposed at the meeting of the committee yesterday did not embody the suggested construction of self-supporting municipal parking garages. William A. Roberts, people's counsel, and others have urged such garages as a part of any move to ban parking.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, was named chairman of a sub-committee to draft a complete program for submission to another meeting of the full committee. Commissioner Hazen said he would call a meeting as soon as the report is ready.

Illinois Family Is Felled by Gas; Plot Suspected

Doctor Finds Footprints, Thinks Fumes Came Through Keyhole.

By the Associated Press.

Joliet, Ill., Jan. 13.—Will County authorities admitted themselves mystified tonight by what was described to them as an apparent plot to kill by poison gas the members of the Leonard Wetzel family.

Neither motive nor the exact manner of the attack had been established, although Dr. Janette Holt, of New Lenox, who treated the family, said they had suffered from some form of poisoning. It presumably was introduced into their farm home last night through a keyhole, she added. The only tangible clews were footprints outside the small house.

All the family and Stella Stevens, a neighbor, were in the farm house when effects of the noxious fumes first were noticed. They were reported recovered late today. A few seconds longer exposure to the poisonous atmosphere would have brought death to all, Sheriff Michael Breen was told.

The family was seated in the room of Dorothy, the 16-year-old daughter, Wetzel said, when suddenly another daughter, Virginia, 6, toppled to the floor.

"Then Stella fell off her chair," Wetzel said. "Dorothy slumped down on the couch. Maxine (another daughter) was next. I jumped up and noticed I was wobbly."

Staggering to the windows, Wetzel said he managed to open them and a door, clearing the air, and then rushed the unconscious girls to the home of Dr. Holt.

Although carbon monoxide gas possibly created by a small coal burning stove was first suspected of causing their illness, Dr. Holt insisted that some other form of poison gas was responsible.

Deputies said there was no apparent connection with the attack and recent trouble in this section over milk business as Wetzel had only sold his milk locally.

'Son Dead, No Sun Shines,' Says Policeman's Poem for Speeder

The other side of traffic tragedy, the story of a "hard-boiled cop," was told to speeders who appeared before Judge Gus A. Schuldt in Traffic Court yesterday.

The courtroom was crowded when Frederick Carmack, 18, of 3019 Garrison street northwest, was called on a speeding charge. The policeman testified Carmack was driving 38 miles an hour.

"You were taking a terrible chance, driving at that speed," the judge said. "Suppose a child had stepped into the path of your car—you would not have been able to stop. Here is a poem, written by the father of a small boy killed by a speeder. Read it and think about it the next time you are tempted to speed."

Judge Schuldt then read the poem entitled "Jackie," which was submitted by Private Clark Coleman, a motorcycle policeman at the Eighth Precinct:

You think I am a hard-boiled copper
For writing a man at forty-three.
Well, perhaps I'm thinking of Jackie
And all that the lad meant to me.

How's that? Tell you all about it?
Well, stranger, the boy was my son.
God, what I'd give to hear "Daddy"
Once more when the day's work is done.

The driver was just in a hurry;
He didn't intend any harm—
But the sun and stars quit shining
When I picked up my boy's lifeless form.

Well, Mister, I'll not give you a ticket—
I don't want to "pinch" anyone;
But I'd ride this motor through hell
To protect another man's son.

Motorist-Pedestrian Battle Studied by Cruising Reporter

Conflict Which Took 74 Lives Last Year Remains Permanent Factor in Ever-Changing Scene of City's Traffic, Post Observer Finds.

(Editor's note: In an effort to determine the answer to Washington's present traffic problem, with its mounting toll of accidents, The Post has assigned a reporter to learn the reason behind violations of traffic regulations. A reporter, accompanied by an official of the Police Traffic Division, is cruising in a police car. Motorists who violate the law are stopped. Their side of the story is recorded. It is The Post's desire merely to learn "the reason why" of violations. This is the fourth in a series of stories.)

By Howard F. Wentworth.

From our seat beside the driver of a cruising police car, we look ahead into the tangled maze of vehicles—autos, buses, taxis, street cars, bicycles—and watch the city's everchanging traffic scene.

Now there is a jam . . . now the streets are clear, hardly a car in sight. Now there is a flagrant violation . . . now a minor one . . . now everyone is obeying regulations. Suddenly a machine swerves . . . an accident is missed by inches. Now they all stop, giving the right-of-way . . . willingly and even courteously.

But in all this, there is one scene which never changes. The ever-present battle—motorist vs. pedestrian. Who is at fault? Why were 74 pedestrians killed in traffic last year? The answer is hard. And maybe there isn't an answer. But opinions are plentiful—on both sides.

Crosses in Traffic.

As we moved slowly through rush-hour traffic along downtown F street yesterday, a woman stepped from the curb midway between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. With her was a child. The woman held tightly to the youngster's hand. Heavy traffic was flowing in both directions, but they managed to cross the street.

Lieut. Frank Varney, of the police traffic division, our driver, stopped the cruiser and approached the woman. He asked:

"Why did you cross the street in the center of the block? Why didn't you go to the corner and wait for the light to change so you could cross safely with your child?" (He assured her, however, that what she was doing was not in violation of a regulation—there are no regulations governing pedestrians.)

The woman smiled.

Felt Safer.

"I'll be glad to tell you why I did it," she said. "I crossed where I did because I feel safer—I can see what is coming. When I cross at an intersection, automobiles whiz around the corner. You can't see them coming. Sometimes they let you pass and sometimes they don't. I feel that it is less dangerous to cross in the middle of the block—then you can look both ways and see what is coming."

We thanked the woman for her explanation and then sought a motorist for his version. In brief, it was:

"The pedestrians don't give us a chance. They step off the curb without looking. They walk directly into a line of traffic. The driver must be alert to see them." (He added hastily that the driver should always be alert—for anything.) And then this motorist continued:

"If the pedestrian is crossing on the proper signal light, well and good. The average driver will give him the right of way. But what about the pedestrian who yells 'Where do ya think yer going?' when he is almost knocked down while crossing between intersections? He is the one who should be governed by laws—not us."

Pushed Through.

And so it went. A short time later we saw a driver push his way through a crowded intersection. We stopped him and asked "Why?"

"They (the pedestrians) wouldn't let me past," he said. "I'm sorry; I didn't intend to hurt anyone." He said he knew that pedestrians have the right of way at uncontrolled crossings and promised to be "more careful."

Our cruising next led us north along North Capitol street. At New York avenue northwest we were stopped by a red signal light. This is a triple intersection—North Capitol street, New York avenue and N street.

On N street only one-way traffic is permitted, east. As we waited for the light to change, a truck, facing east on N street, attempted to make a "U" turn. This brought him into the intersection against one-way traffic.

But he had difficulty in making the turn. As a result, he was forced to drive over the curb and almost onto the sidewalk. Lieut Varney hailed him. And again the question was asked: "Why?"

Didn't Realize It.

"I didn't realize I was doing anything wrong," the driver replied. (Yet he admitted seeing other cars parked along N street, all facing east. And he admitted driving over the curb.)

The driver said he was from Alexandria, Va., and had only recently obtained a job in Washington. He said he had been driving an automobile for several years.

"Do you know how many persons were killed on Washington streets by negligent drivers last year?" Lieut. Varney asked.

"No—no, I'm afraid I don't," was the answer. And then the driver said he had heard it was "quite a few."

A little later, on Bladensburg road northeast, a huge, interstate truck sped past a "caution" light at Queens Chapel road. (Scene of many accidents and the death of a policeman.) The driver was from North Carolina. He was coming from Philadelphia. He told Lieut. Varney that he had not slept since Saturday "because there wasn't time." The light, he said, changed before he saw it.

Today, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer will ride with us. We plan to ask questions of a particularly vicious type of lawbreaker—the driver who speeds from alley entrances.

Shipstead Urges More Playgrounds

Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, yesterday told a meeting of the AAA Women's Safety Campaign at the Sulgrave Club that additional playgrounds would be a means of saving children from traffic dangers.

"I have never seen such poor provisions for neighborhood playgrounds and organized play as here in Washington," the Senator declared. "The lack of playgrounds shows lack of foresight. We have beautiful parks and beautiful golf courses at the outside limits of the city, but many communities within the District have no playground facilities."

Advantages of compulsory inspection of motor vehicles were described by Oscar Coolican, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association. Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman outlined his bill for a series of magistrates courts here. A report on play spaces was made by Capt. Rhoda Millikan, chairman of the playgrounds and playyords committee.

Art Treasures Sold by Morgan To Guard Heirs

'Want Estate Manageable After I Am Gone,' Reporters Told.

By the Associated Press.

John Pierpont Morgan, the banker, yesterday described sales of treasures from his vast art collections as an attempt "to protect my heirs from buying them back from the Government" after he dies.

One sale alone—that of six paintings by world famous artists—netted Morgan a reported $1,500,000.

The financier smiled a little quizzically as he pulled his flannel muffler about his throat at the end of a day's session before the Senate's munitions investigating committee, and said:

"Manageable Is Liquid."

"You know, I'm 65. I won't last so much longer. I want by estate manageable after I'm gone. So I sold some of my are possessions."

He further explained the word "manageable" by saying that to him it was synonymous with "liquid."

During the year Morgan also placed for sale his famous collection of miniatures on ivory which included works by Holbein, Clouet, Fragonard and Augstin. There were 900 pieces in the collection which was auctioned at a sale in London.

He also sold his "day yacht," the "Navette," which he was accustomed to use in commuting from his Glen Cove estate on Long Island to his office. Also he put on the market two pieces of property along the ong Island Gold Coast.

N. Y. Owns Library.

As he struggled into his overcoat surrounded by a curious and silent crowd, he raised his heavy, white eyebrows humorously at the suggestion he place a value on the art treasures left to him.

"How can anyone say what an art collection is worth?" he parried.

He added that those now housed in the Pierpont Morgan library adjoining his New York town house "are out of my hands," adding: "They belong to the library which is managed by a board of trustees."

A member of his legal staff interpolated with, "the art objects in the library are now the property of the City of New York, and the library is run on a fund provided by an endowment made by Mr. Morgan."

Jury Studies Charge Against Stock Seller

The District Grand Jury yesterday began consideration of a charge against Michael Klachko, promoter, that he sold stock with a par value of $505 to Frank J. Gammacke, of Hagerstown, Md., with the alleged representation that he was selling Treasury stock in a brewing company. Police said the securities did not represent Treasury stock.

Klachko was arrested in New York and was released on bond pending extradition to the District. Meantime, during his release, he returned here, and was arrested. He is being reld in the District Jail pending the posting of a $2,000 bond. The grand jury may make a report on its investigation late this week.

Police Spread Dragnet In Effort to Find 'Toots'

"Toots" was the object of an extensive police search yesterday.

"Toots," a 6-month-old wire-haired fox terrier, strayed from his home at the Colombia Legation, 2306 Massachusetts avenue northwest, Sunday night.

Senor Miguel Pumarijo, Minister from Colombia, asked the police to try to locate his pet. He said the dog has black spots on its body and answers to the name of "Toots."

Calls County's Judges Crooks.

From a cell where he awaited the examination by Dr. Francis J. Gerty, of the Psychopathic Hospital, Koegh, 59-year-old former owner of extensive real estate, readily discussed his motives.

"Every judge and office holder in the county is a crook," he declared. "Something drastic had to be done to awaken the people. I intended to shoot the judge, but I was excited. I liked Kinney, but had to sacrifice him to the cause."

Picturing himself as martyr, he told authorities he had first thought of murder as a means of centering attention on receiverships in 1931.

The court hearing today involved Keogh's motion to vacate a judgment against him granted to the New England Life Insurance Co. The firm previously had foreclosed a $250,000 mortgage on some Michigan avenue property owned by Keogh. When the motion was denied, Keogh, who had been pleading his case, although not a lawyer, went berserk.

Other Courts Guarded.

The shooting alarmed officials. Mayor Kelly urged that everyone entering court rooms be searched and extra bailiffs were sent to other courts.

Kinney, who served as a major in the Army from 1905 to 1912, was a widely known real estate lawyer. His widow and a daughter are in New Mexico. A son is studying law in Washington.

Keogh, who has a summer home at Harwick Port, Mass., inherited extensive property from his father in 1899.

His psychopathic examination was hastened after he remarked:

"The bailiff struck me with a mallet, but didn't say, 'Hear ye, hear ye.'"

The psychiatrist found that Keogh was suffering from senility and a paranoiac condition.

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—The will of John Gilbert, screen actor who died Thursday of heart disease, was filed for probate today. He leaves the bulk of the estate to Virginia Bruce, his fourth wife.

No estimate was made as to the value of the property, which unofficially has been reported to run as high as $500,000.

In excess of $53,000 was bequeathed to friends.

Leatrice Joy Gilbert, 9, daughter of Gilbert by his second wife, Leatrice Joy, will receive $10,000.

Gilbert directed that his executors spend $150,000 to purchase six annuities of $25,000 in favor of Miss Bruce.

The will was dated October 7, 1932, before the birth of a daughter to Gilbert and Miss Bruce. The will provides that in event of Miss Bruce's death, her share goes to any children of Gilbert by her.

T.R. Grandson Free Of Air-Gun Charge

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 13 (AP).—Indictments charging Cornelius Van Schaak Roosevelt, 20, grandson of former President Theodore Roosevelt, and a college classmate with assault with dangerous weapons were quashed today by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop.

In nolle prossing the indictments of young Roosevelt and Peter de Florez, 21, of Pomfret, Conn., both sophomores at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Bishop said he believed "further prosecution would be a travesty on justice."

The youths were arrested in their room at an exclusive club after they had peppered two policemen and a newspaperman with pellets from powerful air pistols.

They were indicted last week by a grand jury on charges punishable by maximum prison sentences of ten years.

"I felt it would be a shame to give these boys any kind of a criminal record for a college prank wherein no one suffered any injury," Bishop said.

F. C. C. Invites Investigation, Chairman Says

Prall Declares Board Has Done Much to Rid Radio of the Objectionable.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Anning S. Prall said last night he would "welcome" a Congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission.

Discussing demands of Chairman Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, of the House Labor Committee, for such an inquiry, Prall said his personal view was that it might serve to "clarify the whole situation."

The commission voted last week to investigate itself after the Department of Justice had reported rumors of "improper influence" were baseless.

Vice Chairman Irvin Stewart, who heads the F. C. C. investigation, declined yesterday to say what course it might take.

In a radio address last night Prall said the commission had made much progress in ridding the air of radio programs "advertisting internal medicines or bordering on the improper."

"The F. C. C. will not stop," he continued, until all programs "broadcast with the end in view of fooling or defrauding a gullible public are off the air."

Prall said that facsimile transmission for "still pictures by air" now "is an accomplished fact."

"It is but a short step to the transmission and reproduction in the home of daily newspapers and picture features," he continued, "but the time, economically, apparently is not right."

"With all," he added, "I would hazard the assertion that five years from now you won't be able to recognize your radio receiver.

"Instead of receiving sound alone, it probably will be fitted * * * for television and facsimile."

Touching on President Roosevelt's radio addresses, Prall declared: "The President of the United States has demonstrated time and again the usefulness of modern radio in bringing to the electorate the story of history in the making."

Young Mussolini was not injured. He landed his bomber safely, although the shell tore off his machine-gun support and damaged other parts of the cockpit.

The incident occurred during the last bombardment of an Ethiopian observation point on Mount Aradam, southwest of Makale, while the aviator was flying low, the dispatches said.

State Refuses Criminal Action in Sterilization

San Francisco, Jan. 13 (AP).—District Attorney Matthew Brady announced definitely today that his office would not initiate criminal proceedings against those responsible for the sterilization operation performed on Ann Cooper Hewitt, 21-year-old heiress.

Miss Hewitt, who has sued her socially prominent mother and two physicians for $500,000, previously declined to sign a mayhem complaint. Brady had said he would prosecute if she signed.

Brady declared he could see no reason for questioning Miss Hewitt, who charged that her mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt McCarter, duped her into the operation in a plot to deprive her of her inheritance.

Richard Hauptmann." That would get around the objection to taking Hauptmann out of the death house and still lay the basis for an appeal to the Supreme Court.

Hauptmann was grasping at straws. Mrs. Hauptmann visited him and came out of the death house as a courier for her husband, carrying an appeal to the world.

"I will be glad to see anyone anytime," she quoted him as saying. "I will answer any questions or anything they might want to know or anything that I have neglected to say. I am willing to have the mechanical lie detector tried on me or to take any truth serum they want to give me."

So busy were lawyers that they had no time to visit Hauptmann today and he had to gather what crumbs of information he got from his wife. After she left the death house there was no other interruption and Hauptmann went back to reading the transcript of his Flemington trial in an attempt to find some stray paragraph or phrase that would save his life.

Five States United In Drive on Crime

Tulsa, Okla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Crime fighters of five States today indorsed a proposed interstate compact to combat lawlessness in the Southwest.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Division of Investigation, joined with State officers in approving the compact of uniform laws, proposed by Gov. E. W. Marland of Oklahoma at a crime conference here.

The compact would have the effect of abolishing State boundaries, a legal hindrance to fugitive pursuits. It was approved by representatives of Texas, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas.

Gov. Marland said another meeting would be held to complete the plan.

Leaders Differ On Reasons for Business Rise

Harriman and Willkie Are Among Several Who Assign Causes.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—A symposium conducted by the Wharton Review of Finance and Commerce at the University of Pennsylvania showed today that prominent men in various fields agreed there had been an upward trend in business in the last year, but they differed in beliefs as to causes. Contributions to the symposium included:

Wendell L. Willkie, president, Commonwealth & Southern Corporation: "I account for it (improvement) because of the operation of the natural economic forces of recovery which were accelerated by the unanimous decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Schechter poultry, or NRA case, * * * and the far-reaching implications this decision had on other experimental 'new social order' legislation."

E. R. Harriman, of Brown Brothers, Harriman & Co., investment bankers: "Incomes were incremented by receipts from a variety of governmental agencies possessions had worn out during the recent past and had to be replaced, and people had a will to improve, and believed their money was in jeopardy through inflation or devaluation so they were axious to exchange it for goods."

Ernest E. Calkins, advertising man: "Signs and portents, and they are numerous, are camouflaged by enemies of the New Deal, unwilling on the eve of election that credit should accrue to the Administration, but they cannot wholly conceal the fact that we are better off than a year ago."

W. W. Cumberland, of Wellington & Co., brokers: "Improvement due to inherent recuperative powers of our economy rather than to artificial aid from Government agencies or otherwise."

John Spargo, author: "The tremendous expenditures of the Federal Government have helped. The Supreme Court, by several decisions declaring the major policies of the Administration to be unconstitutional, has given an enormous impetus to the psychological forces making for progress."

Dember Simpkins, Industrial Investors Research Bureau: "A normal recovery in the United States has been held back by lack of confidence resulting from monetary and economic experimentation and the New Deal threat to capital and profit."

Brazil Envoy Is Sent To Get Trade Treaties

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 13 (AP).—Brazil, launching a reciprocal trade policy, will send Sebastiao Sampaio, chief of the commercial section of the foreign office, to Europe to negotiate with 14 countries, it was announced today. Sampaio, former consul general in New York, will sail February 1.

North American business leaders here were divided on the significance of the tour. Some said it would benefit trade with the United States, but others expressed the view it might endanger the existing treaty with Washington. Germany and Great Britain are said to be increasing their sales of automobiles, steel and heavy industrial products here.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS.

Morgan Denies Pressure

German affair or anything else; it is a pro-American affair, and that only.

Senator Vandeberg (Republican), Michigan, asked Morgan if it was a pro-American affair because it favored American business, Morgan replied in the affirmative.

Vandenberg Asks About Trade.

Vandenberg: "Mr. Morgan, is it a healthy thing for a country to have an export trade booming on the basis of war orders that necessarily must be temporary? Is it not a direct invitation to inflation, which must be followed by a disastrous deflation?"

Morgan: "I do not think that you can look ahead that way at the time and say that."

Vandenberg: "Let us admit that you cannot look ahead at the time. Let us just look at it abstractly; because, after all, that is the function of the inquiry, as I see it. Would you not now say that when you are encouraging a war export trade of this nature you are encouraging an inflationary trade which must come to an end and which therefore must be followed by a very disastrous deflation?"

Morgan: "No; I think you are overstating it, Senator."

Vandenberg: "To what extent would you go in stating it?"

Morgan: "I should say that to the extent that you have real exports and are paid real money for them, or advanced real money for them—it is the same thing—that you do not have an inflationary situation at all."

Vandenburg: "You think necessarily war trade is healthy?"

Thinks Exports Helped U. S.

Morgan: "I think the increase of exports helped this country. I do not think it led us into war. I have always said that. A man will not decline an order that he is able to fill because later on he may have difficulty in selling all his products. He will take what he can get at the time, inevitably."

Vandenberg asked whether increase in production of all kinds in this country was not brought about by war demands and withdrawal of production abroad.

Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner, replied:

"Oh, certainly. No question about that. But what would you have the country do, may I ask? Would you have the farmer who grows the wheat and the cotton grower say, 'No, I will not fill orders at this time for cotton or for wheat?' Would you have the copper people say, 'No, we will not fill orders for copper for fear that we might get a little out of gear?'"

"I am not quarreling with the viewpoint that you had at the time," Vandenberg replied. "You are guilty of nothing that all the rest of us were not guilty of in respect to our enthusiasm for war trade."

Repercussions From Other Phases.

Asked by Vandenberg whether he felt that any "unfortunate repercussions" resulted from war trade Lamont replied that he believed the repercussions came from other phases of the war.

Members of the committee smiled when Morgan explained that during war 'everybody lives on his capital, and they get the habit of living on their capital."

"It gives you a feeling of extraordinary comfort and wealth while you are doing it," he added. "Now we have come back to the fact that we have to live on our earnings, and it is not very comfortable."

Later Lamont told Vandenberg:

"I think that you and I are in accord if you mean that war is economically very bad for everybody whether they are fighting or not. It is a bad thing."

Vandenberg: "We agree on that; and then I add that I think that since that is our fundamental premise, we notoriously err if we try to stimulate our partnership in that liability."

Lamont: "If that means embargo, you would have to include food, would you not, because in the late war that amounted to such a large proportion, food and ordinary manufactures?"

Must Include Essentials.

Vandenberg: "You have to include whatever is essential to reach the net result I am talking about."

The committee went back for a time to its contention that an interview between William Gibbs McAdoo, then secretary of the Treasury, and H. P. Davison, then a Morgan partner, had something to do with the reversal of the Government's policy against war loans. Lamont produced newspaper clippings showing the interview occurred five days before J. P. Morgan & Co. had ceased supporting the British exchange market. He sought to show that Davison had not used the exchange break to influence McAdoo.

George Whitney, Morgan partner, insisted there had been no other interview.

Much stress was laid by the committee on the fact that the Anglo-French bonds at one time dropped to 90. Lamont pointed out that 4½ per cent Liberty bonds once dropped to 82.

The question of munition makers pushing foreign orders ahead of American orders was then taken up.

British Orders Speeded.

A letter to J. P. Morgan & Co. concerning Midvale Steel Co., a munitions manufacturnig concern, said:

"They assured me that they have given up the idea of turning over the old shop to United States Government shells and that they will put their whole capacity on the British order, except to the extent of four lathes which will be used for the United States."

On July 9, 1916, A. C. Dickey, president of Midvale, wrote to Morgan:

"In order to further production of English projectiles on orders which we have on hand, we have seriously delayed the completion of orders for American projectiles which were placed long prior to your orders and on which delayed orders we are paying panalties in serious amounts."

J. P. Morgan & Co. were purchasing agents for Britain and France.

J. P. Morgan, in London, cabled on March 15, 1916, to his New York office that "suggestions are being made here that the possibility of intervention by United States Government in Mexico will result in requirements for munitions of war by United States Government which will greatly delay fulfillment of contracts for British government and and allies. It has even been suggested United States Government is already placing orders with Remington-U. M. C. Co., Midvale, Eddystone Ammunition Co., and others, and that policy is being supported by German intriguers."

Lamont pointed out that in event of emergency the United States had the power to requisition munitions.

Miller's Ousting Suggested.

In taking up the discussion over approval of acceptances by the Federal Reserve Board, communications put in the record by the committee revealed a controversy within the board. It was revealed that Col. E. M. House had suggested to President Wilson that Adolph Miller "might be gotten out" as a member of the board. The plan failed. Miller still is a member.

In a letter to President Wilson, dated July 27, 1915, House said:

"It is unfortunate that any controversy has arisen among the members (of the Reserve Board), and, if I were in your place, I would caution McAdoo to go slow.

"Miller might be gotten out a little later and then, perhaps Warburg (Paul Warburg) would leave of his own volition. I am inclined to think he would."

One paragraph of Wilson's reply to this letter said:

"You are right about the Reserve Board imbroglio. And I think McAdoo thinks so too, now. Indeed, I think he raised the question about the action of certain members of the board about that meeting only to get a leverage for something bigger than the proper handling of acceptances and discounts."

The committee introduced evidence to show that the final result was financing by the Government of $100,000,000 of wartime trade while the United States still was a neutral.

In introducing the letter, the committee inadvertantly threw a new ray of light on President Wilson's attitude at the time, three months after the sinking of the Lusitania.

U. S. Held German Cat's Paws.

The first part of the letter discussed German Ambassador von Bernstorff and the German attitude. Wilson expressed the opinion that Germany was using the United States "in the role of cat's paw." The wartime President, referring to Von Bernstorff, said that he trusted "neither his accuracy nor his sincerity."

Senator Barbour (Republican), New Jersey, who was presiding at the moment, attempted to prevent publication of the letter, but later permitted reporters to retain copies. Barbour said the letter contained some "unfortunate language."

"Of course, our reply to Germany's overtures of conciliation will have to depend a great deal on the terms which are actually made," Wilson wrote.

"Bernstorff had only stated the principle which will be accepted, and you know I trust neither his accuracy nor his sincerity.

"Bernstorff is now demanding of us, in a note from his government, that we insist on Germany's getting our cotton for the use of the civilian population. Germany has at last come to her senses and is playing intelligent politics. She is seeking to put us into a position where we shall have to play to some extent the role of cat's paw for her in opening trade to her."

Search Pushed For Freighter's Drowned Crew

Six Bodies Recovered in Wreck That Killed 34 on Pacific Coast.

By the Associated Press.

Astoria, Oreg., Jan. 13.—While air and sea craft scanned the wind-whipped waters for bodies, emergency aid was ordered tonight for the families of the 34-man crew of the freighter Iowa, lost when seas battered the craft ashore.

Six bodies were given up by the ocean today. Surface craft and Coast Guard airplanes hovered over the wreck scene on treacherous Peacock Spit in a search for additional victims.

As if it were matchwood, the 410-foot freighter, owned by the States Steamship Co., was dashed onto the spit before dawn Sunday as it sailed out of the Columbia River toward the Pacific.

One frantic S O S crackled out before the freighter's radio was silenced by the storm. But Coast Guardsmen who responded to the alarm were kept away from the stricken ship by the pounding seas.

Three Victims Identified.

The Clatsop County coroner's office said five of the six bruised and torn bodies recovered today had been identified as:

Malon J. Perich, New Orleans; Charles Ogan, third assistant engineer, San Pedro, Calif.; August O. Myers, boatswain, Portland; Karl C. Bendixen, chief engineer, Bellevue, Wash.; James McHenry, Philadelphia, oiler.

In San Francisco, A. L. Schaefer, Pacific Coast area Red Cross manager, ordered emergency aid given Iowa crew members' families wherever they might be.

Crews of the Cape Disappointment life-saving station hoped the seas would moderate sufficiently to allow a trip to the vessel's hulk, protruding from the sands. They expressed belief some of the crew may have been trapped in the ship as she broke up.

"Our first concern is for the safety and welfare of our men, and the loss of any of them is felt deeply," said Kenneth D. Dawson, president of the States Lines.

Cause of Wreck Mystery.

"We, of course, have not learned the cause of the wreck, nor what influenced the judgment of the officers. * * * We have always urged caution * * * pointing out that it is unwise, unsafe and uneconomical to put to sea under adverse conditions."

Dawson described Capt. Edgar L. Yates, 68-year-old skipper of the ill-fated Iowa, as "a seasoned master."

"Capt. Yates and his crew never had a chance," said Capt. R. Stanley Patch, of the Coast Guard cutter Onondaga, which made a futile rescue dash.

"The seas were as rough as I've ever experienced. We had to use all our power to keep from going on the spit ourselves."

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13.—The first old-age pension checks for 350 Washington Countians will be placed in the mails tomorrow, Edgar C. Jones, chairman of the welfare board, announced. The first checks are going to those persons now on relief, to be followed by others as soon as their cases are investigated and approved.

Her deck boats battered in after making daring but futile effort to aid stricken freighter Iowa (below), the Coast Guard cutter Onondaga returned to Astoria, Oreg., last night. Huge waves and wind battered her two deck boats, tore the canvas covers to shreds and toppled a ventilator. Entire crew of 34 aboard the Iowa were lost in Pacific Coast gale.

Dr. Beard Asks Broader View Of Constitution

Dean of Historians Takes Issue With League at Club Dinner.

Dr. Charles A. Beard, dean of American historians, last night delivered a sharp, scholarly attack on those who would interpret the Constitution as a narrow legal document.

Reviewing the history of our fundamental law, he asserted its authors never had meant the Constitution should be narrowly construed.

"Only by broad and generous interpretation," he told some 70 Senators, Representatives, Government officials, lawyers, jurists and farm and labor leaders, "has it been possible for the Government of the United States to meet the exigencies of government, and for our people to settle their controversies under rules of law.

"Only once in nearly 150 years has it been deemed necessary to settle an issue by that old, old device—the sword. That was after the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Dred Scott case, declared, in effect, that the Government of the United States could not abolish slavery in its own territories. In 1862 a Republican Congress abolished it anyway."

With gentle irony the rugged, gray-haired political scietnist prodded the American Liberty League, saying:

"Since the Constitution supports very well a host of lawyers, including our 38 self-styled guardians of liberty, they, in turn, as a Harvard wit has said, feel especially bound to support the Constitution. And in supporting it, they emit hundreds of thousands of words annually and becloud the famous instrument with such a fog that the ordinary layman either cannot see it at all, or becomes lost in the Delphic mysteries created by juristic minds."

In concluding, Dr. Beard warned: "Only on the theory that this country never again will have to face a crisis can we assume that a government, stripped o fthe power to legislate in the general interest, will endure. To cherish such a theory is to fly in the face of the recorded experience of this Nation and all mankind."

Those present at the dinner, which was held at the Cosmos Club under the auspices of the Independent Legislative Bureau, included: Senators Adams, Black, Bulkley, Capper, Connally, Costigan, Schwellenbach, Thomas (Utah), Thomas (Oklahoma), Murray (Montana), Frazier and Pope; John L. Lewis, president, United Mine Workers; Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward McGrady; Justin Miller, assistant to the Attorney General; Thomas Elliott, counsel to the Social Security Board; Isador Lubin, director, Bureau of Labor tSatistics, and Morris L. Cocke, administrator, Rural Electrification Administration.

Animal Rescue League 'Solicitor' Called Fraud

Mrs. Merton E. Twokood, first vice president of the Washington Animal Rescue League, reported to police yesterday that a man selling candy in the name of the league was a fraud. "We have no one soliciting in any form for the league," she told police.

First complaint was registered with the Anima Rescue League on Saturday. It came from an office in the Munsey Building. Yesterday, a woman in the 400 block of Jefferson street northwest told league authorities a man phoned her and asked if she would buy candy to assist the league. Suspicious of the man's story, the woman called the league, which notified police.

Peru Volcano Erupts; Ashes Destroy Crops

Lima, Peru, Jan. 13 (AP).—A dispatch to the newspaper El Comercio today said the Ubinas Volcano is actively erupting ashes, which are destroying crops in the surrounding countryside.

Huge clouds of reddish smoke are visible nightly, the dispatch added, and inhabitants are in a panic, fearing a recurrence of previous destructive eruptions.

White House to Get Fire Hazard Survey

Inspection of the White House to detect and safeguard against fire hazards will be begun at 1:30 p. m. today under direction of the Federal Fire Council, of which Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, head of the Bureau of Standards, is chairman, and Dr. Simon H. Ingberg, fire-prevention engineer of the bureau, secretary.

The inspection today will be made by an assistant electrical inspector, an assistant building inspector, and Fire Marshal Calvin G. Lauber, of the District, and Federal officials and experts.

President Roosevelt recently expressed surprise that all Federal buildings were not under the supervision of District fire-prevention experts. His statement followed the recent fire in the new Postoffice Building.

The Federal Fire Council some time ago made on inspection of the Senate wing of the Capitol and the Senate Office Building, at the request of the Senate. Extensive repairs to the White House were recently completed.

Kentuckian Gets Life For Dynamite Murder

Harlan, Ky., Jan. 13 (AP).—Otis Noe, 26, one of six men indicted for the murder of Elmon Middleton, county attorney, who was blown to death last August with dynamite in his automobile, was sentenced to life imprisonment by a jury from Clark County here late today. A previous trial resulted in a hung jury.

Noe denied the Commonwealth's charges that he and the others conspired to kill the county attorney, who had waged war against operation of slot machines in Harlan County. Several sticks of dynamite exploded when Middleton started his car. Noe was the first to be tried.

Cripple Tried for Son's Death

said the prisoner went, and how he finally held the child over the jet until he was dead, Ashcraft broke.

Spent and wasted by disease, Ashcraft suddenly burst into tears, and his sobs penetrated all parts of the courtroom.

He wiped his eyes with a soiled handkerchief he carried, and sometimes tears fell on the gaudy yellow sweater, gay enough in hue for the golf course, which covered his flat, tubercular chest.

After the trial opened Assistant United States Attorney Samuel Beach stated briefly the Government's case, and then Icenhower addressed the venire.

Ashcraft's defense will be based on grounds of insanity, Icenhower told the jury. The prisoner, he said, has the mentality of a child 10½ years old—just about twice the age of the little son he killed on September 12, before he attempted to end his own life.

Counsel Blames Wife.

Contributing to the cause of murder, Icenhower pointed out, was the infidelity of Ashcraft's wife, Mrs. Josephine Ashcraft. The eternal triangle in a rooming house, with Ashcraft, helplessly looking on, added bitterness to madness, Icenhower said.

Specifically, the trial is expected to become a battle of alienists. The Government, in an effort to prove the twisted paper vendor sane, is expected to produce Dr. John E. Lind, head of the Department of Criminally Insane, at St. Elizabeths Hospital, and Dr. Joseph Gilbert, noted specialist.

The defense will produce Dr. Roger S. Cohen and Dr. Antoine Schneider, well-known alienists.

These defense physicians, as witnesses, will testify that Ashcraft was the victim of a progressive hardening of certain columns in the rear portion of the spinal cord, that the disease began in childhood and gradually brought complete paralysis to the lower part of Ashcraft's body.

Late yesterday afternoon Mrs. Ashcraft, a small, birdlike woman with a piping voice, was brought to the stand as a witness against her husband.

At first attorneys sparred as to whether she actually wanted to testify against her husband or not. However, after some confusion, the pale woman the defense accuses of driving Ashcraft to the crime, agreed to take the stand.

Under direct examination by Icenhower she told a story of marriage, more for convenience than love, by which her otherwise nameless daughter acquired Ashcraft's protection. That was back in 1928, she said, and she and Ashcraft were married and at first quite contented.

But, she told Icenhower and the jury, Ashcraft's condition grew continually worse. He gave up a job vending pencils, and was ill. Later they went on relief, and she received $21 every two weeks for their room rent. Frequently her husband went to the hospital, where he was treated.

Mrs. Ashcraft broke under a sudden storm of emotion when she was forced to tell of the morning she returned to her room, last September, after Ashcraft had killed little David.

Wife Tells of Discovery.

"We had quarreled the night before," she said in a shrill voice that sometimes was audible and sometimes sank almost into a whisper.

"I came to the house. Then I knocked on the door and I heard someone inside. It seemed an awful long time, for the door was locked. Pretty soon my husband opened it.

"'I've come to take David to school,' I said.

"'You've come too late,' he answered me. 'David's dead.'"

Here Mrs. Ashcraft wept softly and bowed here head.

Ashcraft sat in his wheel chair all the while, occasionally looking at his wife, then dropping his eyes. His back was to the courtroom windows, and outside school children shouted. The shouts were sometimes faintly audible.

Shortly after 4 p. m. court adjourned until today. Mrs. Ashcraft, a shy figure in black melted into the crowds, and jail officials wheeled the prisoner to a waiting automobile, where he was whisked back to jail.

Grayson Bond Forfeited will continue. The fact is that the presence of pulsus alternans alone is clearly and universally recognized in medicine as an omen of grave significance. Furthermore, this phenomenon of pulsus alternans has appeared since our last examination."

$2,000 Bond Forfeited.

Following forfeiture of Grayson's $2,000 bond, Justice O'Donoghue issued the warrant for his arrest. The usual procedure is for the warrant to be forwarded to the United States Attorney at Roanoke, Va., from whence it will be sent to Charlottesville for service.

In the event Grayson is taken into custody, he will be brought to Washington in an ambulance. Meantime, his attorneys may seek his release in Virginia on a writ of habeas corpus, which will serve to test the indictment.

Grayson is charged with having informed Stunz when bank examiners were to go to the bank for their periodical examination of the books. In this way, it was said, Stunz was able to conceal huge shortages, amounting to over $1,500,000. The second charge is that he conspired with Stunz to embezzle $4,000 from the bank, which was closed when the bank examiners, early in 1933, refused to permit it to reopen.

Grayson will go to Washington if a warrant is served, Dr. James C. Flippin, dean of the University of Virginia Medical School, and Grayson's personal physician, told the Associated Press at Charlottesville last night.

Dr. Flippin insisted, however, that his patient was in no condition to leave the hospital.

"However," he said, "if a warrant for Mr. Grayson's arrest is served that will settle the matter—— he will leave the hospital."

A representative of The Post called at the hospital yesterday afternoon to see Grayson. He was refused admittance to his room and Dr. Gregory Magruder, assistant resident physician, declined to comment on the patient's condition.

Following his indictment more than two years ago, Grayson returned to his country home, Seminole Lodge, near Red Hill, 8 miles south of Charlottesville, where he was said to be suffering from a serious heart ailment.

About six weeks ago, accompanied by Dr. Josiah Thornley, a leading New York physician, the former Treasury Department official was removed from his suburban home to the University Hospital. His condition was reported to be such that his physicians would not even permit his attorneys to confer with him regarding his defense.

For several years Grayson was a bookkeeper for a number of Charlottesville merchants, and at one time was employed in a Charlottesville bank, later going to Washington to accept a position in the Treasury Department.

KiwanisHear 7,500 to Attend June Gathering

Capital District Officers Installed, Talks Made at Session Here.

Kiwanis officials expect approximately 7,500 men and women to attend the twentieth annual Kiwanis international convention held here June 21 to 25, Edwin F. Hill, international trustee, told the mid-winter conference of the Capital district, in session here yesterday.

Hill stressed the importance of the forthcoming convention, which will attract Kiwanians from all sections of the United States and Canada. Convention sessions will be held in Constitution Hall.

The Capital district, at its one-day session yesterday, installed Dr. Lonsdale J. Roper, of Portsmouth, Va., as its governor. Other officials inducted into office included Asa W. Howard, Roanoke, Va., secretary-treasurer; Edgar C. Jones, Hagerstown, Md.; H. Milton Jones, Seaford, Del., and James M. Lea, Danville, Va., H. W. Eugene Hyatt, Norton, Va.; J. Walton Hall, Ashland, Va., and John M. Biedler, Harrisonburg, Va., as lieutenant governors.

Installation was under the direction of Hill C. Walter Cole, of Towson Md., immediate past district governor.

The morning session was held in the garden of the Mayflower Hotel. Following the installation of officers, Dr. Roper delivered his message as new governor of the Capital district.

Urging co-operation in all enterprises by the clubs, Dr. Roper deplored traffic deaths of the streets and highways.

"We want highways safer, and as Kiwanians we must co-operate with authorities and good citizens everywhere to halt the rising death toll," asserted Dr. Roper.

He pointed out that the Capital district contains 52 Kiwanis clubs in the District, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware, and that these clubs have a total membership of 2,800.

Most of the morning was spent on official business. Short addresses were made by Asa W. Howard, of Roanoke, the secretary; H. Milton James, Seaford, Del.; Edgar C. Jones, Hagerstown, Md.; John Morgan Biedler, Harrisonburg, Va.; James M. Lea, Danville, Va.; Eugene Hyatt, Norton, Va., and J. Walton Hall, Ashland, Va.

Biedler told of the Kiwanis home and hospital for underprivileged children in Harrisonburg, which last year operated 365 days on its 100-bed capacity.

After luncheon, the 125 Kiwanians in attendance went into a session devoted to youth welfare, discussing work among boys and girls, vocational guidance, Kiwanis education and underprivileged children.

80 Mutineers Hanged By Ethiopia, Says Rome

Rome, Jan. 13 (AP).—Italian newspaper dispatches from Djibouti said tonight 80 mutineers of Ras Mulugheta's Ethiopian troops on the Tigrean front were hanged and 100 flogged. The Fascist reports said there was widespread disaffection in the Ethiopian ranks.

D. C. Delegate Bill Is Belittled By Rep. Norton

'Idle Gesture,' She Calls 'Voteless' Measure of Vandenberg.

Chairman Norton of the House District Committee yesterday characterized as an idle gesture the bill introduced earlier in the day by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, to authorize a District Commissioner to sit in the House as a local delegate without voting power.

"What would be the use of such a privilege?" Mrs. Norton asked. "The District Committee can furnish the House with any information it needs. If the delegate isn't to have a vote, his position would be meaningless."

Senator Vandenberg, familiar with local conditions from three years' service on the Senate District Committee, explained that his proposal was merely a preliminary step to local suffrage.

Asserting that he had always been impressed with the "advisability of creating some direct link between the District government and Congress, he said, "the logical answer would be the election of a District delegate in the House of Representatives."

Such an evtuntality, he added, may come some day.

"The long-time failure to get any action in this fashion indicates the extent of the hostile difficulties," he said.

His measure, he concluded, would answer the argument that the setting up of an elective machinery would prove too costly for the gain.

There is now pending in both the Senate and the House a joint resolution providing for a Constitutional amendment to permit residents of the District to elect members to both chambers.

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, co-author with Mrs. Norton, has said he would demand public hearings on the resolution by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

3 Plead Not Guilty In Shelton Shooting

Three colored men charged with the holdup shooting of Steve Shelton, George Washington University athlete, pleaded not guilty and were ordered held for the grand jury yesterday by Police Court Judge Isaac R. Hitt.

Stephen Carrington and Stonewall Jackson, charged with robbery, were held under $5,000 bond, while Richard Mitchell, who, police say, confessed to firing the shot, was held under $8,000 bail on charges of housebreaking and robbery.

Shelton was shot during the holdup of a filling station at 346 Fourth street southwest on January 6. The bandits escaped with $60, but were arrested a few days later. Physicians at Providence Hospital yesterday said Shelton will be discharged in a few days.

'Roxy,' 53, Dies; Famous Figure In Show World

Former Marine Climbed to Heights by Startling Innovations.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Samuel L. Rothafel, the fathering genius of the motion picture palace and its glittering stage spectacles, died today after a heart attack in his suite at the Hotel Gotham. He was 53.

He was known to the radio and movie world as "Roxy." In his life, the spectacular was Allah and Roxy was its prophet.

Rothafel found the movie theater a barren hall. He left it an ornate palace with a symphony orchestra, mechanical stages, chorus, ballet, revues, and operatic performers—all at "popular prices."

He retired last night in apparent good health. He was warned more than a year ago by his physician that his life was endangered unless he stopped his strenuous activities. He was found dead in his bed this morning.

Rothafel's health was broken in 1933 and 1933 by his frantic activities in the opening of his greatest achievements, the music hall and center theaters at Radio City, where he brought stage shows to the plane of Broadway hit revues.

Leaving the Rockefeller theatrical enterprises in 1934, Roxy launched his last venture in Philadelphia. It ended in failure. It was in the directorship of the Roxy-Mastbaum Theater, whose box office failed to keep pace with the Roxy imagination.

Roxy, as director of New York's Capitol Theater, was the first to link the movie palace with the radio, becoming nationally famous through broadcasting the talent of "Roxy and His Gang."

Roxy was born in Stillwater, Minn., and came to New York at the age of 12. After service with the Marines in China during the Boxer rebellion, he started his career in the show business at Forest City, Pa., where he showed crude motion pictures behind a bar at which he sold drinks.

He returned to New York in 1913 to manage the Regent Theater in Harlem. It was here he began giving movie patrons music and color in addition to the picture fare.

He was called soon to Broadway's biggest enterprise, the Capitol Theater, which he treated with vivid daubs of color and to which he added a regiment of ushers who handled 50-cent patrons like army generals at a dress parade.

At 42, rich and famous, he built his own theater with the financial aid of William Fox, the motion pictures magnate. It was the "Cathedral of the Motion Picture," a glittering, opulent spectacle—a center of superlatives, gold, vermilloin and courtly ushers and it was known simply as "Roxy's." It paid handsomely for a time.

Then, in 1931, came the Rockefellers. The sweep of Roxy's imagination for once was equaled by the resources at his command, and from it he created the Rockefeller Center theater group.

Mrs. Mary L. Hunt, 81, lifelong resident of Washington and wife of William F. Hunt, prominent Mason and Georgetown merchant, will be buried from the Hines funeral home today at 2 p. m. Born in Georgetown, she resided here all her life. The 8-acre Hunt estate, Mount Alto, now part of the site of a Veterans' Administration diagnostic center, where she lived after her marriage, gave this name to that section of Georgetown.

Kin of Ed Wynn File Bill For Riches He 'Offered'

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Ed Wynn promised to make his aunt and uncle "rich," papers filed in supreme court contended today, if they would soothe his wife and prevent her from interfering with his work.

The stage and radio comedian's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Greenberg, filed a bill of particulars listing expenses and other damages they say they incurred in carrying out their part of the alleged verbal agreement. The total came to $115,921.24, of which $3,006 was for liquor.

Wynn, the Greenbergs said, asked them to nurse his wife, provide for her wants, supply her with liquor, try to soothe and calm her and prevent her from coming to theaters where he was appearing and raising a rumpus. In return, they declared, he promised to "make them rich."

The 16 bluecoats who attended his funeral yesterday were commanded by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, in civilian clothes, and Inspector L. I. H. Edwards.

The cortege started from the Fort Myer gate and proceeded along the winding roads of Arlington after the men in uniform had stood in a long single file while the band played "Abide With Me" in front of the chapel.

Aside from the brief military ritual at the grave, conducted by Maj. Ralph C. Deibert, Fort Myer chaplain, there was no service.

The body of the 64-year-old general, who died Saturday at Walter Reed Hospital after a year's illness, was borne on a flag-draped caisson.

Gen. Crosby's widow, Catherine Dakin Crosby, and their two sons and daughter, Capt. George Crosby, Gordon Crosby and Miss Jane Crosby, stood near the flower-banketed mound of earth until taps had been sounded.

Regret over the general's death was expressed in a formal resolution adopted by the District Commissioners yesterday, and a copy of the resolution spread on the minutes of the board and another forwarded to Mrs. Crosby. Holland Bans Speech By Lord Cecil on War

Amsterdam, Jan. 13 (AP).—The government refused to allow Lord Robert Cecil of England to address a meeting of the Netherlands Ethiopia committee tonight on the subject of the Italian bombardment of a Swedish ambulance.

Since this question is before Geneva, an official explained, the government does not desire political statements on the subject.

The newspaper Telegraaf said the move "painfully impressed" many circles.

Lord Cecil in a recent speech demanded that League of Nations sever all connections with Italy in order to end the war.

Famed Doctor to Quit Arctic Church Hospital

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 13 (AP).—Dr. Henry W. Greist, Point Barrow's internationally known medical missionary, predicted sadly today that agitation of "certain whites" and lack of funds would force him to leave the post he has held for 16 years.

The man whose mission sheltered the bodies of Will Rogers and Wiley Post after their plane crash last August wrote in his mimeographed newspaper, the Northern Cross, that the unnamed whites were petitioning for a Government hospital.

Dr. Greist also said the Presbyterian Church may have to surrender its Arctic hospital this year to the Bureau of Indian Affairs because of depleted funds.

Kipling Gravely Ill; Operation 'Satisfactory'

Poet Suffers Relapse After Emergency Treatment in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 13.—Rudyard Kipling, whose prose and poetry is read and chanted around the world, was critically ill tonight in a London hospital after an emergency operation for a gastric disorder.

A bulletin issued at 9:30 tonight said Kipling's condition "still is very gave. He rallied well after the operation." The poet-author was 70 years old two weeks ago.

Stricken on the eve of a trip to the Riviera, Kipling was removed from his hotel suite this morning. Semi-conscious, he was taken by ambulance to Central Middlesex Hospital.

"An urgent operation was performed," the hospital stated, and a later announcement said "the operation was satisfactory." His condition seemed good, but he suffered a relapse in the afternoon.

The one-time reporter, whose literary versatility ranged from roistering lines like "A rag, a bone and a hank of hair," to the sately and sober inspiration of "The Recessional," was the object of the solicitude of thousands. The hospital answered a rush of telephone inquiries as to his condition.

Newspapers joined in lauding him as "the most popular poet the British Empire has even known" and "the most famous living English poet."

Kipling, whose wife is an American, has lived the life of a virtual recluse in his moated home in the village of Burwash, Sussex, for many years. He never has been made poet laureate or knighted and these were among things which led him to be called "the forgotten man of English letters.

Mr. and Mrs. Kipling came here January 9 and went to a hotel, preparatory to visiting the south of France. He appeared in good health then.

Kipling, author of "Gunga Din" and "The Road to Mandalay," won fame in the 90s for his stories and poems of India. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for literature in 1907, the first English writer to be so honored.

Need of Police In Montgomery Will Be Probed

County Civic Federation to Seek Reduction, Also, in Gas Rate.

The Montgomery County Civic Federation, meeting last night in Bethesda, voted for an investigation to determine whether the county's law enforcement agencies are adequate.

The committee on public welfare, which will make the investigation, was directed to say in its report whether the county has enough policemen; whether a detective force should be added to the police department; whether the post of county coroner should be created, and whether there should be an assistant State's attorney.

The federation also voted to call on the Maryland Public Service Commission to order a reduction in gas rates in the metropolitan district of the county of $50,000. This would be a reduction of 10½ per cent, and would bring the rate almost to the level of that in the District of Columbia.

It was announced that on January 24, at 8 p. m., a public hearing will be held in the county building at Bethesda to discuss the proposed establishment of a $2,000,000 research laboratory on the Rockville pike. Land for the laboratory has been donated by Luke I. Wilson. Property owners in the area are divided on the wisdom of having the laboratory built.

Secession Plan Taken to Court By Falls Church

Town Appeals Withdrawal of Area Lying Within Arlington County.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Jan. 13.—The town of Falls Church today took to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals its effort to resist the contraction of its corporate limits by withdrawal of the section lying in Arlington County.

Secession of the Arlington portion of the township, counsel for Falls Church told the court, would deprive the town of about 60 per cent of its business district, 30 per cent of its area and 25 per cent of its population.

Completion of the secession movement would also leave the residue without its fire stations, would "disrupt the educational system" and make it impossible for the town to finance its sewerage system, the Falls Church attorney told the court.

Overlapping Agencies.

Counsel for Arlington County and the petitioners, on the other hand, contended that the severance was necessary to remedy an "intolerable confusion of overlapping governmental agencies in this area."

The town was represented by John S. Barbour, Fairfax attorney, while Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas appeared for Arlington and Thomas B. Philips for the petitioners, 91 of the 132 qualified voters in the seceding section.

In answer to arguments by Barbour that the act under which the withdrawal proceedings were brought, enacted by the General Assembly in 1920, was unconstitutional on 12 separate grounds, Douglas cited decisions of the Virginia high court and the United States Supreme Court which he said proved the act in question is constitutional."

Phillips told the court the withdrawal was not inspired by animosity, but said the town was composed of two naturally separate parts, one lying in Fairfax and the others in Arlington.

Douglas reviewed financial provisions of an order handed down by Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of Arlington Circuit Court, who decided in favor of the petitioners. This arrangement, Douglas said, favored Falls Church, in that Arlington is to assume about 29 per cent of the town's school indebtedness and about 18 per cent of the water works obligations.

Justice Henry W. Holt, presiding in the absence of Chief Justice Preston W. Campbell, who is ill, announced a decision would be reached this term, if possible, instead of in the March term according to customary procedure.

In 1872, Mr. Thomas began his service with the Star and was employed there until his retirement in 1920. He was a member of he Columbia Typographical Union.

Move Renewed For Abyssinian Warfare Probe

Both Sides Want League to Start Inquiry Like Lytton's in China.

By the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 13.—A movement to send a neutral committee of inquiry to Ethiopia despite the start of the rainy season took form today as both Italy and Ethiopia unofficially indicated a desire for the League of Nations to assume responsibility for an investigation and report of the conflict.

If the League decides upon such an inquiry—similar to the Lytton inquiry commission which the League sent to China to study the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria—any attempt to extend sanctions against Italy to include an oil embargo automatically will be shelved at the League session beginning next Monday, informed circles believe.

Selassie's Plea Renewed.

Wolde Mariam, Ethiopian minister to Paris and delegate to the League, today repeated Emperor Haile Selassie's plea for investigation of his charges that Italy has violated the laws of war by bombing Red Cross units and using poison gas against civilians.

Mariam doubted Italy would grant the mission a free hand in the zone presently held by the Fascist armies, but pledged that Ethiopia would grant it complete freedom to act.

Italian approval of the proposed investigation was seen today in an editorial in the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera, which asked:

"Why not send a mission to Ethiopia similar to the Lytton mission which was sent to China? Why not reopen the whole question and submit the question of the origin of the conflict to the serious study it merits?"

100 Ethiopians Killed.

London, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—More than 100 Ethiopians were killed or wounded today and many were taken prisoner when the Italian army turned back an attack on the northern front, the Exchange Telegraph Agency's correspondent with the Italian army reported.

The Italians were supported by artillery and machine-gun barrages and intense aerial activity which forced the Ethiopians to retreat from several strategic mountain passes, the dispatch said.

Fierce fighting has been almost continuous in the Tembien region for the last 48 hours, it was reported, with the Ethiopians making numerous unsuccessful attacks in the region of Makale, center of northern caravan roads.

Consolidation Coal Co. Completely Reorganized

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Reorganization of the Consolidation Coal Co., a Maryland corporation, was completed today with the filing of two deeds covering property in Allegany County. Both deeds were filed by Robert C. Hill and Louis S. Zimmerman, trustees of the old company. It recently was reorganized as the Consolidation Coal Co., under the Delaware laws, and withdrawn from trusteeship.

One deed transferred all the mining property of the old company to the new, with the exception of ground leases. The latter, approximately 250 parcels of land, were conveyed to the Allegany Real Estate Co.

County Heads Confer On Road Overdrafts

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Officials from Montgomery, Prince Georges and Howard counties conferred today with State roads commission officials regarding overdrafts charged by the commission against the counties.

The conferences were similar to ones held recently with officials from other counties. The commission explained in detail its reasons for charging the counties with overdrafts from their shares of the State gasoline tax. Commission officials said commissioners of the three counties planned special meetings tomorrow to discuss the situations in their respective units.

Five Suspects Held.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13.—Continuing their drive against a new wave of chicken thefts in Washington County, which last week netted the arrest and conviction of two men, county authorities rounded up five more suspects over the weekend. The new outbreak of thefts followed lull of several months since tattooing was introduced by Sheriff Max Malott as a means of identification.

Spinners Pledge Return Of AAA Tax to Buyers

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 13 (AP).—Cotton textile spinners of the South and East, representing 3,500,000 spindles, decided at a meeting here today it was impracticable for the present to make refund to customers of processing taxes paid before the AAA was invalidated by the Supreme Court, but announced their intention of doing so "as soon as the situation is clarified."

Nearly 300 executives of the carded and combed yarn industry gathered here under the auspices o fthe Cotton Textile Institute, Inc. It was announced after the executive session they unanimously indorsed the institute's program whereby the industry would adhere to minimum wage and maximum hour working provisions that prevailed under the NRA.

Reds in Mexico Push Americas' Ruin, Is Charge

Brazil Says Subversive Work Is Continued at Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 13.—A charge that Communists have opened headquarters in Mexico City for "direct action" in subversive work on the American Continent was made today by high Brazilian sources.

These sources said the headquarters was moved from Montevideo when Uruguay broke relations with the Soviet recently.

Representatives of the Comintern (Communist Internationale), it was asserted, expect to direct subversive work in Central America, Colombia, Venezuela, the Guianas and the northern fringes of Brazil.

Organization Watched.

(A Leftist revolt was suppressed in Brazil in November and it was at the instigation of this government that Uruguay severed relations with Moscow, charging the legation directed Red activity throughout South America. Russia vigorously denied this and has appealed to the League of Nations to take up the matter.)

It was pointed out in these circles that police of nations in the southern part of South America have been especially watchful of Communists since the Brazilian revolt.

They said they saw a strong resemblance between "terrorist plans" allegedly found in the possession of Harry Berger, arrested here with a woman on a charge of communistic activity, and plans which partly materialized in the ABC revolt in Cuba in 1933.

Berger was said to be in supreme charge of Comintern activities in South America. These sources said identical plans had been drawn by him for activities from Mexico City.

Although a large proportion of the population of Brazil's northern State of Pernambuco is believed under Communist influence, authorities said normalcy has been almost completely restored throughout the country since the November trouble.

President Getulio Vargas has gone to the summer capital at Petropolis, which was regarded as an indication of the government's tranquillity.

2 Held as Suspects In Theft of $1,300

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Jan. 13.—J. E. Starkey and Idora Merryman, 23, of Jarvisville, are held here on suspicion of theft of $1,300 from the home of Granville Goodwin near Jarvisville. Officers have not yet found the money which had been kept in a quart jar in a bedroom trunk.

Starkey had been staying at the Goodwin home for several weeks, while Idora Merryman had lived there 13 years. Both are alleged to have left the Goodwin home not long before the loss of the money was discovered.

Bolting League, War on Britain, Denied by Italy

Il Duce Gives Assurance to Laval That Rome Will Not Attack.

By the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 13.—Premier Benito Mussolini today sent personal assurance to Premier Pierre Laval that Italy will not attack Great Britain or quit the League of Nations, the United Press was informed.

Vittorio Cerutti, Italian ambassador to France, returning to Paris today after a week in Rome, brought confirmation of Il Duce's twofold peace promise to Laval, which was conveyed to Count Charles de Chambrun, French ambassador at Rome, last week.

Mussolini's promises were:

1. Italy will not quit the League of Nations, even if further sanctions are voted.

2. A formal pledge that Italy will not become an aggressor against Great Britain.

Although Il Duce's pledges are not equivalent to Italo-Ethiopian peace overtures, observers believe they greatly cleared the political atmosphere over Europe a week before the League Council convenes at Geneva to discuss possible extension of sanctions against the Fascist state to include oil.

Meanwhile, observers do not expect new peace initiatives from any quarter at present as they believe the moment unpropitious in that neither Italy nor Ethiopia has gained a sufficiently crushing military victory.

The Italian pledges should serve to lessen tension on the Continent and in the Mediterranean. British and French officials have been concerned over the possibility of a "mad dog" act by Mussolini if driven to desperation by the League's economic strangulation.

New Ford Air 'Flivvers' Hinted As Magnate Secures a License

Henry Ford may re-enter the "flivver airplane" business, it was disclosed yesterday.

Officials at the Bureau of Air Commerce revealed that a license for an experimental ship has been issued to the automobile magnate, who quit aircraft manufacturing in 1931.

According to Associated Press dispatches from Detroit, the new Ford air flivver carries two persons and is constructed as a cabin monoplane. The cruising range of the little ship, which is powered with a standard V-8 engine, is estimated at more than 500 miles.

Melvin Perrin, Government inspector who licensed the plane, said the number X999-E had been assigned to the flivver in commemoration of the famous Ford racing car "999" which Barney Oldfield raced for Ford.

Construction of the new Ford aerial flivver marks a renewal of the company's activity in this field after a lapse of 10 years.

Ford built a small ship in 1926 which was improved and later abandoned as a "premature" development. In 1928, Harry Brooks, Ford test pilot, was killed in a crash off the coast of Florida in one of the company's planes.

Three years later Ford stopped manufacturing the famous all-metal tri-motored transport bearing his name which was used on major airlines throughout the country.

When the work on the first of the Ford flivvers of the air was abandoned the manufacturer was quoted as saying that the engineering problems involved could be solved when public demand justified continuance of the program.

Bureau of Air Commerce officials recently concluded a survey of the private aircraft market which so encouraged them that they are carrying on experiments with half a dozen light aerial flivvers of various designs, some of which employ standard auto engines.

Grand Jury to Be Guarded

case. Unusual precautions will be taken by Pugh's office to guard all those called.

Ten armed detectives will be stationed in the stone courthouse so that witnesses may be brought in and out without being seen by the public. The third floor will be barred to all except those summoned before the jury. Reporters and photographers will not be allowed near the jury room, Pugh announced.

Fear of gang vengeance on the part of the 12 witnesses brought plans for guarding the courthouse. Witnesses are coming to Rockville from Washington and many distant points, including North Carolina, Richmond, Va.; Philadelphia and New York City, it was learned.

"All are material witnesses to the crime," Pugh told reporters today. "Some of them are already under arrest; others are appearing of their own volition."

Asserts Case "Clinched."

The procedure for the return of "Slim" McDermott from the Federal Penitentiary for hardened criminals at Alcatraz has not yet been determined on, Pugh admitted. He said he expected the prisoner would be brought here, if indicted, by Department of Justice agents and kept in the Federal Penitentiary at Baltimore during the trial.

Pugh admitted today that the names of "Tony the Stinger" Cugino, who hanged himself in a New York police cell, and Claude Bailey, who was killed in an attempted escape from Lorton, would figure prominently in the trial.

The majority of witnesses have no police record, Pugh said, elaborating upon the almost unprecedented precautions being taken to guard their identity.

Three new witnesses were unearthed in New York, it was learned, where Detectives Floyd Truscott, Earl Hartman and John Fowler recently completed an investigation. Material evidence was also found which, Pugh said, "clinched" the case and made it possible to proceed before the grand jury.

"We feel we have reached the end of the rope as far as evidence is concerned," the youthful prosecutor jubilantly said today.

Pugh declared that money was paid for the abortive attempt on McDonald's life, which resulted in the "mistake" slaying of Wilson as he was delivering papers at the McDonald home.

"The money paid for the killing, though," Pugh said, "was not as much as would have been received if the right man had been killed."

Indictments charging the four men with conspiracy to murder may also be asked, it was intimated by Pugh, who would not say who had offered the money "to rub McDonald out."

Asked if the name of the late Eddie Killeen, gambler, who was killed by his sweetheart, Lillian Maddox, would be drawn into the case, Pugh cautiously said:

"I will not say that Killeen will not be mentioned."

It is well known that Sutton, at the time of the slaying, was a henchman of Killeen.

The killing of Wilson grew out of a gamblers' feud. A rival of McDonald, aroused by McDonald's encroaching on his territory, hired professional gunmen to kill him.

On an October morning in 1934, the killers arranged an ambush for Mickey. It was known that he usually came home just before dawn. On this particular morning, however, he already was at home. When Wilson drove up to deliver the morning paper, the "finger man" for the killers mistook Wilson for McDonald, and a moment later Wilson was brought down by a blast from a shotgun.

Magistrate Courts.

A total of 57,958 so-called petty violations of the law were recorded in the books of the District's lower courts during the fiscal year 1934. In bringing this fact to light last spring the House District Crime Investigating Committee, which was chiefly concerned with major crimes, recommended "continued study and analysis" of the problem thus raised. No doubt the committee was aware of the fact that Corporation Counsel was already probing into the congestion of the minor tribunals. As a result of his study Commissioner Hazen is sponsoring a new bill to create a system of magistrate courts.

The impossibility of judiciously handling approximately 58,000 cases a year in the police courts and similar tribunals is obvious. Extreme congestion leads to inefficiency, injustice and lax enforcement of the law. Police officers find, for example, that when they arrest an individual for a minor offense they may have to spend all their free time the next day waiting to testify against the offender in Police Court. The natural reaction is to wink at such violations, or at least to keep arrests at a minimum.

There seems to be no good reason for subjecting such cases to the formality of a Police Court hearing. Certainly it would be to the advantage of citizens as well as officers to have these charges informally heard and disposed of in the districts in which they arise. The result would be to relieve the pressure upon the regular courts and thus greatly to facilitate the processes of justice. No one would be deprived of any right now enjoyed, for appeals could be carried to the Police Court if alleged offenders should be dissatisfied with the decisions of the magistrates.

Any device for relief of pressure upon the courts must be intimately connected with the enforcement of traffic regulations and other critical issues confronting the District. Mr. Prettyman's plan demands thoughtful consideration as a factor in the solution of problems far beyond the jurisdiction of the courts he proposes.

Mayor Hylan.

The death of John F. Hylan, Mayor of New York from 1917 to 1925, recalls the period when Hylanism was in the minds of many people a synonym for administrative incompetence and demagogic advocacy of the 5-cent fare. Viewed retrospectively, Mr. Hylan no longer appears a proper subject either for vituperation or for the jests that were once inspired by mention of his name. His rise from farm boy, day laborer, petty lawyer and local politician to the titular headship of New York City is a record of hard work and ambitious striving that testifies to the possession of admirable personal qualities.

Unfortunately, Mr. Hylan's assertiveness and energy proved greater than his intelligence. And the limited education which he acquired under great handicaps did not compensate for his native deficiencies. Thus he became the more or less unwitting tool of the unscrupulous powers behind the political throne which have done so much in New York and elsewhere to degrade and corrupt our municipal governments.

So long as the electorate can be stampeded by demagogic appeals for retention of a 5-cent fare on bankrupt transit lines, or offers of "bread and circuses" of any other kind, Hylanism will continue to be a threat to good government. However, it is encouraging to note that the hardships of a prolonged depression have made the average citizen much more conscious of his responsibility for electing men of ability and high character to municipal offices. The relief burdens imposed upon heavily taxed communities have made the public much less tolerant of graft and waste, and less easily diverted from contemplation of present abuses by glittering promises of future benefits.

The political education of the rank and file of voters, especially in a great cosmopolitan city like New York, is a slow and often discouraging task. Sometimes it seems as though lessons are learned only to be forgotten. But New York undoubtedly acquired some very useful knowledge as the result of the eight-year rule of Mayor Hylan followed by almost eight years of the Walker regime. Mayor La Guardia already has a very creditable record of accomplishment, particularly in view of the magnitude of the task that confronted him when he assumed office after years of financial misrule.

It is hardly conceivable that a restoration of Tammany rule would now return to the highest municipal office within the gift of the people the kind of man whose incompetence, irresponsibility and ready acquiescence in demands of their backers makes a mockery of that local self-government which is so vital to preservation of American traditions.

Two More Decisions.

No new inroads upon New Deal legislation were made by the Supreme Court decisions handed down yesterday. In the rice millers' case the court unanimously applied the principles it laid down a week ago in its opinion invalidating the AAA. The suit which has been rather loosely regarded as a test of the Bankhead cotton control act was dismissed because the plaintiff "had failed to make a case for equitable relief."

In the Hoosac Mills case the court decided that the processing taxes were merely part of an unconstitutional plan to regulate agriculture. As a logical sequence, taxes impounded by the lower court pending final decision of the rice millers' case were ordered returned to the millers. Processors who have refused to pay these levies, except to depositories set up by the courts, are thus rewarded, while others who have merely paid under protest appear to have slight chance of recovery.

The opinion does not attempt to consider the predicament of processors in the latter class, but it may be assumed that Congress will protect the Government against suits to recover processing taxes that have already been paid and distributed in the form of benefits to farmers. In the circumstances grave inequities appear to be unavoidable. They are part of the price the country must pay for the hasty enactment of sloppy legislation that cannot stand the test of constitutionality.

Dismissal of Lee Moor's suit to compel a railroad to haul cotton which fell into the bootleg class under the Bankhead act seems to have little significance. Certainly it does not mean that the court will uphold this drastic control measure. In the Hoosac Mills opinion Justice Roberts pointed out that the Bankhead act uses the "taxing power in a more directly minatory fashion than the AAA to compel submission." It may be assumed, therefore, regardless of the failure of this so-called test case, that the Bankhead law will go the way of the parent statute when a real test case is taken before the court.

For the moment the most significant aspect of the decision may be the emphatic reiteration of the previous decision that "the regulation of agricultural production" is "a matter not within the powers of Congress." The emphasis upon that sweeping statement casts an ominous shadow over the renovated AAA which has been given skeletonized form at the conferences between Administration officials and farm leaders.

Sensible Relief Reforms.

The Emergency Relief Bureau of New York City is to be reorganized and placed on a permanent basis under the Department of Social Welfare because it is fully realized that the city will be compelled to provide for the destitute for an indefinite period. Since the WPA has provided work for 170,000 employables previously carried by the ERB, the local bureau need no longer assume the responsibility of finding jobs for the unemployed. Consequently it is proposed to put the permanent agency on a strictly business basis, reducing the administrative staff from about 18,000 to 13,000, and selecting workers on the basis of their qualifications and training.

When home relief was first taken over by the city, employes were largely recruited from relief rolls. In other words, the city not only gave relief in the home but provided work relief by creating jobs in the Home Relief Bureau. Obviously, the cost of administration has been high under such circumstances, while the efficiency of the service has been impaired.

That is why Charlotte Carr, director of the ERB, urges reorganization on a businesslike basis. There is no excuse for failure to run a permanent relief agency as competently and as economically as any other branch of the public service. As Miss Carr says, the money comes from the taxpayers and it is limited in amount. Hence the cost of administering relief should be kept as low as possible. Work relief and direct relief do not mix well; so the New York plan for strictly segregating the two types of aid is a move in the right direction. Miss Carr has very decisively shown the fallacy of assuming that the disbursement of public funds for relief purposes is subject to laws differing from those applicable to other governmental spending agencies.

Japan's New Gesture.

It is encouraging to note that Japan still recognizes the validity of the "open door" policy in Manchukuo, in spite of infringements upon that principle. There is no guarantee that discrimination against foreign business interests in the puppet state will be discontinued. But Gen. Minami, supreme representative of Japan at Hsinking, reports that he is "seeking to guide Manchukuo to abide strictly by its agreement to respect the open door and all legitimate business." His announcement certainly indicates a desire at Tokyo to eliminate the friction resulting from current arbitrary regulations.

This conciliatory statement coincides with reports that Japan will seek a five-power declaration against a naval race if her request for a "common upper limit" for all war fleets is finally rejected. In both instances it appears that the Japanese are eager to make concessions that would discourage a united front against that country. Despite her tenacious pursuance of a single objective—the domination of the Far East—Japan realizes that she can not afford to alienate the friendship of the other powers having extensive interests in that section of the world.

If Gen. Minami unqualifiedly urges Manchukuo officials to remove obstructions in the "open door," there is no doubt that such action will be taken. The question is: how far is Tokyo willing to go in this conciliatory attitude? The discrepancies between Japanese assurances and Japanese acts in the past five years prevent any exuberance over a mere statement that foreign commercial relations with Manchukuo will be "ameliorated." But in view of the progressive isolation of Japan, even a gesture toward the observance of the nine-power treaty may be significant.

Civil Service Week.

Fifty-three years ago this week the country was confident that it had routed the spoils system. The degradation of public employment had previously reached a climax with the assassination of President Garfield by a disappointed office-seeker. An indignant electorate had demanded abolition of the vicious slogan of Andrew Jackson's era: "To the victors belong the spoils." Crystallized public opinion had brought about enactment of the national civil service act, upon which the present merit system is founded.

But the men and women who brought about this significant reform would be depressed if they could appraise the results of the current reversion to Jackson's policy. Even in 1932, when the Civil Service Assembly conducted an investigation, only half the employes of the Federal Government were under civil service. Since that time vast numbers of jobs have been created, virtually all of them without benefit of the merit system. State governments, at that time, awarded only 38 per cent of their positions on the basis of competence and training; municipal governments, 59 per cent, and county, township and district agencies only 14 per cent.

During the 53 years since the merit system was established the problems of government have become increasingly complicated. A great number of Government workers are specialists and technicians. Obviously such posts cannot be satisfactorily filled by political camp-followers. Establishment of a competitive personnel system that can be held aloof from partisanship has become an imperative adjunct to any modern government which expects to administer successfully the intricate legislation of the present day.

National Civil Service Week can be most effectively observed by stressing the deficiencies in the present system as well as the achievements to date. The development of machinery for the appointment of public servants has not kept pace with the growing need for a higher type of service. The issue thus raised is not as spectacular as was the fight against spoils following the death of Garfield. But it is no less important. As the various emergency measures are discarded or become permanent, the struggle for governmental reform is likely to center more and more in the personnel problem. The most enlightened legislation is useless if inefficiently administered.

The Song Of '98.

Theodore August Metz was 87 years old. A frail figure, but cheerful and well-beloved, he had lived a life which can properly be called gemuetlich.

He began work as a drug clerk in Germany and came to the United States after the Franco-Prussian war, which he recalled more for its beer than its fighting. In New York Metz played his Guarnerius violin in beer gardens, joined George Thatcher's Minstrels—and now has ended his days as a veteran of Tin Pan Alley.

Not so exciting, yet at midcareer this old troubadour won an enduring place in the history of his adopted land. While trouping in Louisiana, the sight of a burning Negro cabin in a hamlet called Old Town gave him the hint for a song that not long afterward was on the lips of every American.

Czarist Russia's magnificent hymn is a unique exception to the rule that good patriotic music cannot be made to order. The best composers labored to produce soldier songs for the World War, but the British Tommy sang a "Tipperary" written for no good reason by a couple of New Yorkers, and the doughboys chanted "Mademoiselle of Armentieres"—pronouncing it "Armenteers."

Now the death, in Manhattan, of a former Prussian bandmaster recalls how the Spaniards, when they surrendered Santiago de Cuba, were convinced that "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight" was the national anthem of the United States.

"Congress Overwhelmed With Bills."—Headline. As who isn't, this time of the year?

A List For Gangsters.

From the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A few days ago the newspaper-reading public was let into the secret of what various corporations in the country pay their high-powered executives and employees.

Senator Copeland, of New York, has announced that he will move to estop such publicity of private affairs. The revenue act of 1934 provides that corporations shall report to Congress all salaries in excess of $15,000.

We were opposed to the notorious "pink-slip" provision as to income taxes, and, for the same reasons, we are opposed to publicity for salaries paid by corporations. Publicity provides gangsters and kidnapers with a blue book of prospective victims. It opens the way for all kinds of minor annoyances to highly paid corporation executives or employees.

We hope Senator Copeland succeeds in his effort. There can be no legitimate interest in these salaries, save on the part of stockholders, who can inform themselves by private correspondence without any such law.

Sabotaging The Schools.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At its recent meeting the Board of Education considered a new "five-year plan" of building. Probably this might be considered by some of its superpatriotic critics as still another evidence of its domination by "Moscow."

However, the board, which is specifically charged to see that ancient firetraps such as certain elementary school buildings built before the Civil War and shortly after which are still housing young children should be replaced by modern, sanitary and fireproof structures. This is an obligation which they cannot shirk and for which they must have the full support of Congress.

The board, which serves without pay, has generously and conscientiously given of its time and energy. It has white and colored men and women of high caliber who are anxious to give the citizens of the District their best effort. They are well educated, broad-minded, modern and alert to the new spirit of progress of this age. They deserve the praise and full support of the residents of the District.

The same applies to the superintendent of schools, Dr. Frank Ballou. Washington is indeed fortunate to have a modern scientifically minded, forward-looking educator and one who has the courage of his convictions as the head of its school system.

The "cat-and-dog" fight that certain individuals have waged against the school board and the superintendent for weeks has taken too much valuable time from the serious duties that they have in hand. If they had plenty of time which hung heavily upon them, this hair-splitting heresy hunting in text and class, even to the censorship of the use of newspapers in classrooms, might be amusing. But it is not, because there is a housing crisis that gets worse for the thousands of children still using firetraps. SOCRATES.

News Of Executions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to indorse the suggestion in the letter appearing on the editorial page of The Post, signed "F. T. Cook," commending your policy with reference to the Lindbergh family and suggesting that you spare your readers the details of the execution of Hauptmann, in the event that sentence is carried out.

The fact that the populace is no longer permitted to attend the execution of criminals and to make holidays of the occasions has been cited as an evidence of human progress; but if it be true, as many newspapers assume, that the public demands the details of such events in story and picture, with review of the crime and the trial, then the progress must be in the size of the audience and the convenience of having the spectacle brought into the homes, where it is spread before all and not only those whose morbid curiosity would impel them to seek it. I am sure there is a demand, among the parents of this city, for a paper which excludes "news" of that type from its pages.

I wish to thank you for the fine and interesting paper you have made of The Post and to express my hope for the continued success of your paper.

Modern Lamentation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another outrage has been committed upon Government employes. As if the parking problem were not difficult enough before, with only two-hour street parking and inadequate parking space adjacent to Government buildings, since January 1 the vacant lots, owned by the Government, next to the Temporary E and Temporary F buildings, have been leased to an individual or individuals for pay-parking.

Our situation was bad enough before, with hundreds of people working in buildings that a well built chicken coop would put to shame and under working conditions that would not be tolerated in private industry, but we at least could park within a few blocks of these buildings. Now, however, these parking places have been leased, forcing our cars to further complicate the street parking problem, while we must pay 25 cents a day for the privilege of parking on our employers' property.

Cannot something be done for these forgotten, voteless citizens, continuously harangued by both Metropolitan and Federal police?

JOHN D. BALSON, Jr.

Re-annex Arlington County?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Commission decision comes before the Judiciary Committee of Congress, as stated in an item in your excellent newspaper, I hope some mention will be made of the possibility of the boundaries of the District being extended to include the territory in Virginia that formerly was included in the District. That event would settle the boundary dispute and, at the same time, result in many other benefits.

Chief among these benefits is the possibility of obtaining the voting franchise for the District, since it is probable that the people in the Virginia territory would protest re-annexation without votes, and such annexation with voting franchise would necessitate that votes be given the entire District.

The ceding of part of the District to Virginia, I have been told, was said to have been unconstitutional by both the late Chief Justice Taft and Elihu Root, two of the best authorities on the Constitution. The wrong could be corrected either by Congress or by the Supreme Court.

There are other practical reasons for the re-annexation. Virginia does little for Arlington County and Alexandria, although these units are good sources of tax revenue. The governments of these units smell to heaven of scandals and the people would receive more for their tax dollar under United States rule in the District. The area is nearer the new Federal buildings than many parts of the present District. The area of the District is too small to contain many Federal units that have gone out of its boundaries and the lost Virginia area contains a number of Federal units that should be in the District.

If the Gravelly Point airport project is approved, it would then be in the District. The area of Federally owned land in Arlington County is considerable, and ample space is available for low-cost expansion. In fact, the reunion of the lost area with the District is entirely logical to meet the needs of a growing Washington which has expanded beyond its confines.

Gag Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Karl Schriftgiesser's article, "Law by Sadists," on your book page last Sunday, is an able arraignment of the pending gag legislation in Congress.

It is probable that the progressive members of the national legislative body will be able to prevent the passage of the vicious measures to which he calls attention, but there should be no lessening of vigilance in opposing them. "Better be safe than be sorry." Polyanna optimism has too often resulted in enactment of reactionary and repressive bills while well-meaning liberals possessing overmuch of naivete and trustfulness were slumbering.

While it is true that sadistic motives move many authors and backers of such proposals, it must be borne in mind that the economic motive is the dominant one in most cases. The real purpose behind every measure of this type is to provide a blackjack that may be used by what President Roosevelt has called the forces of "entrenched greed" to club into silence those who would protest against social injustice. Speeding And Parking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The traffic department is getting ready to revoke licenses for speeding. That is exactly what a lot of us have been wanting to hear for a long time. Now we'll get somewhere. Nothing short of the fear of not being able to drive at all will slow up some people.

And when a building regulation forces builders to put parking space under all new buildings a lot of the traffic congestion will be eliminated.

Changing Our Form Of Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Clear thinking and analysis are so rare and still so necessary in times of stress as ours. Since the AAA decision there has been considerable talk of fundamental constitutional problems.

Two of the major tenets of our Constitution are the division of powers between the Federal and State governments and the separation of powers between the legislature, executive and judiciary. The Federal legislature in this country is not supreme as it is in parliamentary countries, as England and France. Neither is the, executive nor the judiciary, for we have a system of checks and balances between these three departments.

The cry of the New Dealers to a large extent seems to call for a supreme national legislature, as found in continental Europe. They decry the power to void by the Supreme Court. Or perhaps they want a supreme executive as found in Italy, Russia, Spain and Germany. Apparently they wish to discard our present Federal system by replacing it with a stronger central government than we have at present. Their choice lies somewhere between the parliamentary form and autocratic dictatorship.

A consideration of these principles is essential when discussing the advisability of constitutional changes. To take away from the Supreme Court the power to invalidate laws is surely to break down the division of powers as well as to invite the discarding of the Bill of Rights in the first ten amendments. The Post Impressionist

A Royal Reentry.

Post Office, Tuesday.

THERE is one thing to be said for the Stuart blood: It may have been wild; it was frequently unlucky—but it is perpetually persistent. Since the days of Queen Elizabeth's successor, neither headman's axe nor parliamentary act has drawn or diverted enough of this Scotch stream to keep some of it out of the veins of whatever house became England's royal house.

One who knew Victoria once intimated that that prim sovereign felt, secretly, prouder of her Stuart relationship than of any among her other ties. Now a column correspondent reminds us that the Duke of Gloucester's recent wedding makes one more such knot—and thereby restores the French lillies to the arms of a possible British monarch.

"When you published your columns on 'King Monmouth,'" writes this column friend, "you didn't say it was a descendant of his who was to marry King George's third son."

Well, the reason for our silence was simple ignorance. Those Monmouth columns, so flatteringly remembered, were composed more than a year ago—and if the Duke of Gloucester and Lady Alice Scott were then thinking about getting engaged, they flagrantly neglected to cable their thoughts to the Post-Impressionist . . .

Lucy Walter came of a prominent, though untitled, Welsh family too loyal to the Stuart cause under Charles I to escape ruin at the hands of Cromwell. A country child "browne and beautiful," as diarist Evelyn describes her, Lucy was thrown upon London's cold mercies in the mid-forties of the seventeenth century—then went to The Hague, where exiled Charles II kept an impoverished pretender's court.

From an ancestress, she borrowed the name of Barlow. Her son, first called James Crofts, was born in Rotterdam, and Charles, for some while, supported Lucy and James in Antwerp. "Mrs. Barlow" always insisted that she had gone through a morganatic marriage ceremony with Charles at Liege, Sir Henry Pomeroy and Sir George Parry being the witnesses—and Charles, if he never confirmed this, never denied it.

Indeed, though he let Lucy die in poverty, for her boy—who was indubitably his—the King, once on the throne, kept a tenderness that survived severe trials. Under the name of Scott, James was made Duke of Monmouth—even after repeated plots against the crown, was appointed captain of the First Troop of Life Guards.

Monmouth's wife—"very little and like my brother-in-law's wife," writes Pepys—was Anne Scot, Countess of Buccleuch, chosen for him by Charles upon the suggestion of her mother, the Countess of Wemyss. They were married in the King's own suite at Whitehall, and Pepys makes scurrilous mention of the fact that the groom then "displayed the arms of England, Scotland and France, quartered upon some other fields."

Was the marriage happy? Husband and wife had only one taste in common—that for dancing—and the lady shortly met with an accident which lamed her for life.

Our point here is that the couple now became the Duke and Duchess of Monmouth and Buccleuch, and that their arms, by court order, were those of the royal family together with those of the Buccleuchs.

Says the King's warrant, addressed in form to "Our Trusty and Well Beloved Garter Principall King of Arms":

"We . . . hereby declare our will and pleasure to be that our . . . dear son James Duke of Monmouth and Buccleuch shall henceforward bear and use the Royal Arms with a baton sinister argent and overall an escutcheon of the arms of the noble family of the Scot Earls of Buccleuch in our Kingdom of Scotland.

"And therefore we do hereby require, authorize and command you and your successors to order, marshall, and set up, on all occasions for our dear said son James . . . the arms, crest and supporters as they are above expressed."

When dear son James rebelled once too often—this time not against an easy-going father, but against a jealous uncle James—the attainder of treason wiped out the title of Monmouth with a stroke of the axe. But the widow was, and remained, a Duchess in her own right. Though the fleurs-de-lys later faded from the royal arms of England, they flourished on the arms of her descendants.

Lady Alice Scott—albeit it with a second t—is in the ninth generation of direct descent from Anne Scot, Duchess of Monmouth and Buccleuch. She is a descendant, in the tenth generation, from Charles II. And she is now the Duchess of Gloucester, the wife of a son of an English King — of the House of Windsor—who has added to his own arms those of his wife's father.

Crime And Flight

Paris, Jan. 13.

THE criminality of "those incorrigible Americans" continues to fascinate our friends the English and French, who often marvel at the audacity of people who calmly walk American streets at night with machine guns popping at every corner, and raise children subject to risks of kidnaping. The flight of Mr. E. L. Cord, followed now by that of Miss Marlene Dietrich, German moving-picture actress, have stirred their imagination and evoked expressions of shock.

However, a conscientious inquiry by a good English or French journalist stationed in the United States might have suggested auxiliary reasons why Mr. Cord, the automobile and stock promoter and aviation magnate, found it preferable to spend some time in Europe.

True, he left at a time when kidnaping was more or less of a household word, and it was possible that he did receive threats against the safety of his family. But Mr. Cord had business interests at home which impinged on certain matters which came within the purview of Mr. Roosevelt's reforms. He remained abroad for the safety of his children during a period when other financiers were sitting in the hot seat in Washington answering questions put to them by statesmen who often assumed the role of a destructive critic. Now he returns home at a time when the heat has been turned off and big business is enjoying a breathing spell, although it can hardly be claimed, in view of Miss Dietrich's alarm, that the peril of kidnaping has been finally allayed. If it was only kidnapers that Mr. Cord wished to avoid, Miss Dietrich surely would advise him as one who has suffered to keep away a little longer.

IF Miss Dietrich is returning to Germany to escape from crime, she should find contentment there. Crime is not extinct in either Germany or Italy, but it is a state monopoly in both countries. Thus, when a man is taken from home at night in the Fatherland or in Italy and shot by persons unknown, that is no crime but an act of patriotism. Independent abductions and murders are rebuked by law as vigorously as violations of the tobacco monopoly or any other prerogative reserved to the state.

The kidnaping of children of tender years, however, is unthinkable on various grounds, including patriotism. If Miss Dietrich has a boy, Adolf Hitler will wish to raise him strong and healthy to be called in a war. If she has a girl, the Fatherland will want her to run a lathe in a munitions factory.

This maturity is subject, however, to intervening risks during their growing years. They might be blown up in an air raid while still too young to serve their country or they might not know how to adjust their child's size gas masks.

I am not losing sight of the fact, either, that Miss Dietrich has been around for quite a few years now and is growing no younger. She might be near the time when it would be necessary for her to retire from the scene, anyway. A lady would hate to admit that there are many possibilities which our friends the English and French have not explored in discussing crime in the United States. They are very naive about Hollywood publicity stories.

• • • •

I NOTE that the French exploitation of the American problem of lawlessness differs in tone from the constant English discussion of the subject. French courts, being dominated by their politicians, are no more independent than ours, and the quality of their judges is much inferior, because a French judge is the most disreputable politician of them all.

If he had any character or self-respect he would not be a judge under the conditions which govern the French judiciary. And if he had any ambition he would not spend his whole career at a rate of pay which would not hire a good waiter. So a judge is recognized as the lowest form of political life in France.

The French, therefore, read of and discuss American crime strictly for enjoyment, whereas I am afraid I detect in British comment a strong note of hypocrisy and envy.

The English papers with the greatest circulation are those which attempt to imitate the sensationalism which they simultaneously deplore in the American press. This imitation is quite pathetic from a professional standpoint, because they simply don't know how. They can't get a story, they don't know the elements of a story, and when they do have intelligence to obtain a few facts they don't know how to write them.

While shuddering at spectacular crime in America, they expose a yearning for crime of their own in their extravagant exploitation of cheap murders, petty stickups and shoplifting cases in a style which is an obvious and at the same time an utterly futile attempt to copy American methods. At present they are laboring to build up dime-a-dozen poisoning and penny ante shooting of an ordinary farmhand into something on the order of the Hall-Mills job or the "Dutch" Schultz massacre. Having no decent crime stories of their own, they constantly borrow ours.

It seems a trifle ungracious of the boys to repay these favors with perpetual sneers at a nation which gives them such treasures as Dillinger murders and the works of "Pretty Boy" Floyd and Bonnie Parker.

Painful Possibility

With AAA Discarded Farmers May Decide To Work Out Their Own Salvation, Denying Validity To All Political Panaceas.

By Hilding Sivertsen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Omaha, Nebr.

DEMOCRATIC Gov. Clyde L. Herring of Iowa remarked, after the momentous AAA decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, that it would cause a "revolt" in Iowa. Realizing that this didn't sound very well, he hastily added that of course he meant a "political revolt."

But since Iowa is already in the Democratic fold, it is not clear as to whom the revolt would be directed against. Since the Republicans are rather unanimously out of power, there isn't much point to the remark.

Would Iowa revolt against the Supreme Court?

No one who really understands Iowa would lose one second's sleep on that score.

A few mischievous young fellows hung six members of the Supreme Court in effigy near the campus of Iowa State College near Ames shortly after the decision was handed down, but they certainly did not represent 1 per cent of the population of the State. The citizens of Iowa, including the farmers, accepted the decision in good humor.

• • • •

Some of the farm bureau and other farm organization leaders, especially those who were closely identified with the mechanics of administering AAA, registered regret, and a determination to see that some adequate substitute be provided. They are the most excited of all. The more actual farmers, who have calloused hands and sunburned faces, are inclined to shrug their shoulders with an air of "So what?" especially since the price of farm commodities seemed to react favorably to the decision.

The sum total of the situation is that there won't be any revolt in Iowa or any other Middle Western State because of the AAA decision.

By one somewhat paradoxical circumstance, some of the more radical groups, for instance, Milo Reno's Farm Holiday Association, rejoiced over the decision. It is the farm holiday crowd that is usually supposed to be inclined to revolt any time the revolting is good. Milo Reno only grinned appreciatively and applauded when the news came out.

Some of the more dispassionate and statistical-minded observers of this section have been doing a lot of figuring lately, and have produced data which seem to prove that the AAA has not been responsible for more than 10 per cent of the increase in the price of farm products. As more information comes out, that percentage may dwindle to one which is even more negligible. The greatest credit seems to go to the drought. General recovery also plays some part in the situation.

IF the prices of corn, wheat and hogs hold up satisfactorily or increase, without the actual or psychological aid of the elaborate AAA shenanigans, it will be pretty conclusive proof that the whole thing was an expensive and hollow circus performance. Those who still claim that the AAA was responsible for higher farm prices point out to the destruction of little pigs and the abandonment of corn acreage as having already had an effect.

However the critics answer that the destruction of food was iniquitous and could not be excused on any grounds; that there never was over-production anyhow, but under-consumption; that the drought would have caused the same result of curtailing hog and corn production; that the restrictive measures were side-stepped; that the hog producers are now busily engaged in raising as many as they can, anyhow. It is plain, from the recently disclosed increase in Kansas wheat acreage, that means are always found to defeat the supposed restriction.

There is, of course, discussion regarding the submission of a constitutional amendment permitting the Federal Government to regulate industry and agriculture without regard to States' rights. But those who feel that the AAA was unsound in principle are not alarmed at this. They feel that such an amendment would surely be defeated, not only because of the opposition of the thickly populated East, but because there would be a considerable disaffection in the farm States as well.

• • • •

During the past few days, representatives of some of the farm organizations have been meeting in Washington to figure out some way of replacing AAA. Not all the farm organizations are represented, of course. Leaders like Dan Casement, of Kansas, who are actual farmers, but don't believe in AAA, were specifically invited to stay away. The agricultural arm of the New Deal wants nobody but yesmen to attend its parleys.

These discussions have given a certain confirmation to the talk that President Roosevelt will try to steer the whole agricultural program away from the granting of subsidies and supposedly artificially maintained high prices, toward a program of soil conservation, retirement of poor land and some system of rewards for those farmers who raise grass, legumes and other crops to replace corn and wheat.

As much as six months ago, some Middle Western observers urged the Republican leaders to adopt this kind of a program, but the Republican leaders said "No, let's wait and see what the Supreme Court does to AAA." It is beginning to look as if they have missed the boat again, as usual, and may see the Democratic Party run off with what would have been a perfectly good issue.

AS a matter of fact, the whole agricultural situation has gotten into such a muddled state, through the abrupt demise of AAA, and the lack of agreement among professional farm leaders as to the wisest kind of a program, that it looks as though neither party would be able to make political medicine out of it. Both parties may be reduced to the pitiful extremity of just letting the farmers vote as they please, without being able to claim a patent right on any scheme that comes out of the magic hat.

As a matter of fact, if the land retirement-conservation program is finally adopted as the chief plank of the Democratic platform, some mean-spirited person is bound to discover that the whole idea was definitely promoted and urged by the Department of Agriculture in the Administration of Herbert Hoover. And that wouldn't be so good. Bootstrap-lifting devices like the McNary-Haugen bill were fathered and advocated by Republicans quite as freely as by Democrats.

It certainly would be a deplorable situation if the farmers should go ahead and work out their own salvation without benefit of politicians. Maybe the whole kit and caboodle of the farm panaceas will turn out to be a total loss, and nobody in particular will have a claim to be the savior of American agriculture. What a mess that would be!

Seas Freedom Group in Senate Fights Hull Plan

Administration Neutrality Bill Debated by Foreign Affairs Committee.

By the Associated Press.

A split in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that put three veteran members together in favor of outright "freedom on the seas," in opposition to Secretary Hull, yesterday grew out of renewed discussion of the Administration neutrality bill.

Siding with Hull were Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, who introduced the bill, and an undetermined number of other members of the committee.

The committee meeting was executive but it was learned afterward that Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, a bitter World Court and League foe, had insisted the United States should preserve its rights to ship freely on the seas regardless of foreign wars.

He was understood to favor backtracking to the 1914 pattern of neutrality, a pattern claimed by his opponents to be the principal reason for the United States entering the World War.

Administration Bill Hit.

While not so pronouncedly on the side of the free-sea trade, in contrast to the projected system of embargoes and restricted trade, Senators Borah (Republican), of Idaho, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, were described as alligned generally with Johnson in attacking the terms of the present Administration bill.

The measure would continue the present outright embargo on arms and munitions to belligerents and direct the President to limit exports of other commodities to normal levels if he finds traffic in the war zone endangers United States' neutrality.

The same bill also traveled a rough course on the House side. Representative Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, urged the House Foreign Affairs Committee to impose a ban on all American exports, loans and credits to warring nations in conformity with a bill he has introduced. Backing him were Representatives Lanneck (Democrat), Ohio, and Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut.

Carnegie Hand Seen.

A denunciation of the measure as inspired by peace associations wishing it to bring the United States in line with League views was sounded by Representative Higgins (Democrat), Massachusetts.

The Administration bill, Higgins said, was a creation of the Carnegie Foundation of International Peace.

The Carnegie Foundation, he said, has always sought to "have the United States join the League of Nations or the World Court."

The Administration bill, introduced in the House by Representative McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, was described by Higgins as paralleled in language by a Carnegie Foundation bulletin dated December 20, 1935, and headed "International Conciliation."

"Even a casual perusal," he said, "will show the McReynolds measure repeats almost verbatim the language used in the Carnegie bulletin."

Senators Hear the Story of the Bonus

Text of Senate Bonus Bill

The text of the bonus bill introduced in the Senate yesterday follows:

A BILL

To provide for the immediate payment of World War adjusted service certificates, for the cancellation of unpaid interest accrued on loans secured by such certificates, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That notwithstanding the provisions of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended (U. S. C. 1934 edition, title 38, ch. 11), the adjusted-service certificates issued under the authority of such act are hereby declared to be immediately payable. Payments on account of such certificates shall be made in the manner hereinafter provided upon application therefor to the administrator of veterans' affairs, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, and upon surrender of the certificates and all rights thereunder (with or without the consent of the beneficiaries thereof).

The payment in each case shall be in an amount equal to the face value of the certificate, except that if, at the time of application for payment under this act, the principal and unpaid interest accrued prior to October 1, 1931, with respect to any loan upon any such certificate has not been paid in full by the veteran (whether or not the loan has matured), then, the administrator shall (1) pay or discharge such unpaid principal and interest as is necessary to make the certificate available for payment under this act, (2) deduct such unpaid principal and so much of such unpaid interest as accrued prior to October 1, 1931, from the amount of the face value of the certificate, and (3) certify to the Secretary of the Treasury as payable an amount equal to the difference between the face value of the certificate and the amount so deducted.

Interest Canceled.

Section 2. In the case of each loan heretofore made pursuant to law by the administrator of veterans' affairs and/or by any national bank, or any bank or trust company incorporated under the laws of any State, territory, possession, or the District of Columbia, upon the security of an adjusted-service certificate, any interest unpaid accrued subsequent to September 30, 1931, that has been or, in consequence of existing law, would be charged against the face value of such certificate shall be canceled insofar as the veteran is concerned, notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary. Any interest on any such loan payable to any such bank or trust company shall be paid by the administrator of veterans' affairs.

In the case of any such loan which is unpaid and held by a bank or trust company at the time of filing an application under this act, the bank or trust company holding the note and certificate shall, upon notice from the administrator of veterans' affairs present them to the administrator for payment to the bank or trust company in full satisfaction of its claim for the amount of unpaid principal and unpaid interest, except that if the bank or trust company, after such notice, fails to present the certificate and note to the admnistrator within 15 days after the mailing of the notice, such interest shall be paid only up to the fifteenth day after the mailing of such notice.

Application for Payment.

Sec 3. (a) An application under this act for payment of a certificate may be made and filed at any time before the maturity of the certificate (1) personally by the veteran, or (2) in case physical or mental incapacity prevents the making or filing of a personal application, then by such representative of the veteran and in such manner as may be by regulations prescribed. An application made by a person other than a representative authorized by such regulations shall be held void.

(b) If the veteran dies after the application is made, and before it is filed, it may be filed by any person. If the veteran dies after the application is made it shall be valid if the administrator of veterans' affairs finds that it bears the bona-fide signature of the applicant, discloses an intention to claim the benefits of this act, and is filed before payment is made to the beneficiary.

If the death occurs after the application is filed, but before the receipt of the payment under this act, or if the application is filed after the death occurs but before mailing of the check in payment to the beneficiary under section 501 of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended, payment shall be made to the estate of the veteran irrespective of any beneficiary designation. If the veteran dies on or after the passage of this act without having filed an application under section 1, in making any settlement there shall be deducted on account of any loan made on an adjusted-service certificate only interest accruing to October 1, 1931.

(c) Where the records of the Veterans' Administration show that an application, disclosing an intention to claim the benefits of this act, has been filed and the application cannot be found, such application shall be presumed, in the absence of affirmative evidence to the contrary, to have been valid when originally filed.

(d) If at the time this act takes effect a veteran entitled to receive an adjusted-service certificate has not made application therefor he shall be entitled, upon application made under section 302 of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended, to receive, at his option, under such rules and regulations as the administrator may prescribe, either the certificate under section 501 of such act, as amended, or payment under this act.

Issuance of Bonds.

Sec. 4. The amount certified pursuant to section 1 of this act shall be paid to the veteran by the Secretary of the Treasury by the issuance of bonds of the United States, registered in the name of the veteran, in denominations of $50 or multiples thereof having a total face value up to the highest multiple of $50 in the amount certified as due the veteran, and the difference between the amount certified as due the veteran and the face amount of the bonds so issued shall be paid to the veteran by the Secretary of the Treasury out of the fund created by section 505 of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended.

The bonds shall be dated June 15, 1936, and shall mature on June 15, 1945, but shall be redeemable at the optio nof the veteran at any time, at such places, including postoffices, as the Secretary of the Treasury may designate. Such bonds shall be issued under the authority and subject to the provisions of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended, and shall not be transferable, assignable, subject to attachment, levy, or seizure under any legal or equitable process.

Interest on each bond issued hereunder shall accrue at the rate of 3 per cent per annum from June 15, 1936, to date of payment of the principal of the bond and will be paid therewith: Provided, however, that no interest will be paid on any bond redeemed prior to June 15, 1937. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to promulgate regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.

On Account of Loans.

Section 5. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to redeem from the United States Government life insurance fund all adjusted service certificates held by tht fund on account of loans made thereon, and to pay to the United States Government life insurance fund the amount of the outstanding liens against such certificates, including all interest due or accrued, together with such amounts as may be due under subdivision (m) of section 502 of the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to make such payment by issuing, to the United States Government life insurance fund, bonds of the United States which shall bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent per annum.

No such bonds shall mature or be callable until the expiration of a period of at least ten years from date of issue, except that any such bond shall be redeemed by the Secretary of the Treasury and the principal and accrued interest thereon paid to the United States Government life insurance fund at any time upon certification by the administrator of veterans' affairs that the amount represented by such bond is required to meet current liabilities. Bonds issued for the purposes of this section shall be issued under the Second Liberty bond act, as amended, subject to the provisions of this section.

Certificate Fund.

Sec. 6. The adjusted-service certificate fund is hereby made available for payments authorized by this act.

Sec. 7. Notwithstanding the provisions of public law No. 262, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 12, 1935, no deductions on account of any indebtedness of the veteran to the United States, except on account of any lien against the adjusted-service certificate authorized by law, shall be made from the adjusted-service credit or from any amounts due under the World War adjusted compensation act, as amended, or this act.

Sec. 8. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Sec. 9. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

Sec. 10. This act may be cited as the adjusted compensation payment act, 1936.

AAA Salary Ruling Is Expected Today

A ruling by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl on the question of whether salaries of more than 6,000 AAA employes are to be stopped or continued, is expected today.

McCarl notified Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday that the ruling was almost ready.

The Comptroller General has been at work on his ruling ever since the Supreme Court of the United States held the AAA unconstitutional.

Youth Who Slew Father Given Life Sentence

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 13 (AP).—Judge William P. Endicott imposed a life sentence today on 18-year-old Lyston Webb who pleaded guilty to the charge of killing his father, Earl Webb.

The youth said he shot his father at the instigation of his mother, Mrs. Edna Webb, who promised him full charge of the Webb farm and $1,000 of life insurance carried by the father.

Mrs. Webb, indicted as an accessory, had pleaded innocent and is awaiting trial.

Mother and 8 Die in Fire.

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Eight children and their mother, Mrs. Sarah Alice Tyrer, 40, perished today when fire destroyed their miner's cottage at Tyldesley, Lancashire. Adam Tyrer, the father, was the only survivor.

Senate Speeds Bonus Bill

be unnecessary to provide at this session for any additional taxes."

It was estimated the revised plan, in the long run, will cost the Government $2,491,000,000, of which the veterans would receive an ultimate total of $2,187,000,000. By June 15 next, it was estimated that $1,836,213,950 in bonds will be paid out to the veterans, in addition to $87,786,050 in cash odd amounts not covered by the bonds.

The new issue of "baby" bonds used to pay the bonus would mature June 15, 1945, when the adjusted service certificates would have been due. Interest on the bonds will accrue from year to year, at the rate of 3 per cent yearly.

Unpaid interest on veterans' borrowings against their certificates, dating from September 30, 1931, and amounting to about $263,000,000, would be canceled. No provision is made for refund of some $7,000,000 in interest already paid.

One provision written into the Senate measure at yesterday's Finance Committee session would permit bonus applications by veterans who never have asked for certificates.

Guard on Speculation.

Once issued, the bonds could be redeemed at once for cash, or held for accumulation of interest, at the veterans' option. To discourage speculation, they would not be negotiable, but could be cashed at some designated place, probably a postoffice, in various local communities.

Veterans will be encouraged to hold their bonds as a "nest-egg and a protection for their families and themselves," but cash will be paid for them on demand.

"It is our thought that a great number of veterans will hold the bonds rather than cash them in, as the investment provided is an especially attractive one," Harrison said yesterday.

"Bonds of the United States paying a 3 per cent interest rate are selling at an appreciable premium, and were these bonds negotiable they would unquestionably sell considerably above par."

May Act Thursday.

The Finance Committee may complete action on the bill today, in which event it is possible for the new measure to be considered by the Senate when it reconvenes Thursday. If approved by the Senate, and there was no room for doubt on that score, it might be sent back for acceptance by the House, which made no provision for bonds in the Vinson-Patman-McCormack plan it adopted last week. The only remaining hurdle would be the White House. Should the President veto the bill, it would have to pass House and Senate again by a two-thirds vote.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday he was "familiar" with the Senate bonus measure, but did not desire to discuss it.

Senator Thomas Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, a member of the Finance Committee, was asked if Morgenthau's testimony before the committee today might hold up consideration of the measure.

"King George and all the King's horses couldn't stop this bill," he said.

G.O.P. Machine Silent on Fight For Lewis Seat

Scramble in 6th Md. District Unique as Nice Leaders Seek Strong Man.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 13.—The anticipated Republican scramble to oppose Representative David L. Lewis in the Sixth Maryland District congressional election next fall promises to be unique in that not one of the aspirants for the G. O. P. nomination has the unqualified support of the State administration, Gov. Harry W. Nice.

Mayor Irving M. Wertz, of Hagerstown, latest formal entrant in the field is known to have the support of the Nice faction in Hagerstown, but not that of the Washington County faction headed by Dr. Homer E. Tabler.

Former Judge Albert A. Doub, of Cumberland, econd aspirant in the field, is definitely aligned with forces held unfriendly to the Nice leadership.

State Senator Robert B. Kimble, first to make informal entry in the race is without the support of political factions, but with solid labor support in Allegany County and considering the number of candidates from that county, he is conceded to be a strong contender.

State Senator Harry W. Legore, who is expected to announce his candidacy at any time, will be without the support of Nice organization leaders in his home county—Frederick.

Smith May Withdraw.

Police Magistrate Harold C. Smith, of Rockville, the first formal entrant in the field, will withdraw, it is reliably reported, prior to the May primary and throw his support to the candidacy of Mayor Wertz.

It is reported that Walter Dawson, Republican leader in Montgomery County, has promised backing of Senator Legore's candidacy. Republican leaders are somewhat puzzled over the outcome of this unusual situation.

It is no secret here that Reno S. Harp, Nice leader and patronage distributor for the State administration in this county, hold no brief for the candidacy of Senator Legore. The latter, however, claims the support of leaders of all factions in Frederick County.

Leaders of both parties are of the opinion that Mr. Lewis must make a real fight to retain his seat. This general belief is responsible for the large number of Republicans anxious to oppose the veteran Congressman.

Seek Strong Man.

Republicans of the district would like to unite behind one strong candidate, but cannot agree on any of the aspirants thus far in the field. It is their hope that some outstanding candidate, popular in all of the five counties of the district and free of factional entanglements, will come forth before the May primary.

G. O. P. hopes of regaining the Sixth District seat, it is the growing belief among party leaders here, lie in securing an outstanding candidate. Most prominently mentioned are Alexander Armstrong, of Hagerstown, former Maryland attorney general and unsuccessful candidate for Governor in 1923, and Judge George Henderson, former Mayor of Cumberland. Both are recognized as outstanding men in the district and likely to attract support in all sections. Whether either would consider the nomination is a question to which no one seems to have an answer.

Pact Meeting Planned.

Istanbul, Jan. 13 (AP).—Reliable reports today stated the foreign ministers of Turkey, Iraq, Afghanistan and Iran plan to meet soon, probably at Baghdad, to sign a non-aggression pact recently broached at Geneva.

Saint, also Chilean, and her husband, the Third Secretary of the French Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Count Rudolf Strachwitz, Second Secretary of the German Embassy, and the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy, Senor Ramon Padilla.

Seated on a wide sofa covered with a handsomely woven Mexican cover were Senora de Yrujo, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Spanish Embassy, in beige velvet with a brown hat, and Senora de Echegaray, wife of the Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy. Mrs. Alberta E. Clarke and Mr. and Mrs. T. Edward Ford, of Cleveland, Ohio, have been guests of Mrs. J. B. Fluke, in her home at Beverly Hills, Va.

Mrs. Clarke, the State social chairman of the Ohio Council of Republican Women, left yesterday for Miami Beach, Fla. In the early part of February she will sail on a cruise to the West Indies and South America.

Junior League To Start Course Of Instruction

Provisional Members Will Get Community View of Welfare Work.

The Junior League of Washington announced yesterday plans for its 1936 course in civic instruction for provisional members. The course will begin on January 24 and will last a month. Miss Agnes Shands, Junior League educational chairman, has been responsible for planning the course. Miss Lucia Murchison, director of social service at the Children's Hospital, will direct it.

"The purpose of the course is to give each provisional member of the Junior League a community-wide view of the civic and welfare work of her city," said Miss Shands yesterday. "Many of our league members, as they grow older, go on boards of social and health agencies. It is imperative, if they are to do an intelligent piece of work in this phase of the city's life, that they have real knowledge not only of the particular branch of work in which they are interested, but also see how this relates to other community work."

Some of the civic and social work leaders who will talk with the group this year are Miss Margaret Hagan, director, Red Cross Psychiatric Social Service, St. Elizabeths Hospital; Miss Edith Halloway, of the Family Service Association; Miss Patricia A. Morss, chief of the Children's Division, B. P. W.; Mr. Lewis R. Barrett, director of recreation of District of Columbia; Elwood Street, director of B. P. W.; Dr. Ruhland, District of Columbia health officer; Dr. Hans Weiss, probation officer of the Juvenile Court; John Ihlder, executive officer of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Authority; Leifur Magnusson, director, Washington branch, International Labor Organization; Mrs. J. J. O'Conner, chairman, volunteers committee of the Council of Social Agencies. The lectures will be illustrated by field trips to various agencies in the city.

The Junior League advisory committee of the provisional course includes Miss Anne Carter Greene, president of the Junior League; Miss Patricia Morss, chief of the children's division of B. P. W.; Miss Elizabeth Ogilby, Miss Murchison and Miss Shands.

Make-Up Boxes Solve Problem Of Beauty Care

Lack of Dressing Tables in Small Apartments Is Remedied by Kits.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT IS generally conceded that American women are experts in the art of being beautiful. When one of them hasn't the natural claims that she might, is she daunted? Not on your life! Away she goes to a beauty parlor, and, my, what happens there! Hair takes on new color and life, freckles mysteriously disappear, eyes are glorified and lips acquire seductive shapes. Even the figure, after a number of visits, can be carved down to the proper proportions.

The American woman's efforts continue into the home. She follows up her initial beauty steps by attending carefully to her daily makeup. Women in small apartments, where there is a limited amount of space, are frequently annoyed and seriously inconvenienced with makeshift means. One of the most bothersome factors is lack of a toilet table where there's no space for powders, rouges and whatnot.

This problem may be easily solved by the small make-up boxes in a downtown store. These are little less than vanity tables themselves. They have the adjustable mirror and a small drawer. Set this on a shelf, even on top of soap box neatly covered with chintz, and you have a dressing table de luxe. The price—$2.95.

A particularly attractive make-up box is the one made completely of mirrors. It would be sure to give a boudoir a festive—and feminine—touch. These, by the way are only $1.

Novelty Hose.

THE NEWEST novelty in hose are the "Pedi-dips." The tips of the toes are dyed a hearty red to give the impression of red toenails. When you can't afford a pedicure then just don a pair of pedi-dips!

They were especially designed for the young ladies who don't object to a bit of camouflage.

And to judge by the sales—very few do!

For Milady's Purse.

ONE of the nicest little space savers we've seen in a long time is the combination compact and cigarette case—no larger than an ordinary cigarette case—shown in a downtown store.

It comes in all white, black and chrome, and orange and white. There's room in the first division for seven or eight cigarettes. The second part holds powder, lipstick and cake rouge.

You can readily see how convenient it is to have all these essentials in one case and not separately to clutter up your purse.

Photograph Frames.

SOME of those photos that came your way at Christmas time would be a lot better off with a frame. Take that "study" of rich Uncle Jack—suppose he calls and finds it drooping and warping on the desk there? After all, if you shop now you can buy exquisite frames for $1. And they are well worth buying! In size they range from 8 by 10 inches, to small miniature frames about 2½ by 3. They're made of untarnishable metal, gold or silver finish. You may take your choice of the square or oval shapes.

"Littlest Rebel" Hats.

WHAT the "littlest rebel" (who was little Shirley Temple) wore in her last picture is bound to be news for the style conscious youngster. In Miss Temple's cinema wardrobe was a cute little velvet hat with a ribbon band and another ribbon that tied in a bow under her chin.

These "littlest rebel" hats are on sale in a downtown store, and you can tell from the very looks of them they're going to make some young lady as pretty as a picture.

The hats are available in red, brown, and green. The ribbon is a gay, bright plaid pattern.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

HER WINTER suit is gray with the most becoming little gray Krimmer hat to match . . . and when she feels especially flush, she skips in the florists and gets herself a little bunch of violets to pin on her coat. Oh, indeed—she does enjoy a dash of color! In her living room she has a Chinese rug predominantly jade in color, a Queen Anne occasional chair in a soft amethyst covering, a ladder back chair with a brown seat, furniture of walnut and satinwood, lamp shades of pale gold. Her problems are, what color sofa or love seat should she get? What color for two new chairs? What kind of coffee table and occasional tables? What kind of table lamp? Would a white lamp do here? What walls, woodwork, curtains and draperies? She wants the room to be cheerful and bright.

We think white walls and woodwork would be lovely for this living room. Then white glass curtains with draperies in pale topaz. The sofa or love seat could then be in a figured material mostly brown and topaz. We'd have one new chair in topaz, the other in a white slip cover fringed with brown. Most any of the English styles should do nicely for the new tables—the Queen Anne types as well as the Georgian. A white lamp would be very good.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

SYNOPSIS.

On a murky December morning in 1927 Colin Revell receives a note from Robert Roseveare, headmaster of Oakington School, asking him to come there to help solve a mystery. Revell accepts for, though he does not know Roseveare, he was an Oakington boy before he went to Oxford. And at Oxford he had gained a certain fame for his skill in solving mysteries. He finds things changed at the old school—Roseveare's house delightful, and Roseveare not an old-time pedagogue. Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER 2.

FOR A FEW MINUTES they fenced skillfully over such subjects as the weather, house matches, the coming Christmas holidays, the life of a young man in London, and the new War Memorial Hall. But the two talked easily, intimately, and with that flow of good will that always exists between two people each knowing that the other recognizes and appreciates technique in conversation.

By dinner time Revell had grown accustomed to astonishments. A charmingly furnished bedroom with the latest type of bathroom adjoining, his dinner clothes laid out on the bed with all their proper creases intact, an electric warmer already between the sheets—all added to his sensations of physical, mental and spiritual well-being. When the second sounding of the gong summoned him downstairs, he found his host reading the evening paper with his back to the study fire. "Ah . . . no news of any importance . . . I'm afraid I cannot offer you a cocktail, but a glass of sherry perhaps? I usually take one myself."

It was exceedingly good sherry, and the dinner, when they adjourned to the panelled dining room, was worthy of such a handsome beginning. "I have a good cook," explained the doctor, almost apologetically. The good cook, however, could hardly claim credit for the excellent Volnay, or for the Napoleon brandy served in balloon glasses which, at Roseveare's suggestion, they took at leisure in the study afterwards.

"You will smoke?" queried Roseveare, offering a box of Coronas. "I may not do so myself, unfortunately, but I shall enjoy the scent of yours. Good. . . . And now, I am sure, you are waiting for me to mention the little affair I hinted at in my letter to you."

Revell was waiting, it is true, but without any intense eagerness. If life could continue to provide such agreeable moments of suspense, he at any rate would not be impatient.

"I shall be interested, of course," he answered.

"No doubt my letter surprised you?"

"Well, perhaps I was—a little—puzzled by it."

"Exactly." Roseveare seemed to welcome the reply. "And that, my dear boy, is just my own position in a nutshell—I am puzzled."

Revell glanced up with the beginnings of keener interest. There had been in the "dear boy" a suddenly emotional inflection, as if, behind the mask of bland benignity, the elder man were calling out for sympathy from the younger. "I hope I shall be able to help you, sir," Revell said, simply.

"I hope so, too, though I am afraid you may think the whole affair too fantastic even to be considered. Perhaps I had better give you a brief outline—fortunately it will not be very complicated. It concerns an extremely sad and unhappy accident that occurred here at the beginning of the term."

The First Death.

He waited as if for Revell to make some comment, and then continued: "There was a boy here named Robert Marshall, a younger brother of our head-prefect. A much elder brother—Henry, I think—was here in your time. I don't know if you knew him?"

"Slightly, that's all."

"Ah yes, yes. He was killed during the last days of the war—most tragically, for hew as under 19 and ought not to have been sent out. His death, indeed, was such a blow to his parents that they both died within a couple of years. The two younger boys were left—Robert and Wilbraham. They came on here in the usual way and at the usual ages from a preparatory school. Pleasant boys— not brilliant, perhaps, but well liked and altogether a credit to the school. Wilbraham, as I said just now, is our present head-prefect—a boy of sound character, good at games, and very popular. He will leave next summer, no doubt, and enter Oxford—there is, fortunately, plenty of money. But to come to the point. About three months ago his younger brother—Robert, that is to say— was the victim of a most peculiar and distressing accident. A heavy gas-fitting fell on him in the dormitory during the night, killing him instantly."

"Good Lord!" Revell, who till then had been listening rather dreamily, found himself suddenly jerked into attention.

"Some of the London papers had a paragraph about it," Roseveare went on. "I don't know if you noticed it?"

"No, I'm afraid I didn't."

"Then I certainly think it will be best if, before saying any more, I allow you to read the account of the inquest, reported fully in our local paper."

He took out a pocket wallet and produced therefrom a folded newspaper cutting. "Take your time," he remarked, handing it over. "And remember—all this happened three months ago."

Killed in Sleep.

It was a column and a half in length and Revell, at a first quick reading, seized its main points as follows. The accident had taken place on the first Sunday-night-Monday-morning of the autumn term. It had not been discovered till daylight, when a boy named March, who had chanced to wake early, saw that something had happened, and raised the alarm. The gas-fitting was a heavy, old-fashioned, inverted-T-shaped affair, one of a series that were suspended in a double row along the whole length of the dormitory. Underneath the junction of the horizontal and vertical sections of piping a brass tip had been fitted, apparently for ornamental effect. Marshall, it seemed, had been sleeping with his head exactly under this tip, so that when the whole thing collapsed the effect must have been like a heavy spear falling on him.

Of several witnesses called, none could give much real information. The school doctor, a fellow named Murchiston, described how he had been sent for at seven in the morning to examine the body. Death, he thought, had been instantaneous, the skull and brain having been pierced. The accident might have taken place from five to eight hours before—he would not care to commit himself more than that.

Housemaster's Story.

The housemaster, Mr. T. B. Ellington, described the position of his private house next to the school house block containing the dormitory, but quite separate from it. He was not only Marshall's housemaster, he explained, but the boy's cousin as well. It was his habit to walk through the dormitory and turn off all the gas jets at 10 o'clock every night. He had done so as usual on that particular Sunday night. He had not noticed anything at all peculiar about any of the gas-fittings. After bidding the boys good night he had worked for a time in his own private room adjoining the dormitory and had then returned to his house and gone to bed. That might have been, perhaps, as late as 1 o'clock, for he had been busy marking terminal examination papers. He had certainly heard nothing unusual during that time. He knew nothing at all about the accident till a boy came to him soon after 6 o'clock with news of what had happened. He had immediately hastened to the dormitory and had found Marshall dead. The whole gas-fitting, wrenched or broken off at the ceiling, lay across the bed in the position in which, apparently, it had fallen. He had been too much distressed to examine it minutely. There was a strong smell of gas in the dormitory, so he had sent a boy to turn off the supply at the main. Then he had sent another boy to fetch the headmaster.

Boys Give Evidence.

Evidence was then given by several boys, including the two who slept in the beds on either side of Marshall's. None of them had heard anything during the night. They agreed that they usually slept well and did not waken easily.

A "certain liveliness" seemed to have been introduced into the proceedings by the evidence of a Mr. John Tunstall, chief engineer of the local gas company. On being informed of the accident by telephone, he said, he had immediately visited the school and made an examination. The gas-fitting was very old, and of a type that no company would supply or recommend nowadays. He had found a large fracture in the pipe near the ceiling rose. This had evidently been the cause of the fitting suddenly dropping loose. Such fractures did sometimes occur in fittings that had seen many years' service, especially if they had been subjected to any particular sort of strain. Questioned by the coroner on this point, he said that he had in mind another and a similar fitting at the school that had been pulled down as a result of some of the boys swinging on it.

How Feminine Stars of Radio Are Developed

Or How Women Speakers Are Supposed to Treat National Politics.

By Dudley Harmon.

SCENE: Headquarters of the National Woman's Democratic Club.

Time: Eleven o'clock of a Tuesday morning.

Characters: Mrs. Hugh Butler, who conducts a class in public speaking for club members. Mrs. Farnham, Mrs. Duffy, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. McManus, Mrs. Jones and 15 other ardent women Democrats.

Property: A tapestry screen in one corner of the room.

Mrs. Butler: Ladies, we are gathered here today for the fourth lesson in our series on public speaking. This morning we are going to combine a lesson in broadcasting with one in making entertaining speeches. Now how many of you have written an entertaining speech for the occasion? Mrs. Farnham timidly puts up her hand, hastily withdraws it when she sees it is the only one.)

Mrs. Farnham: Well, at least I thought mine was entertaining when I wrote it.

Mrs. Butler (soothingly): Mrs. Farnham, you go behind the screen in the corner and read your speech. Then it will sound as though it were coming from over the radio.

* * * *

Mrs. Farnham (goes over to screen and reads from behind it): Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience. Ahem. Excuse me, ladies, I've just lost my glasses and can't see without them. Oh, here they are. Well, anyway, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, the trouble with this country today is that it's all tied up in red tape. Too many rules and regulations. Take the Government rule against lotteries, for example. If the Government would only allow lotteries, we'd be out of the red.

It's human nature to gamble. In this country we shoot craps. Abroad they play roulette. Now if our Government . . .

Mrs. Butler: Time! (loud applause as Mrs. Farnham emerges from behind the screen). That was perfectly lovely, Mrs. Farnham, but next time, try not to cough and rattle your paper so much. Mrs. Jones, you're next.

* * * *

Mrs. Jones (goes over to screen and begins.) Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, I forgot to bring my paper with me. Since it was about neutrality, a very complicated subject, I prefer not to speak without my notes. So I'll tell you a ghost story instead.

Some friends of mine moved into a house which was supposed to be haunted. They hadn't been there very long before their dog started to yowl in a most distressing way. Then the chandeliers began to rattle. The little boy complained that at night a fat man came and sat on his stomach. The cook said a girl of 16 came to her bed and made faces at her. (Shivers from the audience.)

Mrs. Butler: Time! (groans from the audience, cries of "What happened next?.")

* * * *

Mrs. Butler (inexorably): Mrs. MacManus! You're next!

Mrs. McManus (from behind the screen) Ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience. Has the American public a sense of humor? I am going to try and find out by telling you a few jokes. (Reels off a series of stories. The audience appears to have a sense of humor, for it laughs heartily. After a few minutes Mrs. McManus comes back to her place.)

Mrs. Moore (springing up): I had prepared a speech on the AAA, but now that that is all wiped out, I will tell you about the New Year's resolution I made. I resolved to defend the Administration. I started doing it at a midnight show on New Year's Eve and have been doing it ever since. If—

Mrs. Duffy (getting up): I do all my politicking in taxicabs. The drivers are so-o-o susceptible——

Mrs. Smith (bitterly): Ah, you're lucky. My taxi drivers are always Republicans.

MRS. ELBERT W. SHIRK.

Women's Clubs Provide Outlet For Every Feminine Interest

Veteran Federation Official Relates Growth and Increasing Influence of Organization; Tells of Opportunities for Public Service.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

WHEN GRANDMOTHER WAS YOUNG and wanted to be in a club, she could either line up with a literary league or join a sewing circle.

Since then, however, women's clubs have expanded in proportion to woman's advance in public life. Today any feminine worker—no matter whether her interests are cultural or practical—can find a niche for herself in some feminine organization.

These points were stressed yesterday by Mrs. Elbert W. Shirk, dean of chairmen of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Shirk came to Washington from her home in Redlands, Calif., to attend the midwinter meeting of the federation's board of directors.

Yesterday between sessions of the executive committee at national headquarters, 1734 N street northwest, she told something of the development she had noted in women's organizations during the last two decades and discussed the value of club work for the average woman.

Born to Club Work.

A tall, stately woman, with blue eyes and graying hair, she admitted she has been active in club work almost as long as she can remember. "I think I was born in a club," she laughed. "I know I was literally reared in one, because my mother was a very active worker. From her I inherited a general interest in women's organizations and a special interest in the department of Junior Club Women, which she founded 20 years ago."

This branch of the federation is now functioning in every State and the District of Columbia, according to Mrs. Shirk. "It is largely responsible for the fact that a large group of younger women throughout the country aren't spending all their spare time playing bridge," she said.

She further explained the junior clubs had proved to be valuable training schools for other departments of federation work. In this connection she also mentioned the numerous philanthropic projects sponsored by these groups. "They have made noteworthy contributions to community welfare through establishing and maintaining loan funds, nursery schools and kindergartens," she said. "In numerous cities they have also provided for needy families and have bought talking books for the blind."

Civic Endeavor.

Civic work is another line of endeavor in which the junior club women are especially active, Mrs. Shirk said. "They have accomplished much in beautifying towns by planting flowers and gardens and by having streets cleared and cleaned," she continued. "They are assisting in community welfare work by providing baskets of food for families at Christmas and in some cases buying shoes for poverty-stricken persons throughout the years."

She pointed out the younger women are as interested as their elders in national and international relationships, in promoting proper legislation, in preserving peace and in weighing the values of every public question from the World Court to birth control.

Discussing women's club work in a broader sense, Mrs. Shirk mentioned some of the criticisms that have been leveled against women's clubs in the past few years. "We have been accused of everything," she laughed, "from dealing too much in generalities to being uninformed on public problems and old-fashioned in our attitudes and actions. We have been criticized, too, for concerning ourselves too much with the social, rather than the practical, side of club work.

Such comments, however, have come largely from persons who know very little about the Federation of Women's Clubs as a whole."

Mrs. Shirk feels "club work is coming into its own today as never before. Organized women are visualizing practical goals (such as establishing an academy of public affairs here in Washington and working out a Congressional program) and working further as a united group. In its modern aspect, club work is largely educational in purpose. Giving every woman an opportunity for self-expression in groups, it also provides avenues through which a woman can keep informed on public affairs, contribute to human welfare and develop her cultural aptitudes."

Convinced, however, that "women still do not realize the extent of their influence," Mrs. Shirk believes that "once they are awakened to their power as an organized group, they can accomplish much more than they have in the past."

This is Mrs. Shirk's fourth visit to Washington to attend board meetings of the federation. Now dean of chairmen of the national organization, she was formerly vice chairman of its junior club work.

Longview, Wash. (U.P.).—Men really can sew, argued Mrs. Charles Underhill, member of a committee raising funds for the community church building fund.

She exhibited an apron with 50 patches, sewed by men. Under each patch was a coin. She hoped to get about 90 more before presenting it to the church committee.

"The men really did the sewing," said Mrs. Underhill, "but I threated the needles. I couldn't find one that could do that."

Inspection of the apron showed quite obviously that men had done the sewing.

Stutterers' Club Should Be Lots of Fun, Thinks One Who Stutters.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: To begin with, may I say how very much I enjoy your column? I think it the best thing of its kind I've ever read and, I should judge, the most helpful.

I have been to some degree a stutterer all my life, which I think is the worst deal fate can hand out to any human being. However, I've given the old hag the "ha-ha" to the extent of being able to control my speech difficulty to a reasonably satisfying degree. Reading "Amiga's" letter of January 4, it occurred to me a Stutterers' Club might be a lot of fun, as most persons with speech impediments are otherwise good humored, normal individuals, often quite talented.

* * * *

I happen to have worked out a very helpful theory for the cure of stammering, and maybe some others have equally helpful ideas. It would be interesting for such a group, including those who, as one stammerer expresses it, "put their foot in it every time they open their mouths," to meet once a week or perhaps less often. I do not have a home of my own and so can not offer a meeting place. Do you think the idea has any merit, or that anyone would be interested? Very sincerely,

UPSTATE.

Meritorious Idea.

DEAR UPSTATE: I think your idea does have merit. It is a constructive suggestion for bringing together congenial persons who have a mutual problem to deal with: a problem involving that "touch of nature" which is said to make the whole world kin. While my contact with stutterers and stammerers has been slight, those I have known were without exception persons of exceptional intelligence and charming sensitivity, invariably successful in their chosen work.

* * * *

Those who have known the embarrassed self-consciousness which accompanies conversational ineptness (whether their handicap be stuttering, stammering or other psychological fetter) should hail your suggestion of a Stutterers Club with good-humored enthusiasm. Since you are willing to assume leadership in organizing the group, they should prove willing at least to follow through in a spirit of gay adventure, to see what social profit may be gained. I hope your suggestion receives many enthusiastic indorsements. All mail received will be promptly forwarded to the address given in your letter. Thank you for the words of praise.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Sour Milk Diet Aids Treatment Of Constipation

Streptococcus Organisms in Intestines Reduced by Lacto Baccilli.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

MANY years ago Elie Metchnikoff, of the Pasteur Institute of Paris, observed that Bulgarian children fed on clabbered or soured milk were unusually healthy. Experimenting with the lactobacillus which produces lactic acid from milk sugar, Metchnikoff announced that life could be greatly prolonged if this organism were allowed to grow and propagate in great numbers in the intestinal tract. Following his pronouncement, the world witnessed an almost hysterical desire to drink soured milk and live forever.

As with many so-called discoveries the pendulum swung too far. Lactic acid milk was not a cure-all; neither was it a passport permitting each of us to join the centenarians. Nevertheless, the value of acidophilus milk has gained wide recognition, and it is now used extensively in the treatment of constipation, diarrhea, mucous colitis and intestinal fermentation.

It has been shown that the best results are obtained when the lactobacilli are grown on whey and taken in this form. Following large and continued doses, a definite tendency toward growth in the intestine is often observed. The procedure is like sowing a field with a given type of seed. Dry weather may prevent germination and the seed will need to be resown if a crop is expected. Lactose (milk sugar) is given with each dose of the culture.

Regardless of the number of doses taken, it is sometimes impossible to plant the lactobacillus in the bowel, although about 60 per cent of the cases will encounter no difficulty. Certain others will prove strongly resistant, as the lactic acid organisms will be killed as rapidly as introduced. Nevertheless, some of these patients are reported to show clinical improvement.

An organism that it is important to eliminate from the bowel is the streptococcus. The presence of this bacterium in the colon is a frequent source of arthritis, or of bladder and urinary tract infection; and in a long series of cases complaining of intestinal indigestion, streptococci were found in not less than three-fourths. With an increase in concentration of the milk acid organisms, streptococci decreased in most instances.

Negativism Held Child's Showing Of Individuality

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

Some children, as a result of training for disposition, are always negativistic. Their first response to an order, or even to a request, is "No." It is enough to suggest something to them—at once they want to do the opposite. They are a nuisance to everyone, and most of all to themselves.

Periods of such a reaction come to every child, and every effort should be made to help him outgrow this phase of development and return to rationality.

The first stage of the negative attitude shows itself at about 2. It is the tiny child's expression of self-consciousness. Hitherto he has been helpless in the hands of adults, and has not realized that he was an increasingly independent individual with rights of his own.

The new sensation goes to his head like wine and he begins to assert himself at every turn. It will cure him to let him take the consequences of his own contrariness wherever it is possible, and the rest of the time to be firm and unemotional, paying as little attention as may be to his whims.

A far worse exhibition of the same disease comes at about 12 or 13. There is nothing more exasperating than a child who has just reached the teens. His arrogance and self-will seem inhuman to his distracted parents. It sometimes seems as if he had lost not only respect but love for all who feel responsible for his behavior and well-being.

Here again he must be forced to face the consequences of his own acts. He feels able to take care of himself, to make his own decisions, resents any correction or advice. Only hard experience can teach him that he is not yet able to fend for himself. If the parents can keep hands off, he will soon recover from this passing phase of inflated ego.

They All Went Up.

Garnishes Add To Appearance, Flavor of Soups

Variety of Accompaniments Suggested to Improve Palatability.

SIMPLE soups served with attractive garnishes or accompaniments are very effective. The type of garnish or accompaniment naturally depends upon the kind of soup, whether it is thick or thin, jellied or hot, clear or vegetable filled.

Toasted wafers, cheese crackers, melba toast and croutons are the usual soup accompaniments because they are easy to prepare and can be purchased in every grocery store.

Besides these usual accompaniments, there are many that can be made in your own kitchen. Some are readily prepared while others take more time, but all are delicious and add greatly to the palatability and the appearance of the dish.

The heavy luncheon soups usually do not need a garnish unless it is a fine sprinkling of chopped parsley or a dash of paprika for color and added flavor. Almost all of the bean soups—lima, navy or black—are more beguiling if seasoned with a bit of vinegar or thin lemon slices. Black bean soup may be garnished with hard cooked egg slices as well as lemon.

Thin cream soups may be made more attractive with a whipped cream or snowball garnish. The cream, whipped but unsweetened, should be dashed over the top of each serving just before it is carried to the table. The snowballs are made from beaten cream and whipped egg white flavored with a few drops of sherry wine. The snowballs are also an excellent garnish for the clear consommes and clear tomato bouillon.

Noodles Add Flavor.

Noodles rolled into fine threads may be used like macaroni to add character and flavor to clear soups. They may be cooked until tender in the soup. Noodle balls which are served with the soup instead of crackers, instead of in the soup because they soften so quickly, are also delicious and a little unusual. The balls are made of the regular noodle dough. The paste is rolled and cut with a tin cutter into small round discs about one-quarter of an inch in diameter. The discs are then tossed into hot fat (360 degrees to 370 degrees F.) using a wire frying basket. In about a minute they will turn a delicate brown and puff into balls. Drain on soft paper and serve with soup.

Egg balls add greatly to the appearance and flavor of consomme and give it the food value that it would otherwise lack. There are several methods of preparation, but the following recipe is the simplest:

Egg Balls.

Mash four hard-cooked egg yolks to a paste, and mix the one uncooked egg yolk. Form into small balls. Roll them in uncooked egg white and then in flour, and poach in hot water. The paste should be seasoned to taste with pepper and salt and a dash of paprika, if desired.

Clear soups are also delicious with marrow balls. These add to the food value of the soup as well as giving the soup a distinctive flavor. They may be prepared by the following method:

Marrow Balls.

2 tablespoons melted marrow
1 egg
½ cup soft bread crumbs
salt and pepper
paprika

Strain melted marrow through cheesecloth, beat until creamy and then add beaten egg. Season with salt, pepper and paprika, add a little moist bread, and form into balls. Poach these little balls in boiling water, and add to soup when serving.

Plain consomme is tranformed into an intriguing soup when served with small cubes of custard royale. The custard is prepared by the following method:

Custard Royale.

2 egg yolks
1 egg
½ cup beef stock (canned stock, if preferred)
salt and pepper
cayenne

Beat the yolks of the eggs slightly and then beat into them the one whole egg. Add beef stock, a little salt, pepper and a few grains of cayenne. Pour the mixture into a shallow pan or dish, so that the custard will be about one-half inch deep. Set this pan into another holding water that is just below the boiling point and place both in a slow oven (300 degrees to 325 degrees F.) The custard should set without bubbling and without forming a brown crust. When cold, cut into fancy shapes with a vegetable cutter. Use care in placing these in the soup, so that they do not break. When used in consomme they give the name "Consomme Royale" to the soup.

Pulled bread is one of the best of soup accompaniments and can be served in place of melba toast or crackers. The recipe follows:

Pulled Bread.

Cut the crust from loaf of fresh bread. With two forks, pull the tender crumb into irregular pieces about a finger in length and somewhat wider. Place on a paper in a shallow pan and dry in a moderate oven (350 degrees to 400 degrees F.) with the oven door open. When each piece is dry to the center, close the door and bake until a delicate brown.

Drawn Butter Used For Delicious Sauce

Drawn butter makes a delicious sauce for vegetables or fish and can also be used as the basis for other more elaborate sauce.

Prepare sauce by the following method:

One-third cup butter
4 tablespoons flour
1 pint boiling water
¼ teaspoon salt

Make a roux of four tablespoons of the butter and all of the flour. Gradually add the boiling water, stirring constantly over hot water, until the sauce comes to the boiling point. Simmer until it is thick and smooth. When ready to serve, add salt and remaining butter in small bits, beating constantly.

Roe Shad Here to Bring Menu Variety

Florida waters yield the first shad of the season. This bony but delightful fish brings menu variety to thousands of tables, for it can be cooked in a number of intriguing ways. If you like shad roe as well as the shad select the fat roe shad pictured above; if not, choose the buck roe which is smaller but excellent for broiling or baking.

Delicate and Distinctive Flavor Rewards Labor of Preparation

Proper Splitting, Boning and Cleaning of Finny Specimen Is a Difficult and Hard Learned Art; Favorite Ways of Serving Fish and Roe Are Listed.

By Dorothea Duncan.

SHAD CAUGHT in Florida waters sail into Washington as the first real harbinger of spring. Here is one of Washington's favorite fish just waiting to grace your table. Though shad is the boniest of the bony in fishdom, it is a favorite of the epicure, for it possesses a delicate and distinctive flavor.

The woman who is not wise in the ways of cleaning and boning shad will do better with shad if she allows her marketman or fish dealer to do the preliminary preparation. She can learn more about the art of splitting, cleaning and boning a shad by careful watching than she ever could by following printed directions. Boning shad is an art that takes years to learn, and there are few who can really do it to perfection. The bones are so deeply lodged in the flesh of the fish and so near the skin that it is almost impossible to remove them without completely destroying the contour of the fish. It is a tiresome and worthless task for the housewife to try to remove all the shad bones, for after the first layer of visible bones are removed there are more deeply hidden in the flesh underneath.

Forget the obscurely placed bones then and remove merely the top layer, for it is more important to have the fish retain its contour than to have it completely boned and falling to pieces.

When you tackle the task of cleaning and partially boning the fish at home, remember that a long, slender, keen bladed knife and a pair of tweezers will help to make your job a good one.

Consider the two types of shad when you purchase the fish. If you like the roe be sure that you get roe shad, which is about twice as large and much plumper than the buck shad. Both are on the market at present.

Shad may be baked, broiled or planked, and the roe may be baked separately or with the fish, or it may be cooked for breakfast with eggs. The following recipes give several of the favorite ways of serving shad.

Planked Shad With Creamed Roe.

3-pound roe shad
3 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon finely chopped shallot
1½ tablespoons flour
One-third cup cream
2 egg yolks
Salt, pepper, lemon juice
½ cup buttered crumbs.

Clean and split a 3-pound shad. Put skin side down on a buttered plank, sprinkle with salt and pepper and brush over with melted butter. Parboil roe and mash. Melt butter, add shallot, and cook five minutes; add roe, sprinkle with flour and add cream gradually. Cook slowly five minutes, add egg yolks, and season highly with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Bake shad 25 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit), or broil under gas flame. Remove from oven and spread thin part with roe mixture, cover with buttered bread crumbs and return to oven to brown crumbs.

Planked shad without roe is prepared by the same method as the above and can be served with a garnish of lemon wedges, parsley and radishes.

To parboil the shad roe cook it from 20 minutes in water to cover with 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tablespoon vinegar; drain, cover with cold water, and let stand five minutes. Remove from cold water and use as suggested above or in any other way desired.

Baked Shad With Roe Sauce.

Clean and split a 3-pound shad. Place in an oiled dripping pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper, brush over with melted butter and bake 30 minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit). Serve with roe sauce, made by the following method:

Roe Sauce.

½ shad roe
2 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons white wine
5 tablespoons butter
Cayenne
4 tablespoons flour
1 cup chicken stock (may be canned)
¼ teaspoon beef extract

Put roe in small shallow baking pan. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, cayenne and nutmeg. Add 2 tablespoons butter and wine. Cover with buttered paper. Bake 30 minutes. Remove membranes. Brown remaining butter, add flour, continue browning. Pour on stock gradually, while stirring constantly. Bring to boiling point, add beef extract, roe and salt to taste.

Baked Shad Roe With Tomato Sauce.

Place parboiled shad roe in buttered pan with ¾ cup tomato sauce, made by following recipe. Bake 20 minutes in hot oven (400 F.) basting every five minutes. Remove to platter, and pour on ¾ cup tomato sauce. Excellent for breakfast or luncheon.

Tomato Sauce.

2 cups tomatoes, cooked or canned
1 slice onion
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper

Cook onion and tomato 15 mintes, and strain. Brown butter, add flour, and, when well blended, tomoto. Bring to boiling point.

Fried Shad Roe.

Parboil shad roe. Cut in pieces, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and brush with lemon juice. Dip in crumbs, egg and crumbs, fry in deep hot fat 390 degrees F.) and serve with tartar sauce.

Shad also may be baked with a bread dressing flavored lightly with onion, and should be served garnished with lemon wedges and fresh tomato slices.

Broiled shad is delicious when served with maitre d'hotel sauce or butter sauce. The appropriate garnish for broiled shad is parsley and radishes.

Maitre d'Hotel Sauce.

2 cups drawn butter sauce
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 egg yolks
Salt and pepper

Add lemon juice and chopped parsley to the drawn butter sauce. Let it cool slightly, add the beaten yolks and season with salt and pepper. Do not permit the sauce to boil after the addition of the egg yolk.

Rice, Sausage Appeal to All

Combination Is Delicious for Either Supper or Breakfast.

HAVE you ever thought of rice and sausage for breakfast? These two foods—one mild and the other tangy with flavor—make a superb combination. If your breakfast is on the light side and you can't induce yourself to try meat and cereal so early in the morning, chalk this dish up as one that will appeal to the masculine as well as feminine appetite any winter evening during the week.

Rice Sausage Surprise.

3 cups boiled rice
1 sweet pepper
1 small onion
1 pound tiny sausages
1 cup milk
butter

Remove the seeds from the pepper, chop and parboil. Add pepper and onion, chopped fine, to the rice. Mix thoroughly and put a layer in a buttered baking dish. Add a layer of the sausages, which have been partially cooked, and cover with rice. Pour milk over it all and dot with butter. Cover and bake for another half hour in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Makes 8 servings.

If the dish is to be served for breakfast, and it is especially recommended for Sunday morning before the game of golf or the horseback canter, omit the onions and peppers and use a cup or half cup or cooked tomato pulp instead.

Apples Make Many Tempting Winter Dishes

Fruit Combines Well With Eggs to Satisfy Both Eye and Palate.

THE apple with which Eve is popularly supposed to have tempted Adam is nothing to the luscious apple dishes that modern Eves set before their admiring Adams. But perhaps the original Eve had no recipes for apple meringues or apple souffles or apple custards or any of the other delicious apple concoctions.

Like many another fruit or vegetable, apples will combine with eggs to make both eye and palate satisfying dishes. Custard, always smoothly tempting, becomes luscious with the flavor of grated or steamed apples.

That queerly named but delightful dish known as apple flummery is particularily satisfying for winter days. To three cups of hot apple sauce, add two well beaten egg yolks. When the sauce is cool, beat the two egg whites stiff, add four tablespoons of sugar and fold lightly into apple mixture. Pile into parfait or sherbet glasses and chill. Top, just before serving, with a dash of grated nutmeg.

To serve on gingerbread, either hot or cold, nothing is better than apple frosting. Beat a cup of sugar, one egg white, and one-half cup of apple sauce until the mixture holds its shape. Then add one-half teaspoon of vanilla. If no apple sauce is at hand grate two large apples and fold the grated apple into the egg white and sugar which have been beaten together.

Apple meringue is beautiful. It is nutritious, too. A generous serving, with bread and butter and a glass of milk, makes a pleasing finale to a winter luncheon of soup and salad.

Apple Meringue.

8 apples
3 eggs
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Core apples and bake until tender. Make a custard of egg yolks, sugar, salt and vanilla. Pour over baked apples. Beat egg whites and two tablespoons sugar to a meringue; spread over apples and brown lightly.

On Sunday morning, or any other morning, for that matter, an apple omelet for breakfast starts the day perfectly. With fresh cinnamon rolls and a cup of steaming coffee, or hot cocoa for the youngsters, it makes a breakfast to remember. Make a plain omelet, and, when ready to serve, spread a cup of apple sauce (hot) over one-half of it; fold the omelet and serve at once.

Canned apple sauce heated and flavored with a dash of cinnamon may be used between the omelet layers as successfully as home-made apple sauce.

Eggs and apples combine again to make one of the most tempting of refrigerator cakes. This dessert is the type approved by the busy housewife who likes to get as much of the preparation for her evening meal done in the morning hours.

Apple Sauce Refrigerator Cake.

1 1-3 cups sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
2 cups apple sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Vanilla wafers

Blend condensed milk and lemon juice. Stir until mixture thickens. Fold in egg whites, which have been stiffly beaten and blend well. Line narrow oblong mold with wax paper. Place eight vanilla wafers on bottom of dish; cover with layer of lemon mixture. Add remaining lemon juice to apple sauce and place a layer on lemon mixture. Add another layer of wafers, alternating in this way until lemon mixture and apple sauce are used; finishing with vanilla wafers. Chill in refrigerator for 12 hours or longer. To serve, turn out on small platter and carefully remove wax paper. Cut in slices or squares to serve. Garnish with whipped cream. This serves eight.

Sunday Oyster Stew Breakfast Custom Fading

ANOTHER American tradition will be lost and forgotten within a few years unless a new generation learns the old New York and New England habit of serving oyster stew at Sunday breakfast.

The custom has lost ground for the past score years, but there are many older folk who still begin their Sunday with a steaming bowl of oyster stew.

Their reasons for preferring the stew are persuasive. Easy to make, the stew gave a festive air to the one breakfast of the week when the whole family was invariably present, and the cold trip to church required the fortification that only a piping hot oyster stew could give.

An elderly Connecticut woman, whose memory of the Sunday oyster stew is still fresh, has written to the Oyster Institute of North America telling her story of the custom. She is sorry to see the century-old custom vanish.

"In the town in which I was reared (in the Naugatuck Valley)," she wrote, "the serving of oyster stew for Sunday morning breakfast was most common among the townspeople—a sort of tradition. It was the one morning when the entire family sat at the breakfast table together, and to enjoy an old-fashioned oyster stew to its fullness, it must be served immediately after cooking"

Two Recipes For Refilling The Cookie Jar

Everyone in the Family Will Enjoy These Easily Made Delicacies.

LET'S give some thought to the cookie jar that stands empty upon the pantry shelf. If there are children in the house, it could be filled to the brim with old-fashioned sugar cookies, raisin cookies, cookies bursting with peanuts, jelly or coconut cookies—and they can all be made from the same simple dough. Then there are chocolate drops—everyone in the family can enjoy these. They can be tucked into the youngster's school lunch box, served with vanilla ice cream for dinner, or given a place at 4 o'clock when afternoon tea is in order.

When we think of filling the cookie box, we consider two things—the cookies must be easily and quickly prepared and they must be of a variety that every member of the family can enjoy, for there is no more intriguing pastime when you are hungry than raiding the cookie jar and looking up a tall glass of cold milk. You will find the following recipes perfect, for they produce just the type of cookies you would expect to find in a cookie jar.

Chocolate Drops.

1 cup brown sugar.
½ cup melted butter.
1 egg.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
½ cup evaporated milk.
1½ cups flour.
1 teaspoon soda.
4 tablespoons cocoa.
½ cup raisins.
½ cup chopped, salted pecans.

Blend sugar and butter. Add beaten egg and vanilla. Alternately add milk and dry ingredients sifted together. Fold in raisins and nuts. Drop by teaspoonfuls on an oiled cookie sheet. When done frost with a plain butter icing and sprinkle with coconut. The frosting may be omitted, if preferred.

Sugar Cookies.

2-3 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
3 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-3 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Cream the shortening and mix well with the sugar, add the beaten egg, then the flour, baking powder and salt sifted together, alternating with the milk. Roll and cut in desired shape. Sprinkle with sugar before baking. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees to 375 degrees F.) for 10 to 12 minutes.

These cookies may be topped with chopped peanuts, shredded coconut or raisins before baking, or if rolled slightly thicker than the usual sugar cookie may be made with a small depression in the center which can be filled with jelly.

Eggs Made Tempting.

Children who are tired of eggs may be induced to eat them if they are prepared as a beverage. Beat egg until thick and light, add sugar and vanilla to taste. Place mixture in tall glass, fill to the brim with milk and stir well.

A 'One Dish' Casserole Meal Means Winter Menu Economy

Less Dish Washing, Fewer Cooking Utensils Involved; Left-Overs Can Be Used; Time and Labor Saving Recipes Are Suggested.

WINTER WEATHER suggests casserole dishes, and casserole dishes mean economy menus—economy for the budget as well as economy of time and work.

You will find that a casserole dish means less dish washing, because it makes it possible to bring food to the table in the dish in which it was cooked. Frequently, also, it contains a "one dish meal" which eliminates all but one cooking utensil as well as two or three serving dishes.

The casserole takes care of left-overs, too. Palatable combinations may be concocted for the casserole from tough meats, which are the less expensive meats, and from an unlimited supply of fresh vegetables, leftover, canned, or dried vegetables.

The casserole takes care of an entire meal that may be cooked in the oven. If you wish to use your oven for some other dish at the same time it is possible if you have been careful in selecting a casserole with a lid that fits well into the dish and is almost airtight. Pudding or fruit or a batch of cookies, for example, may be baked right along with the casserole dish. If the oven must be kept very hot for the other dish, set the casserole in a pan of tepid water so that the contents never boil but simmer gently. If the water in the pan becomes too hot, remove a part, adding cool water in its place.

The following dishes may be baked a la casserole.

Steak En Casserole.

3 tablespoons butter or other fat
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups stock (canned meat broth may be used)
Salt
Parsley
Pepper
Turnip balls
Carrot balls
Potato balls
Small onions
2 pounds of 1½-inch steak

Make a brown sauce of the fat, flour, stock and seasoning. Add balls of turnip, carrot, potato and onion, which have been cut with a French vegetable cutter and been previously cooked in a little brown stock until tender. For each person, allow a half-dozen balls of each of these vegetables and 2 onions. Use stock in which vegetables have been cooked and as much more to make required amount for preparing sauce already mentioned. Keep the sauce hot while you pan broil the steak until about half done, then transfer steak to heated casserole, pour vegetables and sauce over meat, cover, and place in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until steak is sufficiently cooked. When ready to serve, sprinkle the steak with finely chopped parsley.

Casserole of Lamb.

8 slices of lamb
2 tablespoons melted butter or other fat
2 cups brown stock
1 pint vegetable balls
12 small onions
Seasoning

Cut thick slices from leg of lamb and sear, browning both sides. Brush with melted fat and place in casserole with one-half to one cup of brown stock. Cook on top of the stove or in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until tender, then add potato balls, carrot balls and onions, which have been previously cooked. Add more brown stock, salt, pepper and paprika.

This is an ideal recipe for the small family. Buy a leg of lamb, but have the butcher remove enough slices for the casserole. The recipe can be divided in two for the family of two. Have the roast leg of lamb one day and the baked casserole dish the next.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes.

6 potatoes
1 pound raw smoked ham
3 cups milk or more
1 green pepper (may be omitted)
Flour

Cover the bottom of the oiled baking dish with sliced, raw potatoes, sprinkle with flour, add inch-square pieces of ham. Repeat until the dish is full. Pour in as much milk as the dish will hold. Bake in a moderate over (350 to 400 degrees F.) until the potatoes are tender (1½ hours). Chopped green pepper adds to the flavor.

Bananas En Casserole.

6 small bananas
1 glass currant or grape jelly
1 cup boiling water
1 lemon

Peel the bananas. Remove the coarse threads and divide in quarters, cutting first crosswise and then lengthwise. Place in a greased casserole and pour over them a sauce made by melting the currant or grape jelly in the boiling water, and mixing with it the lemon juice. Cover the casserole and bake in a hot oven (400-450 degrees Fahrenheit) until the bananas are tender. The cover may be removed at the last moment and the bananas sprinkled with granulated sugar and allowed to brown slightly.

This work is carried on the PWA docket, and the money was allocated by that agency for curbs and gutters in the city; the city engineers' office requested the PWA to reallocate this grant of $100,000 to the needed improvement of Russell road, as the curb and guttering provided for in the grant could be made a self-liquidating work, inasmuch as property owners bear a portion of the cost of such work.

This re-allocation has been granted and sealed bids are to be opened in the city manager's office on January 29 next, the successful bidder to comply with the wage rate prescribed by the Emergency Administration of Public Works.

Park Plan Undisturbed By Scrapping of AAA

Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia Conservation and Development Commission, said yesterday a thorough check indicated the Supreme Court decision invalidating the agriculture adjustment act apparently would not disturb park land acquisition in the State under the AAA, according to the Associated Press.

Through the marginal land provisions of the resettlement section, the AAA is pushing acquisition of land for the authorized Appomattox and Manassas battlefield parks in Virginia. Anxiety over the far-reaching decision outlawing many AAA provisions brought Commissioner Hall here yesterday to make his own examination.

Herd Inspection Ends.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13.—Federal and State inspectors who have been conducting a campaign for the eradication of tuberculosis from Washington County dairy herds have completed a campaign to make this county a modified accredited tuberculosis-free area. About 25 farmers who raised objections to the test face quarantine of their farms.

Board to Push Reassessment For Arlington

Appointment of Public Utilities Commission Set for Today.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar 500. Clarendon, Va.

The enactment by the General Assembly now in session of a special act to permit Arlington County to have a special reassessment of real estate this year will be sought by the county board at its meeting to be held today at the courthouse.

There has been no assessment of real estate in the county since 1925, according to Commissioner of Revenue Harry K. Green. In 1931, there was appointed by the circuit court an equalization board. At that time, some adjustments were made, but it is considered that at this time there is needed a new assessment.

Among other matters to come before the board will be the appointment of the local public utilities commission. All present members of the commission have submitted their resignation which is the custom at the end of each year. The board will, according to the prepared calendar by the county manager, consider a number of requests for re-zoning.

There also will be a discussion on the proposed central postoffice for Arlington County and, it is expected, that plans will be made to co-operate with Representative Howard W. Smith who favors such a project.

Clarence R. Ahalt was elected president of the Virginia Title-Insurance Co. at the annual meeting held yesterday in the company offices opposite the Courthouse. Other officers elected were John G. Graham, first vice president; Walter M. Bastian, second vice president; A. L. Kelley, treasurer, and W. E. Vandeusen, secretary.

Members of the board of directors are Clarence R. Ahalt, Frank G. Campbell, John G. Graham, A. L. Kelley, Fletcher Kemp, Thomas A. Lee and Walter M. Bastian.

The directors announced the payment of the annual 4 per cent dividend as of January 1.

The treasurer's report showed the company to be in an excellent condition and that business for the year 1935 exceeded that of 1934.

Maxwell Girl's Lawyers Ready For Court Plea

New Evidence Assembled to Back Claim Blow Didn't Kill Father.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

The hopes of Edith Maxwell, mountaineer school teacher, for a chance to retell her story to another jury, will rest tomorrow with Circuit Court Judge H. A. A. Skeen, who will consider her petition for a new trial.

The plea is the only immediate hope of vindication for the 21-year-old girl who faces 25 years in prison for allegedly killing her drink-crazed father with a slipper, as she resisted an attack by him.

A batch of evidence, the nature of which is secret, has been assembled by Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, an outstanding Virginia criminal lawyer retained by The Post, who will make the appeal for the new trial.

As a colleague, he will have M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, who will argue that the constitutional rights of the girl were violated by a Virginia statute which forbids women to sit on grand and trial juries.

New Evidence Claimed.

Smith, it is expected, will argue the strictly criminal aspects of the case, and his plea is expected to revolve about recently discovered evidence that the father did not die from the blows struck by his daughter, but from natural causes induced by heavy drinking.

The hearing on the motion will be before Judge Skeen, who presided at the trial; and who, on December 10, denied a previous request for a new trial.

Some measure of hope was held out to the girl on December 31, when the jurist took under advisement the second petition, and extended the term of court until tomorrow.

Three points are being urged by the defense attorneys in the motion. They are:

1. That a microscopic study of the brain of Maxwell would reveal that he did not die from the slipper blows.

2. That the "short form of indictment" under which the girl was tried is unconstitutional.

3. That the Virginia statute which forbids women to sit on trial and grand juries is unconstitutional.

In support of the first contention, the defense attorneys have assembled affidavits from outstanding pathologists who studied the report of the autopsy on Trigg Maxwell and concluded that death was not caused by the slipper blows.

Evidence assembled purports to show that Maxwell had complained to friends in the few months preceding his death that he had pains about the heart. Another affidavit will show that two days before his death he was rejected as an insurance risk because of his ailing heart.

Other data has been gathered to show that at least a half dozen of his close relatives have died suddenly in the last three years from apoplexy and heart disease.

The theory upon which the defense is proceeding is that Maxwell died from natural causes induced by drinking and the black fury into which he whipped himself when his daughter came in after midnight last July 21.

Her father attacked her with a knife and later with a chair, and the girl struck him with a slipper after he had thrown her to the floor and was banging her head on the floor of the house in which the Maxwells lived, way back in the Cumberland Mountains.

The Edith Maxwell Defense Fund, being collected by The Post, yesterday grew to $815.08.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

REPRESENTATIVES of more than 1,000 AAA employes have adopted a program to protect the interest of the AAA personnel in the face of dissolution following the Supreme Court decision. The thousand or more employes are members of the three units of the American Federation of Government Employes, Lodges 116, 170 and 214.

BAKER.

The program agreed upon for concerted action follows:

Dismissals shall be based upon seniority only.

Thirty days dismissal notice shall be granted, plus accrued annual leave.

Indefinite or permanent appointments shall be given to all employes who have served for six months or more, in order to enable such employes to secure equalities as to annual leave and sick leave and to place employes in a position to obtain monetary reimbursement for any time or salary lost while working as a temporary employe.

No dismantling of the staff shall be made so as to entail overtime by the employes who remain.

Certification of employes, who are threatened with dismissals, shall be made by the personnel officers of the AAA to the Civil Service Reemployment Register and to the Replacement Agency, located in the WPA, depending upon the employe's status.

AAA employes shall be given preferential treatment in newly created or replacement positions for which they qualify.

Leaders in adopting this program include Benn Allen, president of Lodge, No. 170; Thomas Cummings, president of Lodge 214; J. E. Dwyer, President of Lodge 116; Miss Marvel Keller, Edgar M. Jones, Roland Adkins, Eunice Eaton, A. Lubore, Adolph Green, Mrs. Sadie H. Henry, Lillian Finkelstein, Daniel Kessler, John H. Muzzy, Jack Minicker, Miss Ida Klaus, Cecelia Lipkin, James Radabaugh, Paul Bradshaw and Jesse Harry.

Mrs. Judson Cobb (P), Agriculture, will be hostess tonight to the Washington Alumnae of Beta Sigma Omicron, national sorority.

Phillips' Work Recognized.

In the story on the new Government Printing Office Style Manual, we inadvertently omitted the name of James Harry Phillips (C), as one of the compilers. As foreman of the Proof Section, his co-operation and interest were vital to the entire achievement. We congratulate Mr. Phillips for his participation in an admirable project!

William F. Hohurst (F), War, is inventor of a surface drainage system for streets, alleys and highways. The system is said to take care of the drainage principally from the middle of the thoroughfare.

TOMORROW night, employes of Veterans' Administration will be guests at a dance and elaborate program of entertainment at the Central Y. M. C. A. with members of Veterans' Administration Lodge, No. 17, American Federation of Government Employes, as hosts. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator, is scheduled to deliver a brief address on "Ideals of Civil Service."

Under direction of Ira D. Scott (F), lodge president, several committees report that plans are complete for the dance, entertainment, speaking, cards and reception. Miss Rosalie Legge (C), has been designated as interlocutor and she also takes part in other numbers on the program. Mrs. Eugenia Z. Rollins and Miss Bernice Norris will be hostesses.

Architects Will Meet.

Government architects are invited to attend the meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Architectural Guild of America at 7:30 p. m. today at Central High School, according to John F. St. George (C), guild official.

The guild was formed in New York in 1933 and its membership extends to every section of the country. While most of its activities have centered on the improvement of the economic status of architectural men on emergency work, it has carried on a successful program of civic and professional work and developed as a permanent association for architectural men who are not employers.

The guild has opposed many conditions and policies regarded as detrimental to the interests of the employe, ranging from the NRA architect's code to the alleged recent attempt to farm out relief architects to private firms, receiving regular architectural fees.

Mrs. Gertrude Scott (C), Veterans' Administration, secretary-treasurer of the California State Society, urges all Californians in Government service to affiliate with the society. Mrs. Scott also invites all Golden State people to attend the Congressional reception to be held at the Raleigh Hotel Saturday night.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, George Givot, Liazeed Arabian Troupe and other acts; screen, Jean Harlow and Spencer Tracy in "Riffraff"); or to P, Loew's Palace (Ronald Colman, Elizabeth Allen and Edna Mae Oliver in "A Tale of Two Cities"); or to C, Loew's Columbia (Will Rogers in "Old Kentucky").

Three New Employe Units.

Chartering of three new local unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes was announced last night by N. F. F. E. Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude McNally, who pointed out that the federation is steadily nearing its goal of 100,000 members and 1,000 local unions.

The new units are No. 549, Nashville; No. 550, West Los Angeles, and No. 551, Pomona, Calif. The Nashville local is composed of employes of the custodial service; Local 550 are employes of the Veterans' Administration, and the Pomona group is composed of Weather Bureau, Bureau of Plant Industry and agricultural engineering workers.

Harris & Ewing.

MISS ROSALIE LEGGE, of Veterans Administration, who will take a prominent part in the program of dancing, entertainment and reception of Veterans' Administration employes tomorrow night at the Y. M. C. A.

Apportionment Exemption.

Q. Do appointments of veterans to civil service positions fall within the apportionment regulations?—Mrs. Marie H. Justin (F).

A. The appointment of persons granted veteran preference is made without regard to apportionment. Similarly, the transfer of such persons is authorized without regard to whether the State of which they are legal residents is in excess of its share of apportioned appointments. For transfer they are not required to prove residence, and their appointments and transfers are not charged to apportionment. A statement is required, however, from the employe or from the department in which he is employed as to the State claimed as legal residence.

On The Air Today

A REMARKABLE demonstration of the state of copyright affairs, growing out of the secession of Warner Brothers from Ascap, was given Sunday night by WJSV. There may have been others during the day's broadcasting but two notable ones came to this writer's attention.

Ed McConnell first fell afoul of the extreme caution guiding the broadcast industry's activities since the first of the year when Warner Brothers withdrew thousands of songs from radio use. McConnell was taken off the air twice while a stand-by pianist filled in until the offending song was completed.

At midnight, the La Paree Midnight Skyride was shot full of holes as questioned musical numbers were begun. The vigilance maintained by WJSV, in seeing that no selections are played that might possibly result in copyright suits, was demonstrated when a tune written by a member of La Paree Orchestra particularly for Marie Fowler's use was cut off the air. A phonograph record filled in until Miss Fowler had completed the number.

If the La Paree failed to supply the station with a list of numbers to be played, or changed the numbers after the list was submitted, the interruptions can be explained. But it was something of a surprise when McConnell's program was interrupted in two consecutive numbers. Certainly on a network commercial show the artist's numbers should have been submitted and approved before the program was ready for the air.

* * * *

Radio Row reports that several outstanding song authors have enrolled with Ascap, making available to radio all tunes written in the future. Included are George Gershwin, Cole Porter, Arthur Schwartz, Howard Dietz, Sigmund Romberg, Noel Coward and others. Some of their numbers in current shows are usable but others, now controlled by Warner, are not.

Right now, I would be willing to trade "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round," which unfortunately bears no copyright restrictions, to Warner Brothers for three broken-down tunes of 1913.

Today's features:

Transit Line Plans $2,727,000 Outlay

The Capital Transit Co. this year will spend $2,727,000 more for improvements of its rail and bus services, according to reports laid before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday by company officials.

Since the street railway merger became effective December 1, 1935, the concern has spent $5,061,000 for improvements of its services, the commission has been informed. The program of improvements for 1936, the commission has been told, provides for the following:

Purchase of 35 additional buses at a cost of $259,600; establishment of a new bus garage, $350,000; track changes for rerouting, $967,000; to complete the 1935 track renewal program, $188,000; to carry out the 1936 track renewal program, $600,000; street car improvements, $317,000, and other work, $400,500.

Eastman Tells of Need For Marine Regulations

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Government regulation of water transportation is as necessary as regulation of rail and motor carriers, Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Co-ordinator of Transportation, told the convention of the Association of Marine Terminal Operators here today.

The Government finds it necessary, he said, to improve transportation conditions throughout the country and to do this must consider not only the railroads but "must start underground with pipe lines, take a good view of the highways, look out on the water and end up in the air."

Culbertson on Bridge

Too Many Trumps.

A hand recently was sent to me with the request that I should approve or condemn the penalty double of the final contract, which was stated to be four spades; the intermediate bidding was left to my imagination.

Accustomed as I am to bridge atrocities, I never have become sufficiently hardened to look upon them with professional indifference. This time I actually winced when a glance at the hand revealed that 12 tricks were certain in no-trump! How four spades could have been selected will have to remain one of life's mysteries.

South, dealer.

	NORTH ♠ 10 5 4 ♥ 7 5 3 ♦ A K Q 8 2 ♣ K 9
WEST ♠ Q J 9 8 3 2 ♥ 10 9 4 ♦ 9 3 ♣ 10 4		EAST ♠ None ♥ A 8 6 2 ♦ 10 6 5 4 ♣ 8 7 6 3 2
	SOUTH ♠ A K 7 6 ♥ K Q J ♦ J 7 ♣ A Q J 5

The bidding should have been:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 dmnds.	Pass
4 no trump	Pass	5 dmnds.	Pass
6 no trump [final bid]

At the remarkable contract of four spades the play was extremely interesting.

West made the excellent opening lead of the trump queen. (Holding six trumps, this almost always is the best attack.) South won the ace and cleared away the ace of hearts. Then South cashed his remaining hearts and two of dummy's top diamonds, after which the king and the small club were led, placing the lead in South. At this stage the situation was:

	NORTH ♠ 10 5 ♥ None ♦ Q 3 2 ♣ None
WEST ♠ J 9 8 3 ♥ None ♦ None ♣ None		EAST ♠ None ♥ 8 ♦ 10 6 ♣ 5 7
	SOUTH ♠ A 7 6 ♥ None ♦ None ♣ Q J

On the lead of he club queen West faced a hopeless proposition. In actual fact it did not matter whether he ruffed with the jack, the nine or the deuce—he could not win more than two tricks! If the jack were selected, North would, of course, discard a diamond. Now the spade nine return would be won by North's ten, the queen of diamonds led, and South's last club discarded while West ruffed. This would result in West leading from his 8-3 up to declarer's A-7. Similarly, if West ruffed the club with the nine, dummy's ten would over-ruff and the diamond be led for a club discard. West would ruff and have left the J 8 3 of trump to South's A 7 6—two tricks for South.

The best play for West would be to ruff with a low trump. Even this, however, would be unavailing. North would over-ruff with the five and lead a diamond, which South would ruff with the ace! Now the last club lead would assure dummy's spade ten of winning the third trick of the last five.

Thief Attacks Patient.

James B. Ulentine, 32, a patient at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, was assaulted and robbed of his overcoat and $2 yesterday by a colored man while walking near the hospital grounds. Ulentine told police his assailant struck him from behind and threw him to the ground. The robber wore blue overalls, he said.

First Lady Patroness.

Mrs. Franklyn D. Roosevelt was announced yesterday as a patroness of an indoor carnical, "The Kermess," to be presented February 1 to 9 by the combined councils of the Knights of Columbus of Washington. Mrs. Roosevelt, it was announced, will attend the bazaar at 9 p. m., February 3.

Horner to Remove Foes From Pay Roll

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 13 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner opened fire with his patronage power today against the Democratic organization machine, which voted to replace him as head of the State ticket by Dr. Herman N. Bundsen, Chicago vote-getter.

Although only one officeholder was discharged openly during the day, friends of the Governor said a score or more important State posts which have been held by allies of his intra-party enemies would be vacated in the next few days.

The political heads scheduled to roll off the pay roll are employes of State departments sponsored by leaders who ranged themselves on the side of the Cook County organization, credited with initiating the move to oust Horner from the 1936 ticket.

State house statisticians here estimated Horner had direct control of 12,000 out of the estimated 20,000 employes and that this authority would be wielded fully against his enemies.

Castle Heads Fund.

William R. Castle, jr., Undersecretary of State, was named yesterday as chairman of Harvard University's 300th anniversary fund for Washington, Virginia and West Virginia. An international gathering of alumni will celebrate the anniversary next September.

Ruhland Raps Low District Health Outlay

Tells Graduate Nurses City Is Far Under Minimums.

Examining Board Hits Training Schools; Election Held.

Citing figures that he said any business man could understand, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, last night told the Graduate Nurses Associatoin of the District of Columbia that public health expenditures here fell below 50 per cent of minimum standards.

His speech climaxed the opening day of the association's annual business meeting at National Red Cross headquarters.

The standards, he explained, had been drawn up by the American Public Health Association and were based on the experience of cities both in this country and Canada.

In giving specific examples, he said, the standard called for a minimum expenditure of between 9 and 10 cents per capita for tuberculosis prevention. In this city, he said, we spend 4 cents, or less than one-half.

"The standard for all the services combined," he concluded, "is an expense of $2 to $2.50 per capita. We do not spend quite $1. It is very true, as a health authority once put it, that a city can have as low a death rate as it is willing to pay for."

Incompetent Nurses Hit.

Tendency of the District's nine credited nursing schools to graduate students who "should never have been accepted" was scored in a report by the nurses' examining board before the morning session.

This meeting also indorsed the eight-hour day for private duty nurses. Additional discussion of the shorter work day will feature today's session.

The examining board's opinion concerning nurses' training schools, presented by Mrs. Bertha M. Seering, pointed out that 34 per cent of the candidates who came before the board last October failed.

The small number of points made in anatomy and physiology proved, Mrs. Seering said, the lack of equipment for teaching those two subjects in some of the schools.

"Of the students who took the examination a second time, 38 per cent failed, which indicates that nurses who should never have been accepted as students are being graduated," she said.

The board advised as one remedy for the situation the possession by each hospital training school of a stabilized staff of general duty nurses so students my be relieved of the heavy nursing load they are now carrying.

Heavy at Gallinger.

This load, the report said, is particularly heavy at Gallinger Municipal Hospital because of lack of funds with which to provide an adequate staff.

Dr. A. G. Giliam, assistant surgeon of the United States Public Health Service, told the 100 or so members at the meeting yesterday morning that most communicable diseases today are not influenced by enviranmental consideration.

"There is no reason to believe," he said, "that we can prevent people becoming infected with the organisms of the common cold, influenza, poliomyelitis, meningitis, measles, etc., since there is usually no specific means of transfer of these infections save the contact of ordinary human intercourse."

"Any hope of control of these diseases lies in our ability to minimize the consequences of infection."

Dr. Gilliam then emphasized the value of vaccination and immunization in minimizing those consequences in such diseases as smallpov and diphtheria.

Piney Branch Citizens Back Delegate Bill of Vandenberg

It Is Held Logical Reply to Local Demand for for Suffrage.

The Piney Branch Citizens Association last night indorsed the bill of Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that one of the three District Commissioners be made a delegate to the House of Representatives, with authority to speak on local matters, but without the right to vote.

The consensus among the association members was that Vandenberg's plant was the logical answer to the demand that the District be given a voice, if not a vote, in local affairs in Congress.

The association has opposed the proposal that District residents be given a vote on the ground that the city is now well-enoungh governed. It also is opposed to the suggestion of Commissioner George E. Allen that machinery be set up here for a referendum on important local questions. This system, the members feel, would call for an expenditure of money that could be used to better advantage for something else.

Mooney Indorsed

Resolutions urging the reappointment of William M. Mooney as postmaster of Washington were adopted by the Congress Heights Citizens Association. They will be sent to President Roosevelt, Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee.

In another resolution the association indicated that it would seek reform in the sale of real estate for taxes. Another matter discussed was the placing of bus stops, members of the association having the belief that stops should be on the far side of intersections, thus giving buses the advantage of the intersection to drive in parallel to the curb.

Six new members were accepted. The association has take nin 35 new members in the past two months and hopes to have a membership of 150 by March.

Playground Fund Asked

Speaking before the Kalorama Citizens Association, Miss Sibyl Baker, supervisor of the Playground Department, expressed the hope that a deficiency appropriation would be provided for opening of school playgrounds this spring.

Miss Baker said that as the playgrounds appropriation now stood no provision had been made for school playground facilities.

The association indorsed the lunacy bill, soon to come before the Senate, which provides that a committee of medical experts supplant lay juries in deciding insanity cases.

The body also indorsed the resolution of the Southwest Citizens asking that an appropriation be made for the purchase of a site for a new Jefferson Junior High School and went on record in favor of reappointment of Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Permits Opposed

The Park View Citizens Association protested against the granting of building permits which allow the remodeling of ordinary row houses and their conversion into multiple apartment houses.

These multiple apartment houses, it was said, create a fire hazard, menace health and tend to create a slum district.

The proposal of Commissioner George E. Allen for referendums on local questions was referred to a committee for study, although sentiment appeared to be against it. F. S. Walker and George Frech were appointed a committee to plan a membership drive. John S. Cole was named as the Park Vitw representative on an advisory committee for the Playground Department.

Back Inebriates Farm

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen's proposed bill to establish a farm for the rehabilitation of inebriates was indorsed by hte Stanton Park Citizens Association. This action was taken on the opinion that habitual drunkenness is a disease and should be treated as such.

Commissioner George E. Allen's proposal to give citizens of the District the right of referendum was also indorsed. The group approved of this bill on the ground it wuold be a "step in the right direction" toward getitng full suffrage for Washingtonians.

Other business of the organization included expression of opposition to the prohibition of night parking on Massachusetts avenue northeast. Failure of the District to remove snow from that highway caused expression of this opinion. The prohibition has been placed on many highways to facilitate snow removal.

Continue Fight

The Southeast Business Mens Association, which has conducted a fight for removal of the Southeast garbage disposal plant to another location, opposed the official recommendation that the plant be improved and kept on the same site.

The association voted to send a delegate to the crime commission dinner at the Mayflower Hotel Thursday night.

The group also took action opposing the bill in Congress which would route street cars away from the Capitol and urging that a traffic study be made to eliminate hazards on Pennsylvania avenue southeast, it being pointed out that four persons have been killed on the street within a year.

Clark Re-elected

Thomas E Clark was re-elected president of the Cleveland Park Business Association which held its annual meeting and dinner at the Kennedy-Warren. Others elected E. C. Snyder, vice president; J. B. Keating, secretary, and T. E. Norris, treasurer.

Rites for 2 Suicide Victims Are Today

The members of the National Council for the Prevention of War will attend funeral services today for Mrs. Capitola W. Koltes, who, with her son, Robert Williams Ashworth, committed suicide last Friday.

The mother and son died from poison. The bodies of the mother, who was an active pacifist, and the son, who was a sophomore at George Washington University, were cremated yesterday.

A member of the council will speak at the services, which are to be held at 5 p. m. in the Lee funeral home. Fear that the son would be drawn into war was given as the reason for the suicide pact.

Editor Thorpe Raps Meddling Of Government

Tells Advertising Club That Social Theorists Foster Paternalism.

Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business, last night laid a large part of the blame for the depression at the door of Government interference.

In an epigrammatic speech before 150 dinner guests of the Graphic Arts Association and the Advertising Club of Washington, he castigated Congress, special theorists and paternalism.

The dinner was held at the Raleigh Hotel to open a preview of the All-Media Advertising Exhibit created by the Direct Mail Advertising Association. It is now open to the public in the hotel's ballroom.

"If democracy is on trial today," Thorpe said, "it is because of such proposals to make Government a social agency, repudiating a 150-year policy that Government should only referee the competitive contests of its citizens.

Paternalism Assailed.

"How is it that the very milk of human kindness become the pap of paternalism? The answer, in large part, is due to the enthusiasm of vocal blocs and the persistence of our social theorists.

"This America of ours was not originally written down as the land of the free and the home of the apathetic, yet newspapers daily remind us that the chief product of government is more government."

The answer to all this, Thorpe asserted, is salesmanship.

"The plain and simple fact," he told his listeners, "is that the United States of America is kept a oing concern through the indestructible spirit of you Business Ambassadors of the more abundant life. You create and conserve employment. You are the walking delegates of pay rolls, profits and dividends. You are the dependable gyroscopes of economic equilibrium.

"We should all be salesmen of America," he concluded. "Sell them courage, assurance, balance, reason and vision.

Freeman Presides.

Presiding at the meeting was W. N. Freeman, president of the Graphic Arts Association. William M. Mooney, Washington postmaster, welcomed the out-of-town guests and the exhibit.

The exhibit, which will be open to the public during the next three days from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., contains displays of the campaigns of 50 leading advertisers throughout the Nation, using examples of all types of media. It is on a country-wide tour and will visit Detroit after it leaves the Raleigh Thursday night.

At a luncheon today Howard P. Hovde, Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania, wil ltalk on "Advertising as a Pacemaker for Business."

Bad Choice

Beggar Asks Aid of Judge, Gets 25 Days.

"Brother can you spare a dime?"

"No, and you will face me in Police Court Tuesday."

And Earl Wray, of Philadelphia, was arraigned yesterday before Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey on charges of soliciting alms and being intoxicated.

Wray was arrested Sunday for begging on Fourteenth street northwest. In court, he admitted he was drunk, but denied he was begging.

"Didn't you ask me for money on L street Sunday morning?" Judge Casey asked Wray. "I told you then you would be down here."

"I don't remember, your honor."

"Well, I remember," said the judge. "And I think we'll give your memory a chance to recuperate. $10 or 10 days on the drunk charge and $15 or 15 days for soliciting alms."

Child Artist, Lawyer Bills Meet Defeat

House Votes Down Two D. C. Measures and Passes Seven.

Vocational Teachers' Pay Raise Indorsed and Bribe Act Wins.

By James D. Secrest.

With ears cocked for what the voters back home might say, the House yesterday exercised its authority to legislate for the National Capital and overwhelmingly defeated two purely local measures indorsed by civic agencies. The bills aimed to set up qaulifications for lawyers and to permit child artists to papear on the Washington stage under supervision.

Sevent other measures, three of them private in nature, were passed on the first District day of the session without debate. Among these two recommended last year by the sub-committee on crime to punish bribers and to step up the penalties for habitual criminals.

The other successful bills authorize the health officer to open graves when death was caused by certain contagious diseases and to raise the status of vocatoinal schools to that of junior high schools.

Most of the afternoon was occupied with debate on the lawyers and the child performer bills. The former was defeated by a loud voice vote by tsriking out the enacting lcause, while the second was beaten on a roll-call vote of 227 to 68.

Indorsed by District.

The measure to establish qualifications for lawyers had passed the Senate and was indorsed strongly b ythe District Bar Association. Because of the House action yesterday it may not be brought up again the Seventy-fourth Congres.

During an hour's debate in which much misinformation was broadcast, a half dozen members pounced upo nthe bill o nthe ground that it would bar their constituent attorneys from appearing in District courts, would bar members themselves from representing constituents, and would give Washington lawyers a monopoly of all legal busines flowing into the National Capital.

Vainly did Representatives Palmisano (Democrat), of Marylatd, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, lawyer-members of the committee, seek to pint ut the false statements and the prper safeguards.

The bill to permit children performers to appear in local theaters under permit of the Board of Education had been pending in Congress for six years but yesterday was the first time it was brought to a vote.

To the dismay of its author, Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, who comes from a labor district, the basis of attack was that the measure would break down guards against child labor in general.

Claims Facts Distorted.

"Did you ever hear such a distortion of facts?" Mrs. Norton asked newspapermen after the House adjourned.

Mrs. Norton sought to explain that the purpose and effect of the bill were grossly misunderstood and that it was copied after the New York statute. She said theater owners had told her not more than two dozen children would be affected each year, but that the legislation, if enacted, would allow outstanding productions in which children appear and musical prodigies to perform on Washington stages.

One of the crime curbing bills provide that persons convicted of felonies for the second and third times shall be imprisoned for the maximum senetnce and for not less than 15 years, respectively.

The other is designed to make the person who offers a bribe equally guilty with anyone who accepts a bribe. At present there is no suhc statute in the District code.

The vocational schools measure will raise the salaries of about two dozen teachers and cost $7,500 a year.

The measure to authorize the health officer to issue permits for the opening of graves under certai nconditions has passed the House anw now goes to the Senate, alang with bills to authorize the issuance of healing arts licenses to Arthur B. Walker, Pak Chue Chan and Ronald A. Cox.

Dinner of Hotel Men Is Tribute to Harnett

A testimonial dinner was given last night in the Shoreham Hotel in recognition of the service of Arthur J. Harnett, retiring president, with the Hotel Association of Washington.

Edward W. Martin, the new president, presided. The committee was composed of James T. Howard, Ralph T. Pollio, Thomas D. Carson, Charles L. Hutchinson and L. Gardner Moore.

Faith Grows in Slump, Archbishop Declares

Archbishop Michael J. Curley at banquet.

Tells Severn Retreatants Religion Languished in Boom Years.

Religion has advanced substantialy during the depression, Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, declared last night at a dinner of the Washing League of Manresa on the Severn Retreatants in the Mayflower Hotel.

Nearly 1,000 laymen and clergymen attended and heard the prelate lauded by other speakers for his work in behalf of the Severn retreat. The archbishop was the honor guest.

The so-called good years before 1929 actually were bad years and the so-called bad years of the depression were good years, the archbishop said in his analysis of modern conditions from a standpoint of religion.

"The good years were bad years," he explained, "because millions of people gave themselves up to the accumulation of money. The bad years really were good years. The Catholic Church in this Nation had more converts in the years of the depression than in a similar period prior to 1929."

Advantages at Retreat.

Curley extolled the advantages which flow from "prayer and meditation on things worth while" at the Severn retreat.

"Many a man," he said, "went to Manresa burdened and returned to Washington light-heated."

Contributions of the Catholic Church and its religious orders to education, science, music, literature and government were reviewed by Representative Clare G. Fenerty (Republican), of Pennsylvania.

"Humanity," he said, "goes wandering through the world today like a lost child looking for light. Let us show men the divinity of the faith that is in us."

The Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., director of Manresa-on-the-Severn, told of the purposes of the retreat and praised Archbishop Curley for his "great and courageous" help.

Congress Members Attend.

A program of songs was offered by George H. O'Connor, Bernard Fitzgerald, Fred East, William Raymond, William Shanahan and Edward C. Stefe. Sam Holland's orchestra played.

Leo A. Codd was the toastmaster.

Among the guests were more than two-score members of Congress, Auxiliary Bishop John M. McNamara, pastor of St. Gabriel's Church; the Rev. A. A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, and the Rev. P. J. McCormick, acting president of Catholic University.

Walter D. Beller was general chairman of the arrangements committee and Charles P. Maloney vice chairman. Committee chairmen included Earl P. Ready, tickets; John C. Gartland, publicity; James B. Flynn, treasurer; J. Hadley Doyle, reception; Mr. O'Connor, entertainment; Rossa F. Downing, speakers; Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, dinner; John C. Brennan, seats; William Joseph Neale, investigation to special guests, and Camden R. McAtee, secretary.

Rep. Randolph Plans to Urge 2 Airport Sites

Will Call Sub-Committee to Indorse Proposal for Dual Fields.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, announced late yesterday that he would call together this morning the sub-committee which held hearings last session on District airport sites and recommend that it indorse the dual airport proposad of the Department of Commerce.

The sub-committee last year strongly denounced the Gravelly Point site, and recommended that a commission be created to select a site. fter the bill passed the House it became snarled in congerence as the Senate insisted that the President be allowed to name whomever he pleases on the commission.

Randolph said he believed the suggestion of Assistant Secretary of Commerce Johnson that both sites which have figured most prominently in local airport discussion be developed with WPA or PWA funds is a sound solution to the 10-year-old problem. The sites are Washington Airport and Gravelly Point.

Another member of the sub-committee, who took a prominent role n last year's hearings, Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, said he favors the idea of a Federal agency taking the initiative, but he does not approve of the plan to establish two airports so close together.

Meanwhile, no move has been made to revice the airport bill left hanging in conference last session.

Studebaker Says U. Isn't Well Schooled

The biggest proble min America today is "to make this thing they call democracy work," Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, told volunteer social workers at the third of a series of lectures arranged by the Council of Social Agencies.

He explained the value of a community forum in promoting adult education. The farm idea, he said, is designed to facilitate the exchange of ideas and their transmission from one person to another.

The average American is not well schooled, he pointed out. Out of 75,000,000 adults in this country, 64,000,000 have not completed high school and half of that number have not even gone through grade school. There are 40,000,000 who have no public library facilities near their homes.

Leave Bills Sure to Pass, A.F.G.E. Told

Rep. Ramspeck Declares Senate Will Approve Measure Soon.

Civil Service Is Lauded at Internal Revenue Lodge Rally.

The bills to give Federal workers 30 days annual leave and to make sick leave cumulative will soon be passed by the Senate, Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, predicted last night.

Cheers greeted thsi statement by the Georgian, who was speaking at the National Civil Service Week mass meeting held by Internal Revenue Lodge, No. 47, American Federation of Government Employes, in the Labor-Interstate Commerce auditorium.

Ramspeck said that civil service has many advantages over other systems of recruiting Government workers, and he advised civil service workers to keep up their contacts back home, pointing out that they should exercise their right to vote as they please. He said civil service conditions have advanced greatly in his own experience, but that public sentiment in favor of the merit system had not gone forward as rapidly as had the merit system itself.

Criticizes Spoils System.

Although he characterized himself a "New Dealer," Ramspeck offered some criticisms of the "half-breed spoils system" which he said had grown up under the present Administration. Job-traffic, on the basis of college, fraternal, church or family relationships, he said, was more detrimental than frank political spoilsmanship. The best method of filling all jobs, not of policy-forming nature, he said, is the civil service, and as chairman of the Civil Service Committee he pledged himself to work for extension of the merit system.

Discussing pending legislation, he first brought the message regarding the leave bills, and then stated that his committee expects to work out some acceptable compromise regarding 30-year optional retirement, and a divided annuity, at the option of the employe, which would include another life than his own—thus providing for widows' pensions. He could offer no assurances as to classification for the field services, but declared his interest in it and his hope to make the merit system more definitely a career service.

Randolph, Others Speak.

Other speakers included Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, who said that no other country has a more capable civil service; Dr. Leonard D. White, of the Civil Service Commission, who held that the merit system should apply generally throughout the service; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, of the commission, who said that the merit system appeals strongly to women because it means equal pay for equal work, and President Harry B. Mitchell, of the Civil Service Commission, who spoke of the harmonious working of the commission and of its interest in promoting the civil service.

Mitchell quoted Glenn A. Bowers, industrial expert for the Rockefeller interests, in reply to occasional criticism that Government workers in the civil service are not efficient. Bowers, he said, is probably the foremost authority on this particular problem, and he holds the Government employes in general are more efficient than those in private industry.

Ira Y. Bain, national vice president of the American Federation of Government Employes, introduced the speakers after the meeting had been turned over to him by President Charles T. Hoffman, of Internal Revenue Lodge. Ntional officers of the federation were introduced, including President E. Claude Babcock, Secretary Berniece B. Heffner, Treasurer Cecil E. Custer, Vice Presidents Michel D. Schaefer and G. Carroll Dimond, and Charter President David R. Glass.

Police on Trail of 'Key Man' Who 'Bossed' 40 Robberies Here

Detectives yesterday were on the trail of a highly organized band of housebreakers who have looted two-score homes and business establishments in the city within recent months.

The gang was said to be led by a white man. It included seven colored men who were the actual burglars, according to one of the colored members who is now in custody.

This man, who is held for grand jury action on bond of $10,000 on charges of grand larceny, claimed that the white gang leader, planned the burglaries, pointed out the prospective places, drove the getaway car and kept a book with records of proceeds, paying off the gang members every week.

He is Clarence N. Miller, 23, no fixed address. Police said he has admitted participating in more than a score of the band's depredations.

Tonight at police headquarters the detective bureau will put on one of its biggest shows, a line-up to which 200 persons, either witnesses to or victims of recent robberies will have a chance to pick out the men who robbed them. Twenty-two suspects will be in the "line-up."

Death of Samuel Lionel "Roxy" Rothafel Removes Towering Figure From Theater

Memories Are Awakened of an Old Friendship

Had Its Genesis in Tropics; Mr. Gillette to Return; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"I knew him when."

That, I suspect, is the customary thing to be said about a distinctive and distinguished personality in what is quaintly termed "show business" when that personality passes on into that limbo of the unknown whence none of us, once across the Styx on Mr. Charon's old ferry, ever returns.

But I did know Samuel Lionel Rothapfel—that was the spelling of the name before the Great War made it seem expedient to de-Germanize it by omitting the "p" and making it merely Rothafel. The "Roxy" did not come along as a familiar and affectionate nickname until years later—and, at that, never was employed by this writer in addressing an old friend.

To me, "Roxy" always was "Sam." To Sam your present writer always was "Ding-Dong."

That practically made it even.

I first knew Sam Rothapfel in the West Indies more years ago than I have any present intention of admitting when I was superintendent of mails for the island of Puerto Rico and he was a corporal in the U. S. Marine Corps stationed, in the capacity of mail orderly, aboard the U. S. S. Bancroft, smallest unit in the Navy's battle fleet, and station ship at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Set Up a Canteen.

By virtue of being mail orderly, Sam was relieved from all fatigue duty aboard the "baby of the white squadron" and had unlimited shore leave. For those who had no such generous privilege he nominated himself a sort of purchasing agent at large. A 10-cent pack of cigarets, under the Rothapfel system, cost you 15 cents; a 50-cent necktie might mount as high as 75, and so on. The lad always did pretty wel lfor himself—an attribute that manifested itself in magnified form in the later years of his eminence as an overlord of the "cathedrals of the motion picture."

Down in the tropics, by the very nature of our duties, our paths crossed at frequent intervals and unexpected places. Out of it all we salvaged some fine rides up and down the bay and out on the open ocean front in the naval station launch, of which his task of supervising the station mails made him a sort of vice commander, or something.

It was not until years later that I ran across him in the picture business, and then for a considerable period I did not know that Sam Rothapfel was Sam Rothapfel. I took it for granted it must be a couple of other fellows.

Prologue Was "Tipoff."

The revelation came one day when I trekked down to Marine Corps Headquarters, then opposite the Emergency Hospital, in quest of Col. Lyman to aid in the formulation of an "atmospheric prologue" to amplify the presentation of "The Unbeliever," a film in the making of which the Quantico Marines largely had participated, for Tom Moore in the Strand Theater, then one of the Capital's foremost temples of the titillating gelatins.

"I know just what you want," quoth Col. Lyman, "because Sam Rothapfel has just done the same thing over at the Strand Theater in New York. He used to be a Marine himself."

Came the dawn.

From that time on, Sam and I were as close in show business as we had been years before in expediting the movement of the United States mails. After "Roxy and His Gang" had lent their presence to the first "annual radio exposition," in Convention Hall, and I, with the old Crandall Saturday Nighters, was nominated to take over the entertainment at the second one, in the then-new Washington Auditorium, I appealed to my old friend for a tip as what to do, or not to do, over the air and for a hint as to what a microphone might be like. He was not too helpful.

"You either have it or you don't," said he. "If you like the mike and your voice gets over, you're in; if not, there is nothing that I or anyone else can advise you to do about it. It's just one of those things. The only way to find out is to go up against it."

A 45-Week Stretch.

So I went up against it for a continuous period of 45 weeks and then stopped only as a result of organization policy on the part of R. C. A. that made further pursuit of a pleasurable pastime impracticable.

So, with the untimely passing of an old friend, your reporter feels a bit of a tug at the heart strings. After all, it goes back almost a third of a century and that is quite a considerable association, as the crow flies.

"Roxy" may have had his shortcomings—like, for example, the absolute necessity of an unlimited bankroll to insure the success of his stage enterprises; he was no bigger a showman than anybody else on a rigidly restricted budget, as witness San Francisco, Chicago and Philadelphia—but I never heard of his "crossing" a friend, turning down talent that had anything of genuineness about it or otherwise betraying the confidence of those who knew and trusted him.

The theater has lost quite a fellow. And I have lost and old and valued pal.

Requiescat in pace, old-timer.

The "farewell tour," so to speak, of that venerable star of the stage, Mr. William Gillette, is being piloted by two of the most erudite avant couriers known to the business—the towering and equally imposing Messrs. Wallace Munro, one of the Beau Brummels of the craft, and Clayton Hamilton, distinguished writer on the theater and its allied arts. Mr. Munro already is in town; Mr. Hamilton will be along in due course. And then, needless to say, will come Mr. Gillette, Mary Rogers, Charles Coburn, Brandon Tynan and the other members of his illustrious cast to lend luster to Austin Strong's play of "Three Wise Fools." This will be one of the notable events of a season that has been abundant, so far, in providing memorable evenings in the theater.

Alex Comes Back.

When Alex Yokel presents "Julie the Great," with Beth Merrill, at the National here tonight, he will return to Washington as an established and successful producer, for his "Three Men on a Horse," which is represented by four companies in this country, including the original Washington troupe now entering its second year in New York, as well as two more units now being prepared for London and Australia, is definitely proved to be the most profitable comedy of the decade.

Although that play was an overnight success, Mr. Yokel was far from having become an overnight success himself. His success was the culmination of more than a quarter of a century of constant activity in the theater.

Mr. Yokel's first venture in show business was as a press agent for the three vaudeville theaters operated in Chicago by Charles E. Kohl. Mr. Yokel was really doubling on this job, for his principal occupation at that time was city editor of the Chicago Examiner. His age was 21.

Chased Pictures.

He had joined the Examiner's staff four years before that time. Only 17, he was put to work chasing pictures, but a few months later was advanced to the police beat, which he covered for three years. Those three years were exciting, for he solved 12 murder mysteries that the Chicago police had pigeon holed.

In odd moments Mr. Yokel found time to land the first exclusive interview, granted to the press by both the elder J. P. Morgan and the elder John D. Rockefeller.

While building up a reputation for himself he found time to lend a hand to other less fortunate newspapermen. Two of these men later became Nationwide celebrities: Ring Lardner and Clare Briggs. Mr. Yokel gave each his first big-town newspaper job, thus paving the way for their important careers as writer and cartoonist.

After serving his apprenticeship at publicity work in vaudeville, Mr. Yokel, still in his early twenties, decided to became a theatrical producer. Accordingly, he put on a "turkey" musical show, which was profitable. Then he put on another. All told, he backed and managed 12 "turkeys," all playing at least 40 consecutive and successful weeks in the small towns around Chicago.

Back to Publicity.

Then Mr. Yokel returned to publicity, this time hooking up with George Lederer, outstanding, big-time Broadway theatrical producer. Mr. Yokel handled the publicity for Lederer's "Madame Sherry," which made a fortune for Lederer, Harry Frazee and A. H. Woods, all of whom backed it.

"Madame Sherry" was significant in Mr. Yokel's life, for it did two things: it established him as an important press agent and it brought him to New York. He has stayed there ever since.

After "Madame Sherry," Mr. Yokel did the publicity for "Little Jessie James," which was one of L. Lawrence Weber's smash-hits. This was followed by similar work for several plays and musicals, most of which has since been forgotten. But another smash came along: "The Cocoanuts," which introduced the Marx Brothers to full length musical comedy.

Harry Delf then bid for Mr. Yokel's services, with the result that he did the promotion work for "The Family Upstairs." Then came his association with George Jessel, who became the star of "The Jazz Singer," due entirely to Mr. Yokel's insistence that he be thus billed. Mr. Yokel, incidentally, signed Mr. Jessell in December for the starring role in "The Magnificent Heel," which will open in Washington later in the season.

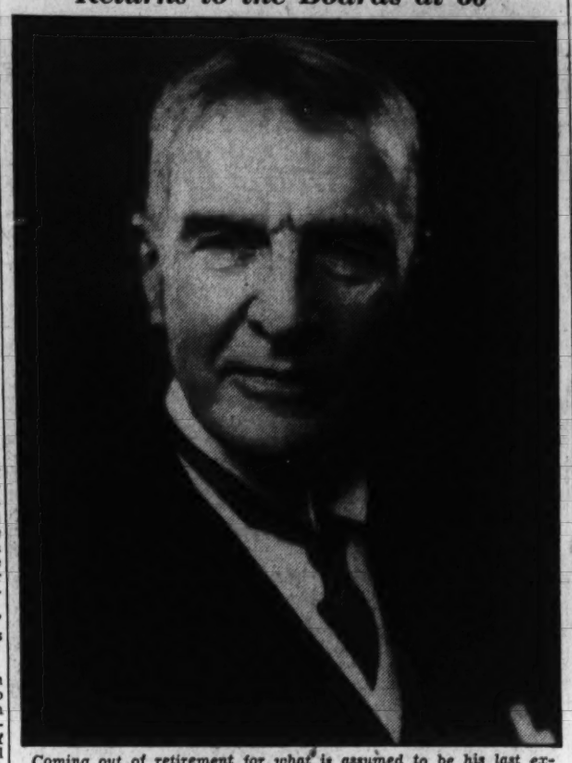

Finally, Alex Yokel became a Broadway producer, allying himself with George Price in presenting "The Song Writer," which was bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Then Mr. Yokel produced "Tattle Tales." After a few years' absence from the theater, he returned with "Three Men on a Horse," which is still making current theatrical history.

All this leads up to his present offering, "Julie the Great." It remains to be seen whether his star is still in its ascendency.

What's-in-a-Name Note.

If you think Mr. Yokel is a yokel, you are virtually non compos mentis, ne plus ultra, e pluribus unum, or something!

Returns to the Boards at 80

Coming out of retirement for what is assumed to be his last extensive tour, William Gillette last night opened his engagement in Newark, N. J., in a revival of Austin Strong's play of "Three Wise Fools." The pivotal character of the young ward in this amusing comedy-drama is played by Mary Rogers, first known to the theater-going public as Mary Howard, daughter of the late Will Rogers. Mr. Gillette will appear in Washington in "Three Wise Fools" on the stage of the National Theater, the week beginning Monday, February 3.

Court May Save Convicted Slayer

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Gate City, Va., Jan. 13.—Only a United States Supreme Court decision declaring a Virginia statute unconstitutional, or intervention by Gov. George C. Peery, can save Thomas Cole Hart from death in the electric chair January 24.

Hart, sentenced to die for the murder of Alton Leonard, a convict camp guard, at Moccasin Gap near Gate City on September 15, 1932, when he and two chain gang members escaped, is waiting in death row in Richmond for the United States Supreme Court to say whether a State Legislature can make the death sentence mandatory for a convict who kills a guard in executing a break for freedom.

Hart's counsel, former Judge S. H. Bond, appealed to the United States Supreme Court after the Virginia Supreme Court upheld Hart's conviction and sentence to the electric chair.

Hart pleaded self-defense in his trial. He testified the guard spit into a cup of water he was about to drink and trained a rifle upon him just before he struck the guard with an iron pin.

Maryland Ceases Activity for AAA

College Park, Md., Jan. 13 (AP).—Formal notice of the suspension of activities under the agricultural adjustment act because of its invalidation by the Supreme Court had been sent today to Maryland farmers.

County agents were notified by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, State agricultural extension service director, to cease all work, put their records in order and hold them. He acted on instructions from Washington.

The action precluded the signing of new wheat, tobacco and corn-hog contracts in which 6,000 Maryland farmers had been expected to participate.

More than $2,300,000 had been distributed to the 11,508 Maryland farmers who had participated in the AAA program since its inauguration.

A decision is awaited on Government commitments due farmers. The amount unpaid in Maryland was said to be small.

Wolfe, Daughter May Die of Burns

Winchester, Va., Jan. 13.—Hetzel Wolfe, 30, and his daughter, Vera, 5, sole survivors of a blast which cost the lives of five other members of their family, today gamely continued what was conceded to be a losing battle for life.

The father is believed the more seriously injured of the two, but Harry Wolfe, his brother, said he had been told the child has less than an even chance to recover.

Relatives today revealed that Hetzel Wolfe carried his daughter to safety after an explosion caused by a carbide plant had wrecked his home and that he again entered the burning remnants of the building in an endeavor to save Garland, his 10-year-old son.

Fragments of the bodies of Mrs. Wolfe Hetzel, jr., Garland, Forrest and Lowell Wolfe, her children, have been recovered, but it was possible to identify only that of the mother.

The right has been given to show money being printed and engraved . . . and it will be told that on every bill, somewhere, there are the initials of the engraver . . . Real money has never been photographed in a flicker, for it is against the rules, but they claim permission has been granted to do it in "Queer Money" . . . Virginia Jobless Compensation Statute Urged Peery Council Recommend Measure Paralleling Federal Law.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13.—Enactment of a Virginia unemployment compensation law paralleling the Federal act was recommended in a report made public today by Gov. Peery's advisory council.

The council recommended that the law be administered by an unemployment compensation board composed of the commissioner of labor, the representative for industry on the industrial commission, and a chairman representing the public and appointed by the Governor.

A bill drawn to carry out the recommendation accompanied the report. Gov. Peery said the bill would be introduced in the General Assembly soon, though he did not know who the sponsor would be.

The law recommended by the council would become effective July 1, 1936, and would impose a tax of 1.8 per cent on the pay rolls of employers for the period July 1, 1936, to January 1, 1938, and 2.7 per cent thereafter. No contributions would be required from employes.

Benefits would be payable only after a waiting period of three weeks The number of weeks for which benefits would be payable to unemployed workers would be contingent on the length of their prior period of employment after the effective date of the act.

The rate of unemployment benefit for total unemployment would be 50 per cent of the average full-time weekly wages. In no case would it exceed a weekly maximum limit of $15.

The bill attached to the report includes a provision to the effect that should effective sections of the Federal act become inoperative, either through repeal or through being declared unconstitutional, the Governor could by executive order terminate the Virginia law within 60 days.

Key Industries At Best Level In Five Years

Final Quarter Upswing Embraced Nearly All Business Fields.

New York, Jan. 13.—As heavy industries joined forces with consuming goods, the upward movement which marked the third quarter was extended during the final three months of 1935, Dun & Bradstreet say today. With abrupt rises recorded for some divisions, the faster rate of activity broadened to nearly all industries in its inclusiveness.

The statistical evidences of industrial recovery at the close of 1935 were far more numerous and of more impressive proportions than those obtaining at the end of any recent year. Even during December, curtailments for inventory and holiday observance were held to the minimum.

While practically all of the accepted measures of activity showed steady advances for the period, with the production and sales of a number of key industries reaching levels above any attained in the past five years, the survey points out that this heavy preponderance of favorable industrial developments does not necessarily imply an indefinite continuance of the recovery movement.

It does serve, however, as a strong stimulus to business confidence. A significant fact in relation to appraisals of the immediate industrial trend is that, in general, industrial recovery during 1935 was gradual and well sustained, and that it was noticeably without the sudden spurts which so frequently bring sharp reactions.

Mader Sets Fast Pace to Decision Ketchell in Sensational Bout

Foe of Louis Impressive In Drill

Farmer Retzlaff Floors Sparmate in Second; Ready for Bout.

Brown Bomber Drops Frightened Negro in Easy Fashion.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—Joe Louis and Farmer Charley Retzlaff loosened dynamite-laden gloves against sparring mates today as they entered stretch-drive training for their 15-round battle at the Chicago Stadium Friday night.

The Brown Bomber stretched his boxing to six rounds, while Retzlaff, satisfied with his condition, cut his work to four rounds. Each floored one of their opponents.

Retzlaff, weighing 198 pounds, upset Mitz Minikel, Milwaukee 185-pounder, in two rounds, dropping him with a short right to the jaw. Johnny Brown, a squatty Negro from Chicago, boxed the final two rounds. The ring sharps agreed Retzlaff looked impressive.

Absorbs Punches.

Otis Thomas, 190-pound Negro, gave Louis his best workout. He faced Jolting Joe for two rounds and absorbed punches without hitting the canvas.

A Negro jumping-jack named Tom Jones was so frightened when he heard the swish of Louis' gloves past his ears that he beat an immediate retreat and went backwards for two rounds, with Louis pursuing him. Louis finally caught up with him and dropped him with a short right cross.

Tiger Henderson stepped the final two rounds and was nailed frequently with lefts and rights to the head.

Art Sykes, Syracuse, N. Y., who once held Louis on even terms for eight rounds, until falling a victim of a knockout punch, was matched today for an eight-round semi-final with Eddie Mader, New York, rated as the best prospect among the Eastern heavyweights.

Louis and Retzlaff will continue their boxing through Thursday afternoon. Jack Blackburn, trainer of Louis, plans to drive his charge through seven rounds of boxing tomorrow as the peak spurt of his training.

Golf Tourneys Yield to Par On Coast

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 13.—Southern California golf courses emerged from a terrific strain today after a sub-par bombardment from the country's leading shotmakers.

In four winter tournaments just completed, par took a bad beating in the Pasadena $4,000 and Riverside $3,000 opens, broke even after a close shave in the Los Angeles $5,000, and came out a bare stroke ahead in the Southern California Open at Oakmont.

Jimmy Hines, tow-headed Long Island pro, started the siege ten days ago at Riverside, and but for a bad last round yesterday in the Los Angeles Open, would have made the destruction almost complete.

As it was, he won the Riverside 12 strokes under par with a 276, and Harold McSpaden, unattached; Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J., and Johnny Geertsen, Ogden, Utah, trailed him in either to crack or equal the mark.

Hines undershot the par 72 of the fast, rolling Victoria Club with rounds of 70—66—69—71.

Coming into the Los Angeles Open, he hung up a 69-68-69 for the first three rounds on the treacherous Los Angeles Country Club par 70 layout, but faded on the last round with a 74 for a total 280, even par.

Indoor Trackmen Face Banner Card

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—The amateur Athletic Union tonight announced virtual completion of a banner indoor track schedule which should aid considerably in preparing U. S. athletes to maintain American Olympic supremacy at Berlin this summer.

Eight major undercover meets are included in the schedule which A. A. U. Secretary Dan Ferris described as "the most elaborate ever arranged." In addition, a big midwestern meet is under consideration for the Chicago Stadium on January 29. Several other smaller games are slated.

Although Bill Bonthron, erstwhile Princeton powerhouse, will not compete during the indoor season, the mile and its metric equivalent—the 1,500 meters—are expected to provid plenty of thrills. Glenn Cunningham, world record holder for the indoor mile, probably will run in most of the major meets, as will Gene Venzke, Joe Mangan, Sam Romani, Norman Bright and Frank Nordell.

Barney Ross Signs To Oppose Halper

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—Welterweight Champion Barney Ross was signed today to headline the first important fight card of the year in Philadelphia.

Promoters Taylor and Gunnis announced Ross would meet Lew Halper, promising Newark, N. J., 145-pounder, in a ten-round nontitle go, featuring a bill in Convention Hall on January 27.

The fight will afford Halper the first test of his career against a crownholder, and on his showing may rest a title go with the Chicago champion.

Hendrix Bows To Harris in Net Final

Conqueror of Allison and Grant Is Humbled in Four Sets.

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Jan. 13.—The startling march of young Arthur Hendrix, of Lakeland, Fla., over the front rankers of tennis was checked today by a defeat at the hands of Charles Harris, fellow Floridian, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2, in the final of the Miami Biltmore tournament.

Hendrix, who within two weeks had beaten Wilmer Allison and Bryan M. Grant, jr., the Nation's first and third ranking players, apparently found in Harris, his master in three other tournaments, a jinx.

Only for rare moments did the Hendrix of today resemble the player who yesterday trounced Grant. Plainly playing under stress, he repeatedly smashed into the net or missed easy gets.

Hendrix opened poorly, double faulting twice in the first game, but recovered in the second by breaking Harris' service after the game had been deuced many times.

The curly-haired Harris, ranked seventeenth nationally, opened fire in earnest to cover his chagrin after netting the ball to end a prolonged cross-courts duel in the seventh game of the first set.

From that point, Harris was in command, running out 11 straight games before Hendrix, in the first game of the third set, drove over two sparkling placements and broke his losing streak for a while.

Harris, teaming with Martin Buxby, of Miami, defeated Grant and Russell Bobbitt, another Atlantan, 6—4, 6—4, 5—7, 4—6, 6—4, in the doubles final.

Hendrix Seeded No. 6 After Defeat by Harris

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—The defeat of Arthur Hendrix, sensational Lakeland, Fla., youth, in the final of the Miami-Biltmore tennis tournament caused him a decided drop in seeding in the sixth annual Dixie meet opening here tomorrow.

Stars entered in the event include Bryan Grant, jr., of Atlanta, ranked No. 3 nationally and seeded No. 1 in the Dixie; Hal Surface, of Kansas City; Hendrix and others.

Hendrix, one of Florida's best, was seeded No. 2 in the lists yesterday after defeating Grant, but late today he was dropped to No. 6.

Charles Harris, defending Dixie champion, of West Palm Beach, who beat Hendrix today, was installed No. 2 as a result of his victory.

G. W. Defeats Richmond U., 43 to 25

Rallies to Trim Spiders For Second Time as Schonfeld Stars.

Heads 13-Point Attack After Invaders Take Early 12-4 Lead.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

THEY sold George Washington short last night, too short, and as later events proved, entirely too early, for the Colonials rallied and after being apparently hopelessly outclassed, came back with a smashing attack that battered down the University of Richmond's defense and let them through to a 43-25 victory.

Approximately 3,000 fans saw the downtown dribblers repeat their winning performance against the Spiders, who, prior to the first meeting between the teams, had amassed a 23-game winning streak.

The big difference between victory and defeat was a little fellow by the name of Milt Schonfeld, who led a rally that started his mates toward their sixth victory.

Replaces Leemans.

Schonfeld replaced Leemans midway in the first half with Richmond in possession of a 12-4 lead, and personally led a whirlwind attack that produced 13 consecutive points and sent G. W. skyrocketing ahead, 17-12. Thereafter the eventual winners were never headed, leading, 24-15, at the intermission.

Richmond, apparently overrated, never got within shouting distance of its host in the final half. Ben Goldfaden and Tommy O'Brien effectively bottled up George Lacey, All-American guard, and Win Brown, who led the scoring with 13 points, was the only Spider able to penetrate G. W.'s defense with any degree of consistency.

Demoralizes Defense.

Schonfeld completely demoralized the Virginians' defense by his humorous but highly effective antics. He rolled the ball between Richmond players' legs, dribbled around them, passed over and under them and had the Spiders snared in their own web before the half-time whistle temporarily rescued them. He sank two field goals and three fouls to lead that first rally.

The Colonials played a steady brand of ball in the final period, biding their time on the offense until they had their scoring plays

U. S. Laying Plans For Davis Cup Play

Six Players Are Notified to Condition Selves.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—It will be five months before Uncle Sam's boys fire their first shot in the 1936 Davis Cup warfare, but the tennis generals are taking advantage of the "rainy season" by laying plans for America's part in the campaign.

The United States Lawn Tennis Association's Davis Cup committee already has notified six players that they are to condition themselves for the "big push" starting next May. They are Wilmer Allison, Donald Budge, "Bitsy" Grant, Frank Shields, Gene Mako and Johnny Van Ryn.

Budge, Mako and Shields, all on the Pacific Coast, already have been placed under the supervision of Edward (Bud) Chandler, a member of the cup committee and a San Francisco attorney.

Accent on Youth Predicted As Theme Song for This Year

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

(Another of a series on 1936 prospects in sport.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A number of doddering "old folks," including Willie Hoppe and Big Bill Tilden, have been having their flight lately in sports. The campaign just closed was notable for the return of many an old trouper to top form. But it's a good idea not to overlook the part being played by our athletic youth, fresh from a number of startling exploits, and now looking forward to the fun of making the veterans step livelier in 1936.

Age is still a comparative proposition, however, in athletics. Helen Wills Moody first won the national women's championship in tennis at the age of 17 so that at 30 she is the "veteran" of her class. Tilden was 27 when he first scaled the national heights in amateur competition. Big Bill is over 40 now, but holds the national pro title.

Boxers Fade at 25.

Pugilists start to fade nowadays at the comparatively tender age of 25 and baseball players are supposed to begin creaking after they pass 35, but a topnotch polo player wouldn't think of retiring until he's around 50. During the last few years, finalists in the national golf championships at home or abroad have ranged from 17 to 55 years of age.

The freshman hero of 1935 in major league baseball was Darrell (Cy) Blanton, rookie right-hander of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who topped all National League pitchers in effectiveness in his first season. Blanton, however, was 27 years old last July and thereby benefited by more maturity than the average recruit.

The most sensational juvenile of them all is already a national titleholder. Little Mary Hoerger, of Miami, who won a national senior diving championship last summer at the age of 11, hopes to make the United States Olympic Team as a 12-year-old. Aileen Riggin, heretofore the youngest Olympian produced by this country, was 14 when she accompanied the swimming team to Antwerp in 1920. Even in a sport where they start training as soon as they toddle around, Miss Hoerger's achievements are phenomenal.

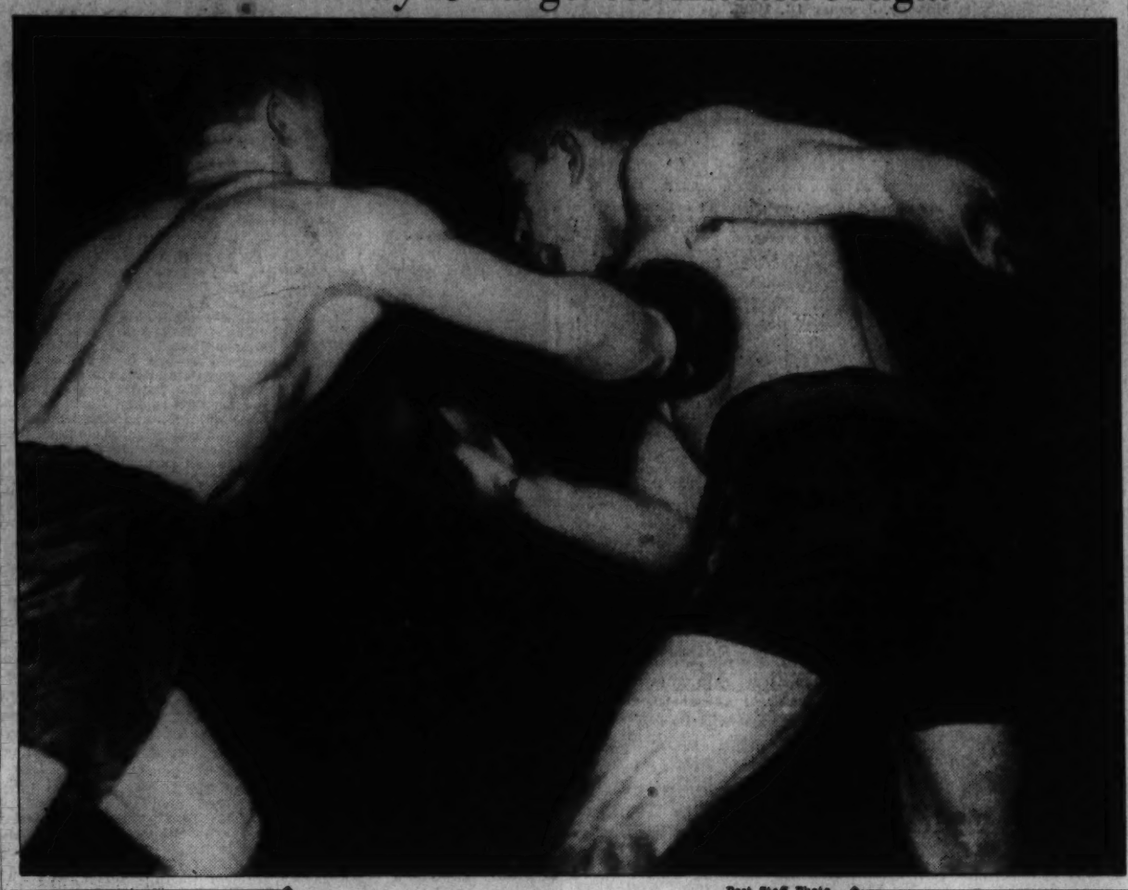

Glenna Collett Vare, who was only 18 when she won her first national golf title, was hard pressed to turn back the challenge of 17-year-old Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, in last year's championship tournament. As further proof of the youthful uprising on the links, 14-year-old Edith Estabrooks won the Iowa State women's championship.

Don Budge, 20-year-old Californian who rose from ninth to second in the national rankings for 1935, is the most phenomenal figure in American tennis, but the winter sensation now is Arthur Hendrix, unranked Lakeland, Fla., player who has beaten Wilmer Allison and Bryan Grant, the first and third ranking stars. In turn the spotlight also is on Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, No. 17 in the new ranking list, who bowled over Hendrix today in the Miami-Biltmore final.

Bright Track Prospect.

Brightest of the schoolboy track prospects is Leroy Kirkpatrick, of Montezuma, Calif., officially credited with equaling the world record of 14.2 seconds for the 110-meter high hurdles last summer. The phenomenal achievements in track athletics by Helen Stephens, 18-year-old Fulton (Mo.) girl, indicated the United States will not need to worry about filling the place of Babe Didrikson for the Olympics. Heading now for the winter Olympics is 16-year-old Robin Lee, of Minneapolis, national figure skating champion.

Mader's Body Is Target for Ketchell's Right

A smashing right to the heart, Billy Ketchell's most effective weapon, brings Eddie Mader up sharply in the third round at Turner's Arena last night. Ketchell, a Philadelphian, was outpointed by Mader, New York heavyweight, who won the unanimous decision.

Boston Rookie To Be Sent To Minors

'Babe' Dahlgren Is Too Outspoken; Headed for Syracuse.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Jan. 13.—They put up Ellsworth T. "Babe" Dahlgren's number for talking out of turn today when Eddie Collins started making out the bulk of the Red Sox contracts.

And, as a result, it is only a matter of hours before that young man, known as the Coast League's "greatest first baseman since Hal Chase" before the Red Sox paid the Missions $15,000 for his services, finds himself consigned to Syracuse.

Dahlgren, as one would expect, was not among those who cheered when Jimmy Foxx was included in the staggering deal that made the Red Sox a 1936 pennant contender. It would be too much to expect him to be enthusiastic over the loss of his job, but his baseball boss did expect him to be diplomatic about it.

Claims He Is Valuable.

But the "Babe" was too outspoken. While admitting that Foxx rated his job, Dahlgren claimed he was much too valuable to be sent back to the minors and he pointed out that if the Red Sox wanted to play Foxx on first base, he should be traded to some other major league club.

He claimed he was forced to change his batting style against his will, with the result that he ended up with a .263 average, and explained that his .985 fielding figures, the lowest turned in by any of the American League's regular first basemen last season, were due to the erratic throws of Manager Joe Cronin and other infielders.

Cronin, wintering in San Francisco, where Dahlgren resides, was the first to hear about his "pop-off," and it made no hit with Joe, who may or may not have passed the word along to Collins.

Collins Finds Another Spot.

Until then there was a chance that Dahlgren might spend the 1936 season increasing in baseball wisdom on the Red Sox bench, but when it became known he was dissatisfied, Collins lost no time finding another spot for him.

The Red Sox, however, intend to keep a tight hold on Dahlgren, for they want him available when Foxx starts running down. This would appear to make Dahlgren's minor league sentence a long and indefinite affair.

But, according to Collins, who has decided to keep Dahlgren out of the Red Sox' Sarasota training camp, it has its advantages.

"Dahlgren is not going to lose much going to Syracuse," Collins promises. "He will obtain much more money there than he got in the Coast League and he will be subject to recall on short notice. It is an arrangement that we consider best for the club and for him."

Cavalcade, Rosemont In Santa Anita Test

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Cavalcade and Fox Catcher Farm's Rosemont were the only candidates to the rich Santa Anita Handicap that worked out over a fast track at Santa Anita Park today.

The 1934 Kentucky Derby winner was breezed an easy mile in 1:44 1-5, hard held throughout by Jockey Georgie Woolf, who will be astride the 5-year-old on February 22.

Rosemont, a son of The Porter, was given an 8-furlong breather which required 1:46 2-5 to negotiate.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

THIS department's nomination for 1936's Man On the Spot is Joseph Francis Cronin, who must win the pennant with his Boston Red Sox or leave much to be explained.

Financially, Cronin has nothing to lose. He is entering on only the second year of his five-year contract as manager of the Boston club at a salary of $30,000 per annum. But professionally, ah, there's the rub, as President Roosevelt would say. Cronin must produce a pennant for Boston or his standing in the managerial fraternity will undergo a sharp revision downward.

POVICH.

On paper, the line-up that Mr. Tom Yawkey's millions have dropped into Cronin's lap is the dream team. Yawkey has taken time out from his duties as a director in a score of Wall Street corporations to provide for Cronin the greatest collection of stars assembled on one team since 1931 when the Athletics were winning pennants with such as Grove, Earnshaw, Foxx, Simmons, Dykes, Cochran and Walberg.

Visualize Boston's 1936-line-up, eloquent testimony of Yawkey's raids on the poorer clubs of the league: Foxx at first base, Mellilo or McNair at second, Cronin himself at shortstop, Werber at third, Cramer, Manush and Almada in the outfield, and Grove, Ferrell, Marcum, Ostermueller and Wilson in the pitcher's box. As I was saying, the manager who doesn't win the pennant with that crew, barring plague, flood or pestilence, is—or should be—on the spot.

To make Cronin's position more critical, Boston fans have been led to expect a pennant. Boston newspapers have been hailing the Foxx deal as tantamount to the 1936 championship ever since it was announced and Boston fans cannot conceive of the veterans Grove and Ferrell being any less effective than they were last year when their success was so outstanding their mere presence on the mound was synonymous with victory.

SINCE startling the baseball world by leading the Nats to a pennant in his debut as a manager in 1933, Cronin has seen the scales balanced. His Washington team of 1934 finished a dismal seventh and his Red Sox of last year were a well-beaten fourth. In three years he has provided proof of his managerial mettle.

Cronin's greatest triumph was incorporated not in the fact that he won the pennant with the Washington team of 1933 but in the sagacity he displayed in herding together the elements of that team. Far in advance of the opening of the season after he had been given the management of the club, Cronin mapped out his plan of campaign. With a wisdom that belied his 25 years, he deduced he could win the flag by the acquisition of certain players, none of them outstanding stars.

He presented his convictions to Owner Griffith so strongly that Griffith went into the market and procured by cash and trades all of the players Cronin wanted: Pitchers Earl Whitehill, Walter Stewart and Jack Russell, Catcher Luke Sewell and Outfielder Goose Goslin. The Yankees were the team to beat in 1933, Cronin reasoned, and it's history how, pressing the left-handed Whitehill and Stewart into action against the Yanks at every opportunity, he beat 'em.

The following year's failures which saw the Nats finish seventh were hardly traceable to Cronin. That was the season in which the Nats set a new league record for player injuries. And last year at Boston he finished fourth with a team that did not figure to finish better than fourth. But his reputation as a manager suffered along other lines. It was Cronin who recommended the transfer of Julius Solters and $35,000 in cash to the Browns for Oscar Melillo, who wouldn't bring $10,000 in the market today, while Solters blossomed as a star, and it was Cronin who paid the A's $12,000 for Dib Williams, a second baseman who was replaced by Melillo.

Roosevelt Defeats Gonzaga Courtmen

Roosevelt High filed away its seventh victory of the season yesterday, spanking a stubborn Gonzaga High five, 21 to 13, on the Gonzaga court. It took the Rough Riders more than half the game to take the lead away from the Purple, but once obtained they widened it at a great rate in the last two periods.

Using two men, Coach Herman Littman saw the private school hold his starting line-up to 5-5 in the first quarter and then take a 9-7 lead over another combination in the second.

Baer Pondering Wrestling Offer

Sacramento, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Lou Daro, West Coast wrestling impresario, and Ancil Hoffman, prizefight manager, tonight threatened to guide Max Baer, gentleman farmer, and former heavyweight champion into the wrestling profession.

Max regards the prospect of turning wrestler with satisfaction except when it brings back memories of long training grinds and early-to-bed nights.

"If I get enough money for it I will enter wrestling seriously," Max said. "Cauliflower ears always can be made over. It's up to Ancil, I guess. Anyway, I think I'd hold out for a $35,000 guarantee."

Daro offered to pay the Livermore former champion $25,000 cash and give him a sufficient percentage if he should enter wrestling under his supervision.

U. S. G. A. Head Inconsistent, Is Charge

Rap at Little Draws Reply From President of Syndicate.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The officially sponsored warning to golfing player-writers, including Champion Lawson Little, to avoid instruction-giving articles drew replies today from Little and John N. Wheeler, president of the syndicate which distributes the Californian's copy.

Both emphasized that the United States Golf Association approved the original arrangement under which Little picked up the syndicate pen where Bob Jones left off. Wheeler in effect charged inconsistency on the part of John G. Jackson, newly elected president of the U. S. G. A., who made known yesterday his intention to interpret the amateur role as barring advice or instruction in newspaper articles written by amateur players.

Held Violation.

Jackson, supported by other U. S. G. A. officials, holds that articles giving such instruction come under the heading of teaching the game and, therefore, violate the amateur rule. So long as amateur players did their own writing, for syndicates or newspapers, there has been no objection in the past.

"When I started writing they told me there was a taboo on 'ghost writing' and that I would have to do it all myself," said Little, in Los Angeles today. "I talked it all over with Prescott Bush, association president at the time, and with John G. Jackson, the new president. There seemed to be no objection and they told me to go ahead."

The holder of the British and American amateur titles added that until he heard directly from the U. S. G. A. he planned to go ahead with his writing according to his previous understanding.

Italy Not to Enter Davis Cup Net Team

Rome, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Italy will not participate in the 1936 Davis Cup tennis matches because of sanctions which the League of Nations has imposed upon Italy, the Italian Tennis Federation announced today.

The federation also announced that it would not invite any players from sanctionist countries to participate in future Italian tournaments.

White Hope's Margin Lies In Speed

Is Extended to Utmost in Every Round by Rival's Right.

Kadash, Near Knockout, Rallies, Stops Burke in Third Round.

By Bill McCormick.

EDDIE MADER, New York City's addition to the ever-expanding list of White Hopes, banged his way to an unanimous eight-round decision over Billy Ketchell, of Philadelphia, at Turner's Arena last night in a feature bout that might be described as sensational, stupendous, colossal, super-colossal or even pretty good.

Far from being the set-up that many expected him to be, Ketchell extended the fast fist-flinger from the big city to the utmost in every round, making Eddie fight as he never fought before to take each period by none-too-decisive margins.

Mader's ultimate triumph was largely attributable to his superior speed, which enabled him to set the pace and keep the heavy-hitting Philadelphian so off balance he was not able to fire his big-gun right hand as effectively as he might have.

Continuous Tattoo.

Mader beat a continuous tattoo on Ketchell's midsection at close quarters and bobbed and weaved away from most of Billy's long leads. On occasion, Eddie tossed long wallops toward the head—some of which landed and some of which did not, but all of which made the fight seem very spectacular.

Ketchell kept boring in from bell to bell, shooting ponderous punches at his elusive target. Mader ducked or rolled inside most of Billy's looping right-hand blows, which plainly were labeled "knockout," but he seemed unable to figure out an antidote for a maneuver whereby Ketchell shifted inside with a sizzling right to the midsection. Those right hands and his own exertions had slowed Mader down quite a bit at the finish and a different story might have been told had the contest been scheduled for 15 rounds—or even 10 rounds.

Kadash Beats Burke.

Steve Kadash, formerly of the Army, scored a third-round technical knockout over Kirk Burke, of Washington, in a heavyweight semifinal scheduled for six rounds. Kadash accumulated a slight lead in the first two rounds, but in the third seemed on the verge of a knockout as the former District amateur champion pinned him to the ropes and shot home a staggering right to the head that made him wobble.

The Baltimore belter weaved his way out of trouble as Burke swung wildly, then caught the District lad flush on the chin whiskers with a short right. Burke dropped, face down, but staggered up at nine. Kadash shot home a long right to the chin and Kirk careened to his corner—out on his feet and probably thinking the fight was over. Which it was, as Referee Charley Reynolds called an official halt after two minutes and two seconds of the round.

Outfumbles Duca.

Eddie (Kid) Whalen, Mader's stablemate, outfumbled Joe Duca, a substitute middleweight, in a six-round preliminary which was very gruelling—to the customers.

Stanford Carrier, local knockout artist, worked four rounds to a draw with Sam Bacala, a Baltimore welterweight, in one of the best prelims ever seen hereabouts. Carrier seemed destined to repeat a previous win over Bacala for two rounds, but the Baltimore boy battled back to even terms in a rousing rally.

Joe Doty, Washington's pleasing preliminary boy, took a unanimous decision from Jesse James, a southern lightweight, in a give-and-take four-round opener.

Fallon Rides King's Entry To Victory

Warren, Jr., Overtakes Headin Home Grabs Place Position.

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Jan. 13. Glory Greenock, a recent winner for Curtis King, today came right back to carry the black and white dotted silks of the Memphis sportsman to an easy victory in the Pensacola purse as the final three days of a successful meeting got under way. The chestnut daughter of Greenock, carrying all of Apprentice Fallon's 92½ pounds, breezed to the judges three lengths in the van. It was the fourth triumph in six races for horses with No. 1 post positions.

Warren, jr., representing the Calumet Farm of Warren Wright, showed improvement to finish second, two lengths before the Howe Stable's Headin Home. A half dozen sprinters went to the post, with the winner a $4.90-for-$2 favorite. The time was 1:10 4-5.

Weaken After Duel.

King's Pleasure and Headin Home cut out a suicidal pace, with the result that both weakened after their head and head duel into the stretch. Glory Greenock, rated daylight behind the pair, responded with a fine burst of speed when Fallon clucked to the chestnut filly. She swept past the leaders and won well in hand. Warren, jr., obviously short in his last start, had no trouble overtaking Headin Home for the runner-up position.

The consistent Prince Drake, winner of his last three starts, finally struck a snag and finished third in the fourth event. Lord Tournament handled his 120 pounds with ease to hang up his second set of brackets in a row. Eddie Arcaro had the speedy veteran on top throughout the 6 furlongs. The combination clicked by four lengths in 1:10 3-5 and paid $12.80. Miss Purray chased the victor all the way and garnered the place by five lengths from Prince Drake.

Bethesda Girls Win.

The Bethesda-Chevy Chase High girls' basketball team swamped the Gaithersburg High misses, 22 to 8, yesterday at Gaithersburg.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LORD TOURNAMENT, $12.80, $5.50, $3.10; MISS PURRAY, $5.60, $3.30; PRINCE DRAKE, $2.30.

LORD TOURNAMENT, showing surprising good speed, was sent to the front in first furlong, set a very fast pace and drew away easily at end. MISS PURRAY moved into contention early, but never seriously threatened the winner. PRINCE DRAKE, unable to keep up at any part, was driven hard to save the show. POMPEIUS could never get up. EPIBEAU is sure to improve over this effort.

FIFTH RACE—Three furlongs. Purse, $600. The East Coast. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:09. Winner, C. V. Whitney's b. f. TALE OF WOE broke good, was sent to the front when field went out a bit, and stood drive gamely. GRAND JESTER, away alertly, made a game effort. ALBINO broke good, but was allowed to drop back going into turn. She responded gamely and finished fast. HALF FARE appeared high in flesh and the race should improve him. HATTY broke on top, but ran out on turn.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Pensacola. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35½. Winner, Curtis King's ch. f. GLORY GREENOCK, under light weight, was restrained off the early pace, moved up fast on outside, took lead entering stretch and won going away. WARREN, JR., broke fast, but was eased back and closed with a rush in final furlong. HEADIN HOME had plenty of speed, but weakened badly. The race should do LADFIELD a world of good. SASSAFRAS ran good race and should win soon.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:07. Off at 5:08. Winner, Miss A. Doris' ch. g. FREE SPIRIT, going in best form, moved up and into lead turning out of back stretch, drew away and won nicely in hand. AUTOWIN trailed field to the half-mile pole, began to close ground and finished with a rush. FLAG CADET was used up setting the pace. TREBOR, well up for six furlongs, then dropped back thoroughly beaten. JOAN D. had speed for six furlongs. SWEET GUINEA was outrun.

KAPENA got away well in motion, was rushed to the front going into first turn, opened wide gap and held on gamely. PARITY moved up with a rush, tired and just lasted to save the place. TOMFOOLERY ran good race. GERTRUDE S. closed a big gap. UKRAINE was never a factor. MATHIAS quit badly.

C. U., Maryland Start Drills For Bouts

Cardinals, Despite Defeat Saturday, Conceding Rivals Nothing.

MARYLAND and Catholic University pupils of punch yesterday settled down to the serious business of preparing themselves for their important match Saturday night at Brookland, which, although it is being fought at an unusually early date, must be recognized as one of the city's outstanding winter sports events.

While the Cards were off to a reverse start against North Carolina State last week and Maryland boasts a potent collection of clouters, their engagement has none of that "walkover" spirit about it. The Terps undoubtedly will be a heavily packed favorite at the opening bell, but they've got to stop an extremely vicious pack of underdogs to gain their second consecutive win.

More Experienced.

Maryland is more experienced, as a whole, has more material available, and is as well coached as the Cardinals, but they're all even on determination and that counts as much as anything. Catholic concedes nothing to its arch-rival, and a glance at the line-ups discloses that the Brookland brigade isn't entirely wrong in its conclusions that it can win.

The Old Liners have two inexperienced men in the 115-pound class in Ed Shegogue and Charley Gebhart, neither of whom has put foot in a ring or raised a glove in varsity competition. So "Tex" Guinan, C. U. puncher who also is serving his apprenticeship, may be one up on them inasmuch as he has last week's bout to his credit.

Edge in Division.

Tom Birmingham, 125-pounder, gives Maryland an edge in the 125-pound division, since he is more polished than Johnny McDermott.

At 135 pounds they seem to be all even. Morty Schwartz will represent Maryland at this weight and Carmen LaSalle will uphold the Cardinals' end of the argument. Schwartz normally is a 145-pounder and boiling down to the weight requirements won't help any. LeSalle is much improved over last year and a steady fighter who can give anybody an unpleasant evening.

Evenly Matched.

Walter Webb, Maryland, Fred Mix, Catholic, look evenly matched at 145 pounds, this despite Webb's kayo last week. The Cardinal ace got off to an unlucky start and Webb doesn't figure to give him a similar dose, but don't under-rate the Terrapin. He's good, a hard puncher and clever ring general and can win and make it look easy.

Catholic virtually must concede the 155-pound engagement to Ivan Nedomatsky, the Maryland mauler, unless Coach Ed LaFond has dug up some new tricks for "Sully" Grecco. Southern Conference lightweight titleholder, Nedomatsky is one of the flashiest collegiate jawbreakers to be seen in a local ring, while Greco does not appear to be a natural fighter. But Sully is clever and tough, and he'll give Nedomatsky a good scrap.

Regardless of who fights for C. U. in the 165-pound class, he will be at a distinct disadvantage against Mike Lombardo, a good, rugged glove artist who knows all the tricks. But in the 175-pound division, ah, a smile from the Cardinal supporters, Maryland will be at the distinct disadvantage if Chuck Rydzewski represents the Cards.

With Johnny Gormley and John Birkland to call on in the heavyweight class the honors again look like Maryland's. Johhny Chludenski and Leo Katalinas look too inexperienced from this corner, but it would be interesting to see how a man, unarmed excepting for the regulation gloves would fare against this Katalinas. He looked big and strong enough to tear any human-being to shreds with his bare hands.

Thus, in adding up the totals it is entirely possible for the Cards to tie at 4-4, and with an unlucky break for Maryland they can win.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Tropical Park, Jan. 13.

Dear Al:

Post time at Hialeah, which opens on Thursday, will be 2:15 o'clock, 15 minutes later than the first scheduled "off time" at this track. Hialeah has put in a very good rule regarding 2-year-olds. The baby racers cannot be raced with either whips or spurs until after their third start. However, the youngsters can wear blinkers if the trainer so desires. The whip-spur rule might be well to remember. After three "education" races the applying of the urging accessories may make a whale of a difference in the young horse. Then again these appliances may make the horse swerve or stop, but those are the chances one must take. The New York Racing Writers and William V. Dwyer will entertain the National Association of State Racing Commissioners at a dinner at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel tomorrow night. Frank Ortell, president of the New York group, will make the call to colors and Tom Thorp, race writer, who refereed the Catholic U.-Mississippi football game, will be master of ceremonies. I have promised to bring home a ham and cheese sandwich for Clocker Mike. BILL.

First race—Regula Baddun carries 116 pounds in this sprint, one less than in his recent winning effort. Meets better horses here but his time on the previous occasion was very creditable. Creole Bird promises to do a lot of running here. The same goes for Starogan. Jim John breaks out of the No. 1 gate and doesn't have the early speed necessary.

Second race—King Bee draws an apprentice rider but has plenty of speed. Clocker Mike reports several good moves and a race back to a winning effort in Maryland is all that is needed. Sentry is at tops now and looms as the one to beat. Jack Full is improving and is dangerous here.

Third race—Dornoch comes off a distance race but has plenty of punch to exhibit in this company. Seems well placed and I shall string along. Cash Surrender's last was encouraging and this one should not be long away from brackets. Dixie Princess and Pryor have had many chances but both have fighting chances. Mike likes Scotch Pepper.

Fourth race—Blue Dan, Cogartown and Lady Grandace is the way I prefer them in this mile event. They are fit maidens and each has a recent good race to offer. Mike wanted me to take Say Do.

Fifth race—Sleek turned in a whale of a race here the other day and may better that performance. Any improvement will hold these safe. Old Judge, despite an apprentice rider, is dangerous. Black Falcon for the show end.

Sixth race—Tradegain has worked well and meets only cheap ones here. I see no reason for mistakes. Kathleen F. and Best Policy for the other awards.

Seventh race—Crowned Head and Knight's Hope should battle it out for the chief end of the money here. Boocap and Smear are in light. Diverting has been scratched out of my book until he does something.

Golden Glove Bouts Scheduled Jan. 29

Amateur Boxers See Action in C. U. Gymnasium.

The Washington Golden Glove boxing tournament, this year to be a forerunner of the District amateur championships instead of being combined with the title meet, will be held in the Catholic University gymnasium January 29 and 30 and February 1. The amateur championships will be later in the year, probably in the early spring.

A new class has been added for sub-novice boxers who lack the seasoning to compete with their more experienced brethren. To be eligible in the sub-novice class, a boxer must have won not more than two amateur bouts. If he has been successful in more bouts than that, he must compete in the regular division.

Golden gloves will be awarded to the winners and medals to the runners-up. The winning team will be awarded a cup. The tourney is sponsored by the Herald.

A new price scale will be inaugurated in an effort to encourage greater attendance. The first two nights of the meet, children will be admitted for 10 cents. General admission for all three nights of the tournament will be 40 cents. Ringsides will be scaled at 85 cents the first two nights and $1.10 on the night of the finals.

Fair Grounds Results.

Hyattsville Faces St. John's Quintet

Mt. Rainier Five to Play Annapolis Today.

Two Prince Georges County high school teams see action today, with Hyattsville meeting St. John's Prep on the latter's court, while Mount Rainier is taking on Annapolis High at Annapolis. These are the only games of the week other than the regular Friday games.

The Mounts travel to Annapolis to meet a team which they defeated last year, 28 to 17, in the Maryland State basketball play-off. This is the first time that the schools have met in regular-season play. Annapolis will return the game on February 4.

Coach Perry Wilkinson will stand pat on the line-up that won the first county game with Annapolis by starting Steve Miller and George Taylor at forwards. James MacGregor will be at the pivot position. Earl Miller and Tillmon Scott as guards. Other boys to make the trip will be Leo Baldwin, Vernon Todd, Steve Ager, Edgar Shinn, Richard Roland and Donald Adams.

Tomorrow the Mounts will entertain St. John's on their home floor in a game that the lads from the District Line school will be battling to win, especially if Hyattsville loses to them today.

Zinkevich Is Star In Devitt Victory

Devitt Prep School opened its basketball season yesterday with a 36-29 victory at the expense of Rockville High School in a rough-and-tumble game at Rockville High. With Adam Zinkevich, football star, leading the way, Devitt took a 15-0 lead in the first quarter.

The hosts then made a ball game out of it and were trailing only 10-19 at the half and 17-25 at the third period, but could not succeed in overcoming the invaders' big first-quarter lead.

Zinkevitch scored 16 points, twice as many as his highly touted opponent at center, Gene Ochsenreiter, the Rockville High scoring star. Gene's younger brother, Jack, took honors for the day. Between them, Ochsenreither and Charlie Woodward scored 21 points.

Jimmy Braddock Leaves This Week On Southern Tour.

By Jimmy Powers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Champion Jim Braddock leaves this week for a Southern tour of 15 cities; first stop is Sarasota, then a hop to Havana, where there are much rhumba, senoritas and Bacardi, and "I don't want no part of none of 'em," growls the serious Jim . . . President Bob Quinn is peeved because our entry in the new name contest for the Boston Braves—"The Quinnces"—is gaining . . . George Blaeholder may not be with the A's this summer, according to our pal, Jimmy Isaminger.

We received requests to enter a poll on the 1936 baseball finish; the blank postcards, sent around the circuits, are to be returned to gamblers who wish to check their spring books . . . Tris Speaker has been made the General Phelan of the Cleveland Boxing Commission.

Can any of our readers pick the five best players who performed before 1900? Hall of Fame wants nominations from writers and some of us greener gents cannot remember days when every park had a horse and buggy entrance. Our Al Copland claims Bill Lange was then the fastest man in baseball; he was known as Little Eva. Hugh Duffy batted .438 in 1894 and Biddy McPhee played second without a glove.

Arlie Latham, Willie Keeler, Ed Delehanty, Charlie Comiskey, Buck Ewing, Cy Young, Amos Rusie, Hugh Jennings, John McGraw, Billy Hamilton and Jimmy McAleer were also headliners. Pop Anson was the Beau Brummel of them all . . . All right, professor, strike up "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" and let's go into a huddle.

Dan O'Mahony has netted almost as much money as Joe Louis . . . Lester Patrick would like to have Larry Aurie for his hockey club . . . Rogers Hornsby thinks the magnates made a mistake in offering a $500 bonus to the league's leading batter; it puts a premium on individual instead of team play. Hornsby points out that Hank Greenberg, of Detroit, batted 21 points lower than Champion Buddy Myer, yet Greenberg drove in 70 more runs; Julius Solters was 30 points under, yet he, too, brought his team more scores.

CASEY STENGEL, due here this week, will encourage Frenchy Bordagaray in the cultivation of his handlebar mustache through the playing season . . . Len Maidman, N. Y. U. basketball star, is reported displaying prima donna temperament. Len reports late for games and when too closely guarded during practice tilts hurls the ball into the gallery. Naughty Len!

The Cincy Reds will open spring training in less than four weeks at San Juan, Puerto Rico . . . Jimmy McLarnin is now shooting in the 70s and has written a challenge to Babe Ruth . . . They are talking of digging up Art Shires as an opponent for Buddy Baer, who plans a comeback . . . Girls' hockey is booming in Montreal . . . King Clancy rates the two best fist swingers in the league, Lionel Conacher and Bill Cook. The real reason Canada's Olympic hockey team exploded was because four men asked for $150 monthly expenses to care for their families while in Germany . . . Pretty Erna Kompa returned from Florida this week after setting new swim records to discover her job was gone . . . Freddy Lindstrom's release is traced to his rep as a "clubhouse lawyer."

Cardozo Defeats Howard High Five

Cardozo High School yesterday defeated the Howard High School five, of Wilmington, Del., in an overtime game, 37 to 34. The Delawareans led most of the way, but Robinson's shot, with three to play, tied the score at 3-all.

Butler came through with a shot from a sharp angle to put Howard again in the lead, but Robinson sank two foul shots to match the advantage as the game was tied, 34 to 34. In the three-minute extra period Henderson's shot from under the basket gave Cardozo the lead that spelled victory. He added another point by the foul route a minute later.

Two Inter-High Games Today

Eastern Five Will Oppose Western

To Seek 10th Triumph; Central Opens With Roosevelt Team.

THE rather weak revolution waged for the last year or more against Eastern High's iron rule over interhigh basketball continues this afternoon at Tech High without much promise of becoming any stronger. Western High, doubtful hope of stopping the champs' nine-game winning streak, will enter the game an overwhelming favorite to become Eastern's tenth straight victim.

Central, most dangerous of the rebellious forces, opens its aspiring drive for the title at Roosevelt High with a weakened Tech team as a none-too-formidable obstacle. Both games will start at 3:30 p. m.

Tech's chances of stopping the Mount Pleasanters have all but faded into oblivion with loss of its regular center, Wes Snow. Coach Rusty Thompson said last night the able pivot man would not be available for duty. Snow sprained his wrist severely last week and was unable to play in the game with Eastern.

Central Is Threat.

Despite Central's entering the contest on the long end of the odds, interest is centering on the game largely as a matter of curiosity. Central, as the result of its pre-series games in which it stood out even superior to Eastern's performances so far as their games with the George Washington freshmen were concerned, now is the definite threat to stop Eastern's championship drive.

Just what Coach Jack Ray's forces will be able to do minus the services of Sam Fox and Sid Gerstenfeld, his ineligible pair, forms one phase of interest surrounding the game. Although Snow will be among the missing, Coach Thompson does not believe Tech is necessarily due to lose. With its first-half performance against Eastern, which it held to 18-14, still a matter of comment, Tech looms today as at least a test which will show whether or not Central is the championship material it claims.

Dobyns to Start.

Coach Thompson is starting Tommy Dobyns, young sophomore from Mount Rainier, at center, with Bill Vermillion and Walton Merchant at the forwards and Bill Rea and Capt. George Hahn at the guard posts. Certain to see action is the mustachioed Horace Lowe, debonair substitute, who sank two baskets less than 3 minutes after being inserted in the line-up against Eastern.

As if the loss of Snow were not enough, Central's superiority at center is further assured by the presence of Big Bill Thompson, the 6-foot 5-inch young man whom his team claims is headed for All-High honors.

At the forwards, Don Fones, who, according to Sid Silkowitz, of the G. W. freshmen, is the best man in the series today, will be holding down one post. Dewey Poole, who plays as if he were not the freshman he is, is the probable other forward choice, with Billy Vermillion and Bob Saffran taking care of the guard assignments.

The Western-Eastern game brings together the champ and runner-up of last season. Burns, Daly, Borden, Lomax and Wells will form the starting line-up for Western with Buckholtz, Hollidge, Shaner, Dean and Colley working for Eastern.

Bethesda Defeats W. & L. Five, 18-17

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School brought its season's average to the 500 mark yesternay by eking out an 18-17 victory over Washington and Lee High in the last 30 seconds on the Little Generals' court.

The Marylanders were clinging to a 4-3 lead at the quarter, but saw the hosts assume the advantage, 11-6, at half-time and lead, 13-10, at the third quarter.

Baskets by the Wheeler brothers gave the Ballstoners an apparently safe lead, but Snyder and Lozupone score in succession, and with half a minute to go Bethesda took the ball outside under its opponent's basket, and Snyder, who was clear, sunk the snowbird for the victory.

New York, Jan. 13 (U.P.)—Dr. Marvin A. (Mal) Stevens, head football coach at New York University during 1934 and 1935, today signed a five-year contract. The terms were not announced.

Stevens, former gridiron star and coach at Yale, originally was appointed to N. Y. U. in March, 1934, under a one-year contract.

Last season, Stevens' team won seven of its eight games, losing the last game of the season to Fordham, 21-0.

Investigation Pinmen Take Loop Lead

Sweeps Test With G.P.O.; National Parks Bows to Veterans.

INVESTIGATION rolled its way into undisputed possession of the leadership in the Federal Bowling League last night at the Arcadia alleys, sweeping its match with the G. P. O. (Union Printers) with a 613 game and 1,764 set, tops for the night. Investigation's victory puts the Sleuths one game in front of National Capital Parks, the latter team receiving a setback by Veterans' Administration.

I. B. E. W. upset Highway in two games to deadlock the two teams for third place honors, I. B. E. W. getting the nod over the position with a greater total pinfall. G. P. O.'s one-pin margin over Public Schools in the second game enabled it to win an odd-game decision. Navy Yard whipped Interstate three games.

Three teams had a share in leading the South Atlantic Ladies' League over the week-end—Rosslyn, Richmond and Baltimore. The Loew's Theater Girls, of Richmond, after pulling up on even terms with Rosslyn Saturday night, were set down three games by the Baltimore lassies, in Baltimore. Rosslyn and Baltimore now share first place with 13 wins and 11 losses each, with the local representatives having high total pinfall. Richmond has 13 wins against 14 reverses.

Arthur "Steve" Brodie burned up the maples in the Procurement League last night at the Recreation alley. Rolling with the Dorics, Brodie topped off a 166 game with a season record mark of 427. The Dorics' 591 game and Gothic's 1,624 set, led the team scoring. Orientals continued to set the pace with two wins over the Colonials.

Arcadia dropped its special match against the Jimmy Mack's Rebels, of Baltimore, Sunday night at the Highland alleys, 1,773 to 1,813, but won the doubles and singles. Paul Harrison and Tony Santini defeated Roppelt and Herrold, 752 to 651, in the doubles match, while Eddie Espey and Tony Santini downed Herrold and Mowbray in a brace of singles matches. Santini shot a 406 set to down Mowbray by 12 sticks.

arranged. Richmond, on the other hand, failed to get within scoring range frequently enough to do much good. Most of the Spiders' shots were from beyond the free-throw circle and were extremely erratic.

Rough and Faster.

Play became rough and correspondingly faster as the expiration of time neared, and that only made it tougher on Richmond.

Tonight George Washington meets Villanova at Tech High School at 8:15 o'clock, with the Villanova Frosh opposing the Rinaldi Tailors in a preliminary game at 7 o'clock.

Hagerty Maps Goal Post Plan; To Go Before Rules Committee

A DIFFERENT type of goalposts, designed by Jack Hagerty, Georgetown football coach, will be offered to the National Football Committee for adoption when the rules body convenes the latter part of this month, it was disclosed yesterday.

Haggerty's idea, while not entirely new, possesses some originality, and while seemingly impossible at first glance is entirely plausible. Lou Little, Columbia coach and a warm friend of the Hoya mentor, will introduce the new design to the committee and urge its adoption. Little is a member of the coaches' advisory board.

Hagerty would keep the standards moored on the end-zone line, as they now are, but would have the cross-bar and uprights projected out to the goal line. The idea clearly is aimed at restoring the virtually lost art of field-goal and drop-kicking. A local engineer has assured him that with the standards set in a concrete base and further strengthened by mooring cables, such posts can be erected.

In the past, when the posts stood on the goal line, posts were built which were planted a yard or two behind the line, with the cross-bar and uprights built over the line. It was built similar to a balcony, but complete safety for the players still was not assured. Furthermore, it also was possible for members of the defending team to place their feet against the poles and better resist the offending eleven.

High School Highlights

By John R. Vosburgh.

THAT game between Eastern and George Washington freshmen Saturday was about the roughest thing in high school sports outside of Tech's football field. The late lamented Tech-Western football "riot" of 1934 was a Maypole dance in comparison.

It is highly possible the freshmen roughed themselves off the Central and Eastern schedules for next year. Coach Jack Ray of Central, who did about as much jumping up in protest of the Freshmen tactics as did Charlie Guyon of Eastern, says the Freshmen "will have to change their tactics to play us next year."

If some of the gentlemen who broke up the 1934 football series had been present at the G. W. gym they probably would have had to be carried out on a stretcher, victims of shock. Fortunately, what took place at G. W. has never been known to occur in interhigh games and Franklin School authorities need draw no gasps of alarm at reports of the G. W. brawl.

Don Fones, Central High's basket-tossing artist, is about the last word in high school basketball players so far as Sid Silkowitz, big G. W. Freshman guard is concerned. Silkowitz ought to know.

It was the former New York City All-High star's job to guard Fones in both games against Central. Fones made 26 points, 13 in each game. Silkowitz, ace of the Freshmen, made 15 in two games. Against Eastern Silkowitz rolled up 23 points in two games. Capt. Dope Dean, of Eastern, scored 11 for two games. He did not play Silkowitz except for a few minutes each game.

Chances of Eastern's becoming one of the great schoolboy teams of the East possibly have been ruined by a football game—the sandlot game in which Red Scheible broke his finger. Eastern is not the same team with Scheible missing.

In all due respect to Chick Colley, who is filling in for the All-High redhead, he is no Scheible. Colley is not the set-shot artist that Scheible is. But more important Colley often thinks a split second too slow, a split second when a pass to a man cutting would mean a basket.

If Scheible is able to regain his old form this season it will be little short of a miracle. Anybody who has a broken finger knows it. The injured digit has to be favored and basketball is a tough game in which to favor anything. Colley is improving every time out and in this improvement lies Eastern's hopes of reaching the heights.

It is now fairly well known that Yale and Columbia came out a couple of poor seconds to George Washington in efforts to get Billy Richardson, of Central, to study at their respective institutions and play football on the side, or vice versa.

Yale and Columbia made "some attractive propositions," as Billy's father, L. W. Richardson, a realtor, asserts. But it seems G. W. has some attractions Old Eli and Lou Little could not offer. Richardson is an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania, but would rather have the great little backfield star go to G. W. than tote a football for Penn.

The Richardson family in the first place would rather have Billy near home inasmuch as he is going to play football and run risk of an injury. Secondly, the Richardson family has a strong liking for Coach Hardy Pearce of Central, former G. W. tackle.

Pearce didn't attempt to influence Billy one way or the other, the elder Richardson explains, but the family knew the coach's preference. Thirdly, G. W. made as good an "offer" as did Yale and Columbia. Coach Jim Pixlee explained to the elder Richardson that the Central boy was one of the few high school backs he has ever seen able to block, tackle, run and pass virtually without a flaw.

Young Richardson, unanimous all-high choice, will enter G. W. in February, continuing a few hours' work at Central. If, by any chance he shouldn't show an inclination toward studying, his father explains, "we'll take him out of school." In view of Billy's love of football, this is hardly likely.

Penn. Railroad Again on Trial In Market Case

Granting of Concessions to Water St. Dealers Is Alleged.

Accused of granting concessions to several of its patrons in the Water street market, the Pennsylvania Railroad went on trial yesterday on an indictment charging 20 violations of the Elkins act, which prohibits such concessions.

The railroad, which was tried once before, only to have a jury fail to agree, faces a maximum penalty of $400,000 if it is found guilty on all counts. The last trial consumed three weeks.

The indictment charges the carrier rented stalls in the Water street market to dealers and rebated either a portion of the rent, or all of it, when the merchants used Pennsylvania Railroad facilities to obtain their wares.

Through the law firm of McKenney, Flannery & Craighill and R. A. Bogley, the company, in its previous trial, contended it merely had extended credit to dealers who had been affected by the depression. It showed that the "over-due" accounts were carried on the books as credits.

Harry L. Underwood, assistant United States attorney, and Z. W. Scott, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, represent the prosecution. The case is being tried before Justice F. D. Letts in the District Supreme Court.

Uniform Rules Planned by Trotters

Co-ordination of Racing Throughout U. S. Sought at Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio., Jan. 13.—The United Trotting Association, one of five major groups covering harness racing in America, will make a definite move Tuesday to place the sport under a set of uniform rules.

Mrs. Don A. Detrick, secretary, said the directors at their annual session would sanction tentative rules agreed upon January 7 in New York by representatives of the five organizations.

Under the new rules, a driver "set down" by one group would be penalized similarly by all five groups.

Penalties Invalid.

The old rules permitted a driver penalized by one group to race his horses at a track operating under the rules of another group. Uniform classifications, on the "money won" basis, will be effective under the new rules.

The "money won" classifications will be changed radically to permit speedier "graduation" into faster divisions. Under present regulations, a horse remains in the 2:19 class from the time it has won $1,500 until it reaches $50,000. The new rules limit the 2:19 class to earnings between $1,250 and $25,500.

A questionnaire sent to United Trotting Association members, showed they favored the "money won" over the race-time system 144 to 48.

Handicaps Out.

A total of 156 desired a licensed presiding judge at each meeting, which 32 did not. Heat racing was favored, 163 to 19, while dashes were opposed 133 to 43. Handicap racing was voted down, 115 to 49, while claiming races were favored 117 to 54.

The two-in-three heat plan drew a 144-to-28 favorable vote, while 138 voted for all races to be over the mile course and 29 favored different distances.

Organizations slated to approve the new uniform rules and classifications are the United, National and American Associations, the Grand Circuit, and the Trotting Horse Club of America.

Texts of Rulings on AAA Taxes, Cotton Suit

Verdict for Millers.

Text of the unanimous opinion in the rice millers' case:

This is one of the eight companion cases. They were consolidated for hearing by the District Court. It will be sufficient briefly to state the facts in No. 577:

The petitioner, a processor of rice, filed its bill in the District Court for Eastern Louisiana, to restrain the respondent from assessing or collecting taxes levied for the month of September, 1935, and subsequent months, pursuant to the agricultural adjustment act, 1933, as amended by the act of August 24, 1935. The bill charges the exaction is unconstitutional and alleges the respondent threatens collection by distraint, which will cause irreparable injury, as the petitioner has no adequate remedy at law to recover what may be collected. A preliminary injunction was sought. The respondent filed a motion to dismiss, citing Revised Statutes 3224 and Section 21(A) of the amended agricultural adjustment act as prohibiting restraint of collection, and also asserting that the petitioner had a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at law. The court refused an interlocutory injunction and entered a decree dismissing the bill. Appeal was perfected to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The district judge refused to grant an injunction pending the appeal. Application to the Circuit Court of Appeals for such an injunction was denied upon the view that the petitioner had an adequate remedy at law and the statute deprived the court of jurisdiction to restrain collection.

Case Fully Argued.

In praying a writ of certiorari the petitioner asserted that by reason of the provisions of Section 21(D) it would be impossible to recover taxes collected, even though the act were unconstitutional, since the section forbids recovery except upon a showing of facts not susceptible of proof. This court granted the writ and restrained collection of the tax upon condition that the petitioner should pay the amount of the accruing taxes to a depository, to the joint credit of petitioner and respondent, such funds to be withdrawn only upon the further order of the court. The cause was advanced for hearing and has been fully argued on the questions of the constitutionality of the exaction and the inadequacy of the remedy for recovery of taxes paid.

The changes made by the amendatory act of August 24, 1935, do not cure the infirmities of the original act, which were the basis of decision in United States vs. Butler (January 6, 1936). The exaction still lacks the quality of a true tax. It remains a means for effectuating the regulation of agricultural production, a matter not within the powers of Congress.

Order for Payment.

We have no occasion to discuss or decide whether Section 21(D) affords an adequate remedy at law, as yet the petitioner has not paid the taxes to the respondent, and, in view of the decision in the Butler case, hereafter cannot be required so to do. If the respondent should now attempt to collect the tax by distraint he would be a trespasser. The decree of the District Court will be vacated, an appropriate order entered directing the repayment to the petitioner of the funds impounded pendente lite, and the couse remanded to the District Court for the entry of a deeree enjoining collection of the assailed exaction. A similar disposition will be made of the companion cases.

So ordered.

Bankhead Act Case.

The text of the Supreme Court dismissal of the case involving the Bankhead cotton control act follows:

Lee Moor brought this suit on October 23, 1934, for a mandatory injunction to compel the Texas & New Orleans Railroad Co. to transport ten bales of cotton from Clint, Tex., to New Orleans. The company had refused to transport the bales because of the lack of the bale tags required by the cotton control act of April 21, 1934 (Sections 10, 14, 48 Stat. 598, 604). Moor contended that the statute was void, as an attempt to regulate the production of cotton contrary to the provisions of the fifth and tenth amendments of the Constitution of the United States. On final hearing, the district court did not rule upon the constitutional question, but denied the injunction and dismissed the complaint upon the ground that it had not shown that the plaintiff would suffer irreparable injury for which he had no adequate remedy at law. The Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the decree (75 F. (2d) 386) and certiorari was granted.

Background Stated.

The complaint alleged that the plaintiff was the owner of more than 3,500 acres of land in El Paso County, Tex.; that the encumbrances and the taxes and charges assessed for water were such as to require that he raise and sell annually 2,000 bales of cotton for at least 10 cents a pound net, or lose his land through foreclosure proceedings; that his cotton would have no value unless it could be transported to cotton markets; that the cotton control act imposed a tax of 50 per centum of the average central market price per pound of lint cotton and in no event less than 5 cents per pound; that having ginned about 1,000 bales of cotton, and being under the financial necessity of selling them, which was impossible under the statute unless he procured bale tags showing that the cotton was exempt or the tax had been paid, he had sought, under duress, and had obtained tax exemption certificates for 855½ bales, the entire amount to which he was entitled; that he would raise and gin a total of about 2,500 bales, each of the average weight of 500 pounds, during the year 1934 and had already ginned 1,833 bales; that he had tendered, without the required tags, ten bales to the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. for shipment to New York and ten bales to the defendant for shipment to New Orleans, but shipment had been refused solely by reason of the absence of the tags; that the average central market price of lint cotton was about 12 cents per pound and, if transported, his cotton would be worth about $60 a bale and the tax would be about $30 a bale; that if he was not permitted to move his cotton in interstate commerce he would suffer damage to the extent at least of $60,000, but that it would be impossible to determine the amount of damage accurately; that he had no adequate remedy at law and would be required to file a large number of suits based upon the refusal of the railroad companies to accept shipments. The complaint was not verified.

Moved for Dismissal.

On October 25, 1934, the defendant moved to dismiss the complaint, invoking the provisions of the act as a valid enactment, and on the same day the defendant answered to the same effect.

The case was tried on October 30 and November 5, 1934. Plaintiff made two "trial amendments" which somewhat amplified the allegations of his complaint. Defendant admitted the truth of substantially all the allegations except those relating to duress in connection with plaintiff's application for exemption certificates and as to the amount of his allotment, those as to future shipments, and those containing legal conclusions as to the invalidity of the act and the tax which it imposed.

The trial court received evidence. Plaintiff did not appear as a witness. The manager of his farm testified generally as to its cotton production, the market for cotton, and plaintiff's inability to sell or move his cotton without the bale tags; that the average central market price of cotton was about 12 cents a pound, or $60 a bale of 500 pounds; that plaintiff had borrowed $50,000 to finish harvesting his cotton, mortgaging his 855 bales as security for that loan which had been liquidated, and that plaintiff's financial condition was such that it was necessary for him to realize on his cotton. Another witness testified as to general market conditions. No testimony was offered for the defendant.

Complaint General.

The allegations of the complaint with respect to plaintiff's financial necessities, as a ground for equitable intervention, were of the most general character and the evidence in that relation was general and meager. There were general statements as to encumbrances and expenses, without any showing of details. Apparently, plaintiff had disposed of the 855 exempt bales and there was no showing that he could not have obtained the money necessary to move the remaining bales. The trial court concluded that plaintiff had failed to make a case for equitable relief and should be left to his legal remedy.

The circuit court of appeals, in affirming the decree, rested its decision upon the established prinicple that a mandatory injunction is not granted as a matter of right, but is granted or refused in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion. Morrison vs. Work, 266 U. S. 481, 490.

In this view of the record, and of the discretion which the trial court was entitled to exercise, the writ of certiorari was improvidently granted and it is dismissed.

It is so ordered.

Court Orders Tax Return

head act attached to the AAA amendments remained finally undetermined last night.

A red flag of warning against New Deal overstepping of farm control limitations set forth in last week's AAA ruling was raised by the court, however.

"The changes made by the amendatory act of August 24, 1935, do not cure the infirmities of the original act which were the basis of decision in United States vs. Butler," the court said. "The exaction still lacks the quality of a true tax. It remains a means for effectuating the regulation of agricultural production, a matter not within the powers of Congress."

Drama that had marked last week's Supreme Court signing of farm production control's death warrant was lacking in yesterday's proceedings, although the narrow courtroom was packed and opinions were rendered with accustomed gusto. Justice Roberts, who wrote the majority AAA decision, again spoke for the court in the rice millers case. It was Justice Hughes who announced the court would not take jurisdiction in the Bankhead case. Both opinions were notable in their brevity.

No Consolation.

An expected decision on TVA legality, in the constitutional test brought by minority stockholders of the Alabama Power Co., was not forthcoming. This probably will be handed down Monday, before the court takes a two-week recess.

Yesterday's decisions afforded small comfort either to the New Deal or to those who are seeking further curtailment of its powers. AAA chieftains have reached no decision on whether to proceed with enforcement of the Bankhead law, which the Supreme Court last week clearly implied was invalid, though it has yet to rule specifically on the act.

Opportunity for an early ruling is afforded in a suit against the cotton law by Gov. Eugene Talmadge, and the State of Georgia, which has yet to be argued. Assailing constitutionality of the law, Georgia claims "irreparable losses" on cotton produced on State farms, as result of the act.

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, co-author of the act, however, took new heart yesterday from the Supreme Court's refusal to rule.

"The court has as yet made no adjudication on the Bankhead act," he said, "and until such time as it does, there is no reason why the law should not continue in full force and operative."

Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, author of the potato control law, believed to have been doomed along with the AAA, the Bankhead act and the Kerr-Smith tobacco law last week, also called for continued enforcement of his potato legislation.

"I shall do all in my power to bring about operation of the potato law, as I think it is not affected by the AAA ruling," Warren said last night.

AAA Referendum "Out."

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—In one word, "denied," the United States District Court today disposed of P. T. Vincent's request for an injunction to preserve the AAA until the people decide its fate by referendum.

Attorney Arthur C. Hirst, representing Vincent, who sells real estates and steamship tickets, said he will go to the Supreme Court with his petition, asking that the court specify the practical effects of its decision invalidating the agricultural adjustment act. He holds that the wrecking of an act immediately after a ruling that it is unconstitutional is based on "custom alone."

Representative John H. Kerr (Democrat), North Carolina, chief sponsor of the tobacco control legislation attached to the AAA law, however, said he thought it would be futile to continue operation of the tobacco statute as now constituted, in the light of the AAA decision.

Holds Tax Not Vital.

"Tobacco has been selling at parity and I don't think we need to have processing taxes to continue this situation," he said. "I believe we can work out a co-operative system for tobacco production control, without taxes."

In declining to take jurisdiction in the Bankhead case action, the Supreme Court decided that a lower court, which had refused an injunction in the case, was empowered to refuse relief. Although the Supreme Court had taken the case under consideration, it ruled yesterday that its own review writ "was improvidently granted and it is dismissed."

The suit was brought by Lee Moor, a Texas cotton farmer, against the New Orleans & Texas Railroad for refusing to move his untaxed cotton. Attorneys for Moor in El Paso, Tex., yesterday, said the farmer will pay about $45,000 in taxes as result of the court's action, but will sue to recover them, according to Associated Press.

Although eight Louisiana rice millers who challenged constitutionality of the AAA, and asked back the $200,000 they have paid to a depository, will receive this relief, and other processors whose taxes are now in escrow will be similarly aided, the decision yesterday in the rice milling case grants no relief to those who complied with the law and paid their taxes.

Associated Press dispatches from Boston said Federal Judge Elisha H. Brewster at 4 p. m. will sign an order returning $7,000,000 to 70 Massachusetts firms which had paid the money in escrow.

Louisiana millers had contended that in the case of rice and other commodities, it was impossible to determine whether the tax had been passed to producer or consumer, as required by the AAA amendments in all suits to recover processing taxes.

Wide Rule Expected.

In view of this, it had been widely expected that the Supreme Court would take advantage of the open opportunity to decide on validity of the AAA restriction on suits.

But the court took this view:

"As yet the petitioner (rice miller) has not paid the taxes to the respondent (Government), and in view of the decision in the Butler (AAA) case, hereafter cannot be required so to do.

"If the respondent should now attempt to collect the tax by distraint, he would be a trespasser."

This opened the door to a new rush of suits to recover back processing taxes, leading up to Supreme Court decision on a point still in dispute. New Dealers were not cheered by the prospect, involving as it does lengthy litigation and a possibility that the Government ultimately may have to make good the $1,000,000,000 in illegal taxes it has collected.

This possibility, coupled with the necessity of replacing with some revenue the $180,000,000 in depositaries freed yesterday by the Supreme Court, led Representative Wesley Disney (Democrat), Oklahoma, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, to predict a new tax bill.

"I don't know where we could raise the money, but some of us cannot go home until we have paid the farmers," he said.

Relief Plan

know their responsibilities during a definite period.

Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of the WPA, declined to comment yesterday on the report of the mayors. He had called at the White House during the day, possibly to discuss with the President additional relief appropriations.

In his recent budget message the President said:

"The item for relief remains. Without that item the budget is in balance. * * * It is reasonably certain that the total appropriations for work relief during the fiscal year 1937 will be far less than during the current fiscal year."

In attendance at the conference were Mayors La Guardia, T. Semmes Walmsley, New Orlenas; F. W. Mansfield, Boston; Joseph K. Carson, jr., Portland, Oreg.; Neville Miller, Louisville; Harold Burton, Cleveland; Watkins Overton, Memphis, and Meyer C. Ellenstein, Newark, and Paul V. Betters, Washington, director of the conference of mayors.

PWA Assailed in Plea.

By the Associated Press.

William F. Madden, of Boston, asked the Supreme Court yesterday to hold unconstitutional a law under which millions of Federal relief dollars have been distributed.

He appealed from lower Federal court rulings which found him guilty of forging cards for workers on a Boston public library indexing project carried out with relief funds.

Madden's counsel contended that the section of NRA which provided PWA funds was unconstitutional because it delegates powers to the President to spend $3,300,000,000 with "unlimited authority and discretion." They said if the act was unconstitutional, its provisions failed and so Madden was not guilty.

May Wheat Sales Lower Average

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Persistent liquidating of May contracts did much to bring about a lower average of wheat values today. Short-lived rallies followed the announcement that rice process tax case before the United States Supreme Court had been decided in favor of millers.

Dollar Rallies After Further Drop Abroad

Pound and French Franc React, Reversing Recent Trend.

By the Associated Press.

Principal foreign monies reacted sharply in dollar terms in New York Exchange trading yesterday, reversing the trend in European markets earlier.

The pound sterling declined 1⅛ cents in the American market at $4.96 ⅜. Before New York opened the dollar was weak in London, getting as low as $4.98 1-16 to the pound, before rebounding to close at 4.98⅞.

French francs lost .02¾ of a cent at 6.62 cents in New York, while previously in Paris the dollar moved consistently lower at the equivalent of 6.647 cents to the franc.

Guilders got down .18 of a cent in New York at 68.22 cents and Swiss francs backed up .13 of a cent at 32.64 cents.

Based on the closing rate for the French franc in American trading, the dollar was valued at a premium of 20-100 of 1 per cent, compared with a discount of 21-100 Saturday and a premium of 24-100 a month ago.

Institute Estimates Steel Output 49.4%

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Steel production during the current week was estimated today by the American Iron & Steel Institute at 49.4 per cent of capacity compared with 49.2 in the preceding week.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 54.6 per cent, and a year ago they were 47.5 per cent of capacity.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Lose Breadth and Activity; Bonds Steady; Wheat Lower; Cotton Gains.

New York, Jan. 13.—Security markets began the new week with greater hesitation than recently has been shown, and were not stimulated by another Supreme Court decision tending to hold the New Deal up to rebuke as an administrator of unconstitutional measures. Trading in stocks for the first time in more than a week failed to reach the 3,000,000-share mark, and price changes were mixed throughout. Bonds were quiet and steady, with a slight tendency of Treasury bonds to ease. Wheat fell, but cotton rallied on dismissal of a suit in the Supreme Court which threatened to test the constitutionality of the Bankhead control act. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 100⅛ cents a bushel.

Morning trading in the security and commodity markets was restrained by expectation that the Supreme Court again would decide important cases involving New Deal management of all business and agriculture. Decisions handed down did not clear up all disputed matters, but were on the whole favorable to speculative sections, insofar as trading chooses to regard as bullish, or is indifferent to the mere matter of putting the Federal budget further out of balance.

Some Disappointment.

In the rice millers' case the court held, as it was confidently expected to do, that processing taxes paid into court but not turned over to the Treasury, would go back to the companies paying them. That involves some $200,000,000 and means in numerous instances the return of handsome sums until now tied up in the courts. The effect was to confirm the market's discount last week of such returns for companies known to have money so involved.

Some disappointment was felt that the court, in dismissing a case brought to question the Bankhead cotton control act failed to announce a decision on the merits of the act itself. That the Bankhead act is fully as unconstitutional as the AAA itself is universally believed, but apparently some other case will have to be used for final decision, and that might be done in time to affect the planting of the next crop. Disappointment also was felt because the court had not reached its decision in the Tennessee Valley Authority case, and utility stocks were under a little pressure at times.

For the long view, the Supreme Court decision that the Government will not get $200,000,000 in taxes that it hoped to obtain is bearish or bullish depending on what the Administration now decides to do. Moreover, it is more important to know what chance the Government will have of retaining the $900,000,000 or so of processing taxes already collected, a matter yet to be determined.

The Harrison bonus bill in the Senate is at least an improvement over the House bill, inasmuch as it does not wipe out interest due the Government on bonus advances already made. By resorting to payment in bonds the Treasury may at least postpone the necessity for raising more taxes or of printing greener greenback money than that now in use. In the end, naturally, the effect will be inflationary, without even the excuse of a temporary aid to business.

Meanwhile it will do no harm to look straight in the face the ghost of formerly solvent governments. To do so might yet save this country a vast amount of financial worry and hard times. Such a look might just as well be taken through the eyes of President Roosevelt himself. In 1932, at Indianapolis, he said:

"If a nation is living within its income, its credit is good * * * But if it continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy. It is my pledge and my promise that * * * rigid Government economy shall be forced by a stern and unremitting administration policy of living within our income."

Speculating on Dollars.

When the dollar rallied, after dropping momentarily to a new low quotation at the opening of foreign exchange trading, it moved up much faster in relation to francs than in relation to sterling. The recovery evidently was based upon realization abroad that there was enough potential inflation of bank credit in sight to make unnecessary any further devaluation of the dollar such as continental centers appeared to fear. As in the franc, probably there was not so much revival of confidence in dollars as there was renewed distrust of francs, especially in view of the reassembling of the French Chamber tomorrow.

Meanwhile, with respect to sterling, London observers comment on factors other than the possibility of further dollar devaluation. They note the pressure on dollars resulting from the payment in London for the heavy silver purchase, and they assert that liquidation of American securities held abroad has been taking place, with repatriation of some of the proceeds of the sales. If nothing else is to be learned from the current oscillation of currencies and markets it is that any hint of forced changes in currency values has decidedly upsetting effects on capital, which is to say—soon or late—on trade.

Profits Tax.

For the benefit of its preferred stockholders, Allied Chemical & Dye is studying the liability for taxes on profits by those who hold the shares until redemption and may seek an opinion from the Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington. Meanwhile the weight of opinion among tax specialists is against the horseback opinion given to the Sun by the local office of the bureau last week. One lawyer writes: "Owing to an entirely unreasonable amendment made in 1935, section 115 (c) of the revenue act as construed by Article 115-5 of Regulations 86 provides that upon redemption of stock 100 per cent of the gain is recognized irrespective of the length of time held."

Bankhead Act Verdict Halts Cotton Drop

Opening declines of 1 to 9 points in sympathy with easier Liverpool cables were extended to 20 points during the morning. News that the Supreme Court had dismissed the Bankhead act test suit without passing on its constitutionality stimulated covering.

Average to short French combing 64s and finer domestic wools in original bags brought 82 to 84 cents, scoured basis, while average to good French combing in similar lines realized 84 to 86 cents. Candy Sales Show More Family Funds

THE PARKER CORN GENERAL DISTRIBUTORS INCORPORATED INVESTORS

Boston, Mass., Jan. 13.—Sales of candy reflect the condition of the family pocketbook. While candy sales last November increased only 4 per cent over November, 1934, sales in the first 11 months of last year were 8½ per cent larger than in the same 1934 months.

Total of Jobless Rises in November

New York, Jan. 13.—After declining for three consecutive months to a new low for the recovery movement, the number of persons unemployed in the United States rose from 12,109,000 in October to 12,194,000 in November, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. The number of persons employed declined from 38,537,000 to 38,476,000.

As compared with the corresponding month a year ago, however, the unemployment situation in November showed a considerable improvement with 1,236,000 fewer persons out of work. The number of persons employed in November showed an increase of 1,524,000 over a year ago. The decrease in unemployment was less than the increase in employment because of the gain in the population.

Net Incomes 10% Better Than Year Ago

Wages and Investment Yield Rising Faster Than Expenses.

Minneapolis, Jan. 13.—The average American, because his cash income from either wages or salary and investments rose faster than his living expenses, was nearly 10 per cent better off in real income on December 1, 1935, than on the same day a year earlier, according to a consumers' study made by Investors Syndicate.

Real income—that is, the relationship between actual earnings and living costs—during the 12 months rose 9.99 per cent. Actual income advanced 15.08 per cent, thanks to gains of 25.36 per cent in wages, 16.09 per cent in salaries and 4.71 per cent from investments.

Actual cash expenditures, in the same period, were up 4.58 per cent, the gains of 9.52 per cent for housing, 9.12 per cent for foods and 0.53 per cent for general expenditures being held down by the decline of 3.70 per cent in clothing prices, which resulted from reduced clothing sales caused by unseasonal weather.

We have ample funds available for Loans

UNEMPLOYED funds, like unemployed men are a drag on the community. They serve no useful end. The American Security is anxious to put more of its funds to work helping Washington citizens and Washington business.

Another reason for our desire to cooperate with legitimate borrowers is that the bank derives a part of its income from well placed loans. To arrange such loans is one of our first duties to the community we serve.

Applications for loans are acted upon promptly. Interviews are confidential. We invite you to call and dicuss your credit problems with one of our officers.

8 Held as Agents Of Fake-Bill Ring

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Police and Secret Service agents today seized eight persons, four of them women, as the alleged agents of a national counterfeiting ring.

Capt. Andrew Barry, who directed the raids with Capt. Thomas Callaghan, of the Federal Secret Service, said several of the prisoners had disclosed the location on the Eastern seaboard of the gang's counterfeiting plant.

The names of those held were given as:

Peter Fanale, 26; Frank Russo, 29; his wife, Louise, 19; Laura Booker, 19, and Lois Harris, 25, night club entertainers, who came here recently from Tulsa Okla.; Andrew Mansoa, 24, and his wife, Millie, 20; and Rudolph Smith, 24.

Capt. Barry said $1,000 in spurious $10 bills were found in Russo's possession.

Howard Law Student Sues for Reinstatement

Seeking to compel his reinstatement to the Howard University Law School, Frederick S. Weaver, a sophomore in the school, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to issue a mandamus directing the proper officers of the school to cancel the suspension placed on him December 20, 1935.

The petition, filed by N. A. Dobbins and O. D. Branson, attorneys, alleged Weaver had written several signed articles for a colored newspaper, which were objected to by some of the school officials. He was notified just before the Christmas holidays that he would not be permitted to resume his classes and he termed the school's action "arbitrary and illegal."

Disbarred Lawyer Asks Free Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Claiming disbarment by lower Federal courts of the District of Columbia had reduced him to poverty, Jesse C. Duke, Washington lawyer, yesterday appeared in person to ask the Supreme Court to receive an appeal of the disbarment action without payment of customary filing and printing fees.

Duke asked the highest court either to prohibit the United States Court of Appeals from action or to compel it to speed its decision on the disbarment appeal. Duke claimed the Court of Appeals had delayed a decision for nine months.

The lawyer said he was disbarred for protesting that the District of Columbia Supreme Court and a District Federal attorney had "hand picked a jury." Duke said he had been an attorney for 20 years and a member of the bars of Virginia, Maryland, District of Columbia and the United States Supreme Court.

Dick Powell 'Annoyer' Wins Court Acquittal

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—Jessica Weston, 20, who weighs 77 pounds, won an acquittal today on charges of annoying Dick Powell, movie actor. Municipal Judge A. A. Scott warned her to stay away from Powell's home hereafter.

"I met Mr. Powell some time ago in Louisville, Ky., my home State, when he was directing an orchestra," Miss Weston testified. "I met him again Christmas Day and he seemed very friendly. He gave me a $5 bill and wished me a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

"I went back on December 27 to see Mr. Powell. A servant told me he wasn't home. I went to the garage and sat in his car, waiting for him to return. I turned on the radio to help pass the time. All I went there for was to see if Mr. Powell couldn't help me get a job, either as a waitress or a beauty operator."

Powell's secretary found her there and called police.

Will Forger Indicted As Slayer of Husband

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Hazel Glab, recently convicted of forging a capitalist's will, was indicted today on a charge of slaying her wealthy husband, John I. Glab, June 18, 1928.

A former policeman, W. R. McIntire, told the grand jury that Mrs. Glab and her husband quarreled, the latter threatening to leave her and will his fortune to his first wife.

Her recent conviction was on a charge of forging the $400,000 will of Albert Cheney to her benefit. She said she and Cheney had planned to be married but his death intervened.

The murder indictment today charged that she shot Glad in the front yard of her home in 1928. She was accused of the slaying at that time but charges were dismissed.

Ice Cream Companies Sued on Trust Laws

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Suit for $54,000,000 damages for alleged violation of the Sherman and Clayton antitrust laws was filed in United States District Court today against more than two score ice cream companies by the Mills Novelty Co., Chicago, manufacturers of counter ice cream freezers, slot machines and other products.

S. Joel Middleman, attorney for the Mills company, said the complaint charged the defendants with unfair competition, defamation of character, sabotage and boycotting tactics.

Among defendants are the Borden Co., the Breyer Ice Cream Co., the Hydrox Ice Cream Co. and Castle's Ice Cream Co.

Bar Debate Is Slated On Hauptmann Trial

Chicago, Jan. 13 (AP).—The American Bar Association's executive committee waded through routine affairs today preliminary to action tomorrow on a report covering "flagrant offenses" and "shocking incidents" of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

Former Judge William L. Ransom, president of the association, said the Hauptmann trial report would be submitted tomorrow to the full committee for determination of "the important question of whether a trial so conducted was in accord with a public sense of justice and propriety."

'King of Bootleggers' To Begin 2-Year Term

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13.—Harry Weller, Clearspring, who gained the reputation during the prohibition era of "king of bootleggers," will begin a two-year Federal prison sentence this week, following his conviction of violating the internal revenue laws as a result of a still seized in his clubhouse last year. He was also fined $800 by Federal Judge Frank G. Soleman. Claude Carbaugh, jointly convicted with Weller, was paroled for two years.

Substitute Plan Urged for AAA Crop Program

Maryland Extension Service Group Offered Idea by Symons.

Application of a plan similar to milk-marketing agreements used by co-operative dairy associations to other crops was suggested yesterday by Dr. T. B. Symons, University of Maryland Extension Service director, as a substitute for the AAA.

Addressing the annual Extension Service conference at College Park, Dr. Symons said the plan assured a producer a definite price for a certain basic amount of his production.

"He is free to produce as much more than his basic quota as he may desire, but must take his chance as to the price he may receive for any production beyond this base," the director pointed out.

The principal embodied in the plan is based upon the fact that a continuing supply must be given assurance of a basic price which will enable him to stay in business. The lower price received on surplus would serve as a brake on overproduction.

"I believe that a farm can be given a suitable quota for production of different major crops," he asserted, "and that the farmer can be assured a reasonable price based upon fair exchange, or parity, for his basic quota."

"He could produce in excess any quantity he desires, but would be given the difference between the general sale price and the parity price on his basic production only. Funds for such payments would be raised either by special or general taxes, or other constitutional means."

Other speakers on the day's program were Dr. H. J. Patterson, dean of the university's college of agriculture; Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of extension in the department of agriculture; George A. Finch, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; Dr. S. H. DeVault, head of the university's department of economics, and H. W. Hochbaum, of the Agriculture Department.

The movement to push the extension of New York avenue eastward from its intersection with Bladensburg road to a point near Tuxedo, Md., is gaining headway, according to Mayor Fred W. Gast, of Cheverly.

Traffic on the Defense highway would be greatly relieved by such a new route, it is claimed. The proposed thoroughfare would parallel the Pennsylvania Railroad for the greater part of the way, and connect with the suggested superhighway to Baltimore over the right of way of the abandoned Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis electric railway.

Gast and others who are working on the project are seeking the co-operation of the District of Columbia Commissioners and Maryland Congressional leaders in bringing about the early construction of the route.

Projects of the Rotary Club of College Park for 1936 include a modern recreation center for Prince Georges County, systematic planting of trees along the county's highways and co-operation in solving county problems and rendering international service.

T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and a member of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is chairman of the club service committee.

Liquor Law Revision Is Sought To Stimulate Montgomery Sales

Cut in State Tax, Change in Hours, and Other Amendments Proposed to Aid Competition With Washington Beverage Dispensers.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board yesterday drafted a seven-point legislative program which it will ask the county commissioners to recommend for enactment at the special session of the State General Assembly next month.

Two suggested changes were designed to enable the county dispensaries and beer retailers to compete more equitably with Washington's liquor stores. They proposed reduction of the State tax on distilled spirits from $1.10 to 50 cents a gallon and the changing of "on sale" hours for beer from 6 a. m. until midnight, as at present, to from 8 a. m. until 2 a. m., except on Saturday night, when the midnight closing would be observed.

The other suggested changes were:

Amendment of the liquor law to permit brewers and distributors to sell directly to retailers, eliminating the bookkeeping necessary under the present setup where sales go through the dispensaries.

Amendment to permit the holders of wine licenses to sell wine with an alcoholic content up to 21 per cent, instead of the 14 per cent to which they are limited now.

Amendment to provide exemption of the receipts of the dispensaries from the State gross receipts tax.

Amendment to permit licensed retailers to change the type of their license without the advertisements and hearings required now.

Amendment so that all gross receipts of the dispensaries might be deposited to the credit of the board and profits forwarded to the county treasurer each month after bills were paid. Under the present system, gross receipts must be turned over to the county treasurer, who pays bills.

Fire, believed to have been caused by an explosion, early yesterday destroyed the garage of Raymond Snyder, near Gaithersburg, Md., causing damage estimated at $2,500.

The blaze was discovered shortly after 1:30 a. m. by Mrs. Snyder, who heard the explosion. When Snyder reached the garage it was a mass of flames. He did not call the fire department, he told police, because the garage was in ruins when the fire was discovered. Two large trucks, valued at approximately $1,000 each, six tons of baled hay, valued at $60 with which they were loaded, and the building, valued at $400, were a total loss. A neighbor, Estelle Clagett, also heard the explosion and said the garage had been destroyed when the flames were discovered.

"The Purchase of Peace Bonds" will be discussed at the meeting of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., tomorrow, with Frederick J. After the presentation of both sides members of the club will be given an opportunitey to ask questions.

The guest speaker at the meeting will be Jay N. (Ding) Darlinger, cartoonist and journalist, former chief of the United State Biological Survey. Darling's subject will be "Wild Life Conservation."

A business meeting will precede the program. Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president, will officiate, and Mrs. Arthur T. Fast wil be soloist.

Dr. Clara Fishpaugh, sociologist, Maryland State Board of Mental Hygiene, will address the meeting of the Richard Montgomery High School Parent-Teacher Association Thursday at 8 p. m., it was announced yesterday by Philip W. Gates, president.

Walker, Monrovia, will go to Baltimore today to represent the Montgomery County Farm Bureau at the annual convention of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation, it was announced yesterday by J. W. Jones, president of the county bureau, who will also attend the meeting as a member of the State board of directors.

Plans for a membership drive will be discussed at a meeting tonight of Cissel-Saxon Post, American Legion Auxiliary, in Jesup Blair Community House, Silver Spring, Md.

A number of members are planning to attend the annual banquet of the American Legion, at the Southern Hotel, Baltimore, February 5. The affair is given in honor of the national president of the American Legion Auxiliary and the national commander, American Legion.

Senate Group Backs Bonus, Deaf to Debt Rise Warning

Finance Committee Acts Despite Morgenthau's Admonitions.

Measure May Reach Floor Tomorrow

Secretary Hints Action May Call for 2 Billion New Financing.

In the face of admonitions by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the Administration may face a $35,500,000,000 public debt by the end of the next fiscal year, the Senate Finance committee yesterday approved the new coalition bond-payment bonus bill, by a vote of 15 to 2.

The bill may be called up in the Senate tomorrow, Chairman Pat Harrison told newspapermen. Only two members of the committee cast dissenting ballots. They were Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan, up for re-election this fall, and Senator Peter G. Gerry (Democrat), Rhode Island.

The bill, which was substituted for the cash payment measure overwhelmingly voted by the House last week, would pay off the $2,200,000,000 bonus debt in non-negotiable bonds issued in multiples of $50, which could be cashed at postoffices for full face value, or held to accrue 3 per cent interest.

Called to Give Views.

Secretary Morgenthau had been called to testify before the committee on the probable effect of the bonus bond issue on the Government bond market. Although he spoke in executive session, it was learned that he said in effect that the issue would not do the bond market any good.

He also testified, it was learned, that bonus passage might expand to $11,300,000,000 the Treasury financing requirements in the next 17½ months, of which $5,800,000,000 would be for refunding of outstanding obligations; $2,000,000,000, which may be required to meet relief needs, and $1,500,000,000 estimated by the President as next year's deficit.

He told the committee the President will veto a cash payment bonus bill, however. As to new taxes, he said that would be a matter for Congress to decide.

President Silent.

At the White House, the President reiterated that he had no comment to make at this time on the bonus. Told that Secretary Morgenthau had said he would not sign a cash bonus measure, he replied with a query on the executive nature of the Secretary's testimony. Unabashed, reporters tried another tack. They referred to Morgenthau's statement that $2,000,000,000 might be needed for relief. Smilingly the President remarked that this was an example of reports that could come out of executive committee sessions.

On the other side of the Capitol, leaders who had helped rush to House passage the Vinson-Patman-McCormack cash bonus bill were noncommittal on the Senate Finance Committee's action. In one quarter it was intimated, however, that unless certain changes are made in the bill in the Senate, the House may demand a conference to work out differences.

It was Senator Couzens, one of the two members of the Finance Committee to vote against the coalition bonus bond payment plan, who told newspapermen many of the details of Morgenthau's testimony, refusing to be bound by the secrecy Chairman Harrison had imposed.

Bell at Hearing.

It was said Morgenthau would not disclose the President's attitude toward the pending bill. In many quarters, a recent prediction by Senator Harrison that the bill will become law and support of the measure by Majority Leader Robinson were believed to hint that the President will sign the bill.

It was in response to a question by Couzens that Morgenthau ventured the opinion that a bonus bond issue would not help the Federal bond market. Despite an earlier prediction by Senator Harrison that no new Treasury financing operations would be made necessary by the bonus bond payment plan, Morgenthau said the measure might require a $2,000,000,000 money-raising operation.

Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the budget, appeared with Morgenthau before the committee, but neither took a direct stand for or against the bonus, according to Seantor Couzens.

The Michigan Senator quoted Morgenthau as saying he couldn't tell whether the Treasury could

Norris Sees Bar to Farm Control, Evokes Move to Alter Constitution

AAA Ruling Brings Demand for Legal Changes to Forestall Future Supreme Court Reverses; President Hopes Senator Is Pessimistic.

By Robert C. Albright.

Administration plans for a new farm control program replacing the invalid AAA yesterday encountered a flat prediction it will not conform with Supreme Court restrictions, as a move for constitutional and statutory court changes developed in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Stressing the "sweeping" nature of the high court's AAA finding, Senator George W. Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, precipitated a stormy barrage of farm demands for curtailment of Supreme Court powers when he asserted belief that the AAA ruling bars extensive Federal farm regulation.

Informed of the Norris statement, President Roosevelt said he hoped the Nebraska Progressive was overpessimistic. He indicated the Administration hopes soon to lay a comprehensive farm program substitute before Congress. After luncheon with the President earlier in the day, Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson predicted the AAA substitute will be before Congress by the end of the week.

"Must Do Something."

"I don't think it is possible, if this decision is to stand, to pass any law that will regulate production, even though such regulation is fundamental to farm relief," Senator Norris had told the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"We've got to do something with this decision," added Norris, whose own TVA project is coming up for constitutional review by the court next week. "We've got to overcome it in some way."

This plea by the Nebraska liberal, taken up and elaborated by a succession of farm leaders and by former Senator Smith W. Brookhart, of Iowa, was answered by Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, in an impassioned final statement before the committee.

Smith Pleads for "Balance."

"The Supreme Court is part of our Constitution," Smith said. "Each judge takes an oath, as I do and every other Senator does, to support the Constitution. That is our bill of rights. Whenever they find it brought to their attention that the Constitution has been violated, no matter where or by whom, it is their duty so to say."

Brookhart insisted he and Norris were not proposing a constitutional amendment, but a plan that would shut off all constitutional issues from going to the Supreme Court, by barring consideration in the lower courts.

Smith retorted that such a proposal would upset the existing balance of power by making the legislative branch of Government dominant.

"I prefer a constitutional form of government," Smith asserted. "It is the fundamental presence of the individual's rights, that are inhereent and inalienable, that were written into our Declaration of Independence, sealed by the blood of the Revolution and have been adhered to from that day to this. It inheres in every State government. It inheres in our Federal Government. It is the charter of the people that

Kipling Fights For Life; Watch Set at Bedside

Peritonitis Sets In, But Poet Wages Gallant War on Death.

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 15.—Peritonitis has set in and great anxiety is felt for the life of Rudyard Kipling, 70, British poet and writer famed universally, it was revealed at 2 a. m.

Kipling was reported fighting gallantly for life. His physician and a nursing staff were in constant attendance.

At 3:45 a. m. it was announced that Kipling was sleeping "quite comfortably." Dr. A. E. Webb-Johnson, specialist, who operated on Kipling, left the hospital at that time after being hastily called to his patient's bedside at midnight.

It was learned that the famed poet of empire rested fairly comfortable all of Tuesday, but was quite exhausted. He was too weak to speak to his wife, who held her husband's hand for hours at a time while he dozed.

It was revealed that when Kipling arrived at the hospital at 7:30 a. m., Monday, his condition was so grave that surgeons were unable to attempt the customary "shortcircuiting" operation for intestines perforated by an ulcer, and were forced to adopt emergency measures.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 15 (AP). The critical condition of Rudyard Kipling, who underwent an emergency operation Monday, caused his surgeon, Dr. A. E. Webb-Johnson, to establish a watch at his bedside early today.

The surgeon arrived shortly after midnight to examine the 70-year-old author. A bulletin was issued announcing there had been no change in Kipling's condition, and the doctor decided to stay at his bedside for the remainder of the night.

Physicians said the ailment of the distinguished author-poet is one which may produce sudden changes.

Mrs. Kipling was not immediately called to the hospital, however.

Mrs. Kipling, who is American born, and their one daughter visited the hospital tonight and remained for more than an hour.

Among thousands enquiring as to his condition were the king and queen and Kipling's cousin, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin.

Allen Resigns As D. C. Relief Administrator

Commissioner Meeting Approves Transfer to Welfare Board.

Commissioner George E. Allen yesterday quit as District relief administrator, a post he has held since the local relief setup was organized here more than two years ago.

In relinquishing his post, Allen said he was motivated by the belief that relief here is a permanent public necessity and that its administration should be by the Board of Public Welfare.

The Board of Commissioners accepted Allen's view and approved a motion made by Allen that took cognizance of the permanency of relief.

This motion stated, in part:

"Improved economic conditions make it imperative that the local communities carefully consider the best available plans for the humane reduction of relief rolls. Such reduction should not be carried out indiscriminately by curtailment of funds, but rather by careful check of the actual needs of individual cases.

"In view of these developments it is believed that the time has come to transfer the administration of relief activities in the District to an established social service organization.

"As a Commissioner of the District I recommend that all relief activities be placed under supervision of the Board of Public Welfare. It is a non-political organization, created by statute, and in view of the existing conditions, the logical agency to assume the responsibility of relief administration."

Action of the Commissioners came at a time when local officials and more than 20,000 "cases" were wondering what was going to happen to them in the next few weeks.

Question of Money.

Commissioner Allen had estimated it would require not less than $600,000 supplemental appropriation to carry the relief load on the pressent basis for the rest of the fiscal year. The question of money which might be needed was not raised formally.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said the board would carry out the edict of the Commissioners and would take over administration of relief as soon as practicable. That meant, he said, a very short time, the delay being caused only by the mechanics of transfer of books and such things. Commissioner Allen conferred with Street on Monday before he presented his recommendation to his colleagues yesterday.

Some of the language of Allen's memorandum which was approved by the Commissioners might have been quoted from the statements of Street, who was appointed to his post by Commisisoner Allen.

The policy set forth in the statement of the Commissioners, Street said, will be carried out as a sound public policy.

Significant Change.

Despite the fundamental change in the situation, the actual transfer of the mechanics is not expected to make much trouble or delay, inasmuch as the so-called emergency relief division has been operating under the supervision of Street.

The change is not to make any difference, at this time, in relief payments and details of functioning, it was said.

Pronouncement of the Commissioners was regarded as especially significant in view of the close touch they have had with Federal relief officials. Commissioner Allen, it is known, has delayed many of his relief plans from day to day until he received command from the Federal authorities. Confronted with another approaching emergency in the local situation, the Commissioner apparently deemed it the course of wisdom to lay the whole problem on the local doorstep.

Welfare officials are expected to present to the Commissioners in the next few days the basis of a continuing program which shall call for more money and an increased staff so that relief clients can be rehabilitated.

Woman Benefactress Declares Ashcraft, Son's Slayer, Insane

Hobbling on crutches into Justice Daniel O'Donoghue's criminal court like a character from a novel by Charles Dickens, a lame, gray, little old lady, Miss Fannie Stocking, of 3840 Fulton street northwest, benefactress of David Ashcraft, yesterday told a jury trying him for the murder of his 5-year-old son that, in her opinion, he had gradually lost his mind.

Miss Stocking, widely known for her welfare work, was the last witness of the day and surprise witness for the defense, which is striving to prove the paralytic news vendor was insane on September 12 of last year, when he held his child, David, jr., over an open gas jet in his basement room at 227 Third street northwest.

Clad in a dark suit, she was assisted to the witness stand late in the afternoon. Under close questioning by Defense Attorney Fred J. Icenhower, she told of how she met the crippled David Ashcraft in 1928, the year of his marriage, and how she tried to help him.

"When I first met David," asserted Miss Stocking in a clear voice, "I tried to help him all I could. I bought him his wheel chair, or tricycle, which he needed badly.

"David didn't seem right to me even then. He didn't seem altogether reasonable. I treated him accordingly, for I wanted to help him to become self-reliant and self-supporting."

Through the years Miss Stocking saw David. He seemed to be failing mentally, she testified. Where first he merely fell momentarily into fits of moodiness, toward the end of 1933 he changed utterly.

There was a time, Miss Stocking

Hauptmann Denied Writ In U. S. Court

Habeas Corpus Request in Supreme Court Is Next Step.

'It's the End,' Says One Attorney, but Wilentz Predicts Reprieve.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 14.—Rebuffed tonight in a desperate attempt to obtain a writ of habeas corpus delaying the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, his attorneys announced after a conference that they probably would make a final effort through the United States Supreme Court to halt the execution scheduled for Friday night.

At the conclusion of a four-hour conference which followed denial of a habeas corpus writ by Judge J. Warren Davis, of the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals, Lloyd Fisher, chief of defense counsel, said:

"We have decided to act in the direction of relief in the Federal courts, probably in the United States Supreme Court."

There are two possible methods the defense may use in the new effort to delay execution of the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

May Appeal to Roberts.

One is to go direct to Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court, who has jurisdiction over this district, and ask for a writ of habeas corpus, which means, "Produce the body."

A second method is to go to one of three Federal Circuit Courts of Appeals judges in this district, of which Judge Davis is one, to ask for what Fisher called "a writ of probable cause." This amounts to an appeal from the adverse decision made by Judge Davis late today. If they could get this writ from one of the judges—obviously they would not go to Davis again—the attorneys would appear before the three Circuit Court of Appeals judges sitting together in Philadelphia to argue the case.

Fisher said he had no assurance that a reprieve would be granted by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, adding that defense plans were based on no hope of an executive stay.

Hopes Fading.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 14 (AP).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann moved another step nearer the electric chair tonight when a Federal judge refused to grant him a habeas corpus writ or to stay his execution set for Friday night.

But even as this avenue of escape was closed, the man condemned to die for the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder was given hope for a few more days of life by a report that Gov. Harold G. Hoffman would grant a reprieve.

Rejecting all of the arguments of defense counsel that Hauptmann's trial at Flemington was surrounded by prejudicial influences, United States Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis said that to grant the writ he would have to overrule both the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals and the United States Supreme Court.

Despair was written on the faces of the defense lawyers as they left the courtroom.

"The End," Says One.

"That is the end," said one of the five attorneys, who would not be quoted by name.

"The only possibility in the world is the United States Supreme Court," said Neil Burkinshaw, a Washington lawyer just added to the defense staff in a final effort to save Hauptmann.

Before going to the hearing and branding the writ application signed by Hauptmann himself in his death cell "a subterfuge and fraud," Attorney General David T. Wilentz said he had "reliable information" that Gov. Hoffman would grant a reprieve.

The chief prosecutor of Hauptmann made the statement to members of the legislative appropriations committee and added that if such action were taken he would need additional funds to fight the case.

Gov. Hoffman himself gave no hint as to whether he would prolong the condemned man's life. He could only grant a reprieve of not exceeding 90 days, the State Court of Pardons already having denied a plea for commutation of sentence.

Defense attorneys hastened from Judge Davis' courtroom to a nearby hotel, one of them remarking, "we've got to go think."

In rejecting the two motions, Judge Davis said that for him to overrule the highest courts of the State and the Nation "would seem

Art Williams Abandons Air Search for Redfern

Georgetown, British Guiana, Jan. 14 (AP).—Art Williams, unsuccessful in an airplane search for Paul Redfern, American flier missing since 1927 on a flight from the United States to Rio de Janeiro, abandoned the quest today and started back for Georgetown.

A wireless message from Wanatoba, a post of the boundary commission mapping the lines separating British Guiana, Dutch Guiana and Brazil, said he was taking off on the return trip.

Williams, backed by Edward Sill, Georgetown merchant, started the unsuccessful hunt December 5. He was aided by Harry Wendt, a copilot, and a native Indian guide.

Reports that a crippled white man had been seen living in a tiny Indian village far inland led Williams, a veteran American flier, into the South American jungle.

Air Liner With 14 Passengers Reported Crashed in Arkansas

Memphis Plane Joins Automobiles in Search for Ship; Pilot's Radio Silent Since 7:18 p. m.; Craft Long Overdue at Little Rock.

By the United Press.

Forrest City, Ark., Jan. 14.—The sheriff's office reported tonight a westbound plane from Memphis had crashed into woods 17 miles northwest of here.

A searching party left here at 10:30 p. m. in automobiles. An airplane from Memphis arrived a few minutes later to aid the search. The weather here was fair.

The sheriff's office had no details. Someone who witnessed the crash was said to have notified the American Airlines at Memphis—45 miles from here—and word of the crash was received here first from Memphis.

The sheriff's office at Wynne, 16 miles north of Forrest City, which would be within 3 miles of the reported location of the wreck, had no word of a crash.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 14. (U.P.)—Reports to the Memphis Municipal Airport tonight said the American Airlines plane which left here at 6:30 p. m. crashed or was forced down near Forrest City, Ark.

The plane carried 14 passengers. A report from Little Rock said it was two hours overdue there.

American Airlines attaches said the ship was piloted by Jerry Marshall. The co-pilot was Glenn Freeland and the stewardess, Peral Gasparini. All three crew members lived at Fort Worth, Tex.

Official said they would not announce the passenger list until they learn definitely what had occurred.

A plane was dispatched from Memphis to begin a search.

American Airlines officials said they last talked to the pilot of the plane at 7:18 p. m.

The ship was believed to be down in the swamp rice lands near Forrest City.

New York, Jan. 14 (U.P.)—American Airlines officials tonight announced names of five persons they believed were aboard their plane, which reportedly crashed near Forrest City, Ark. They were:

Mrs. Samuel Horowitz, Boston.
Mrs. B. Horowitz, Boston.
Sebea Horowitz, Boston.
Julius Cahn, Los Angeles.
Charles Altschul, Glendale, Calif.

All were going to Los Angeles and boarded the West-bound plane here or at Boston. Three others who boarded the plane at New York got off at Philadelphia or Washington.

The missing plane left here at 12:30 p. m.

Moscow Fixes Three Billions As War Budget

Fears of Japan and Germany Spur 57 Per Cent Fund Increase.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Jan. 14.—Spurred by fear of war with Japan or Germany, the supreme authorities of Soviet Russia today unanimously approved a military budget of 14,800,000,000 roubles ($2,960,000,000) for 1936, an increase of 57 per cent. By way of comparison the total military expenditure of the United States in 1935, for army and navy, was $590,844,112.

The central executive committee, corresponding to a parliament in capitalistic countries, approved the budget without a dissenting vote after fiery speeches by Premier Viacheslav Molotov, who charged Germany and Japan with warlike intentions; and Klementi Voroshilov, commissar for defense, who urged great expansion of the Russian military air force.

A large part of the military budget will be spent on increasing the Red army, which already numbers 940,000 men, according to speeches before the council. Better barracks, improved equipment and additional airplanes also will be provided.

Mikhail Kaganovitch, assistant commissar of heavy industry, stressed the importance of building up the air force, particularly modern bombers, in view of the unsettled Far Eastern situation. He said his department has facilities to create whatever aviation equipment is considered necessary by Voroshilov.

G. F. Grinko, commissar of finance, said the entire 1936 budget would be 78,800,000,000 (B) roubles, or $15,760,000,000 (B) under Russian arbitrary valuation.

It was explained for purposes of comparison with a capitalistic state's budget, that all factories and trade in Russia are State controlled and, therefore, the national expenditure includes not only normal government functions, but the amount private industry in other States would spend on wages and capital investment.

Military expenditures, however, in all countries is solely a government function.

The entire 1935 Russian budget was 68,500,000,000 roubles. Increased military expenditures account for almost all of the increase in the new budget, approved today.

French Fearful Reich Will Arm The Rhineland

Attacks on Franco-British Aid Pact Raises 'Scare;' Politics Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Jan. 14.—French newspapers expressed apprehension tonight lest recent attacks on Franco-British mutual assistance plans foreshadow a German remilitarization program in the Rhineland, but diplomatic sources expressed doubts of the sincerity of these "fears."

In these quarters the opinion was voiced that the "scare" over the possibility of Adolf Hitler's remilitarization of the Rhineland, which was prohibited by the Versailles Treaty, was raised as part of the French government's campaign to hasten parliamentary ratification of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact.

Political maneuvers which may endanger the cabinet of Premier Pierre Laval late this week overshadowed the Italo-Ethiopian situation. Feverish activity was revived in the Chamber of Deputies and Senate lobbies as Parliament resumed sessions after a brief recess and leaders of various factions pushed their interests in the coming chamber elections.

London, Jan. 14 (AP).—A surprise meeting of the defense sub-committee of the British cabinet was held late today directly on the heels of sensational reports from Paris that France feared a new Hitler coup in the demilitarized Rhineland zone.

The government quickly denied it had any substantiation of the report. These hinted of a possible German maneuver to fortify the Rhineland and were linked with the Anglo-French agreement for mutual military support in case of an Italian attack.

The foreign office was uncommunicative on the purpose of the ministers' 2½-hour meeting and stated simply the "same subject as yesterday" was discussed.

The session yesterday was reported to have talked about the defense requirements budget. It was believed also that the leaders dealt at length with the country's military preparedness situation in advance of the League Council meeting Monday.

A full cabinet meeting tomorrow will adopt instructions to Anthony

Sweden, in Sharp Note to Italy, Protests Ambulance Bombing

By the Associated Press.

Stockholm, Jan. 14.—The Swedish government, in a note handed to the Italian minister today, protested against the Italian bombing of a Swedish ambulance unit in Ethiopia, in which it said one Swedish subject was killed and another wounded.

The note said a statement by Italian military authorities that the bombing was in reprisal for an Ethiopian violation of war laws could not be regarded as an excuse for an attack on an ambulance. The Swedish unit, the government stated, had never abused the international treaty under which the Red Cross is guaranteed protection in war time.

Investigation of the bombing, the note asserted, revealed that it was in the nature of a direct assault upon an ambulance in which wounded Ethiopian soldiers were being treated.

Sweden took note of Italy's expression of regret, said the protest, and expected that the promised investigation of the attack would be pursued with the utmost vigor and that those responsible would be brought to account.

The Stefani (official Italian) News Agency said recently the Italian bombing near Dolo December 30, in which the Swedish Red Cross unit was struck, occurred after Ethiopians captured and beheaded an Italian pilot, Tito Minniti.

The Italian government, it was disclosed January 2, officially expressed regret to the Swedish minister in Rome, but said the bombing was in reprisal for an "atrocity committed by the Ethiopians." It warned Sweden against "tendentious versions of the incident."

Agriculture, Treasury Departments Seek Solution Today.

Hopes to Save Jobs, President Indicates

Officials Doubt Power to Issue Salaries for January.

AAA employes facing loss of jobs were assured yesterday of the moral support of President Roosevelt, but not until today, despite two opinions handed down yesterday by Comptroller General McCarl, will they know whether they are to get pay checks for the last two weeks' work.

McCarl, passing on the fiscal fate of 6,600 Agricultural Adjustment Administration employes (all but 1,000 of them in Washington) and 2,500 Internal Revenue employes (600 here and the remainder in the field), ruled as follows:

1. Because data supplied by Secretary Wallace in his request for advice "does not disclose sufficient facts," judgement on the 6,600 AAA workers is deferred.

2. Treasury employes assigned to the Internal Revenue Bureau in connection with collection of AAA processing taxes are entitled to no further salary payments if such payments come out of funds derived from processing taxes, which have been outlawed by the Supreme Court

9,100 Employes Affected

Stating they would continue negotiations with the Comptroller General in an effort to unravel the snarled pay roll question, Treasury and Agriculture leaders were still uncertain last night whether authority exists to meet today's pay roll, so far as the 9,100 affected employes are concerned.

Although the opinion in the Treasury case indicates further salary payments are illegal, that department refused to state that the 2,500 workers in this group would not be paid today on schedule.

It was learned, in spite of secrecy surrounding the overtime call, that the Treasury's voucher and auditing section worked most of last night on the AAA payroll, indicating that all will be in readiness to meet salaries today on schedule if payment is authorized. The tabulating work was still going on at midnight in the Treasury annex on Madison place. Not in months have employes of the section been called in for night work.

President Expresses Hope.

Almost simultaneously with the pronouncements by McCarl, President Roosevelt voiced hope for prompt passage of a farm relief program which would utilize the present administrative setup of AAA. At his press conference, he praised the efficiency of the workers facing dismissal and expressed the wish that if they are demobilized on a furlough basis, as planned, they can be brought together again to man whatever substitute agency is formed.

Following are the immediate effects of the Controller General's replies to the Secretaries of the Treasury and the Department of Agriculture:

Five hundred and ninety-five "temporary" employes of the AAA, all of whom are in Washington, have been given notice of dismissal or will receive notice at once.

About 1,000 Administration workers in Washington will be placed on indefinite furlough as of January 31.

595 Outright Discharges.

No AAA employes, except the 595 who were hired on a 90-day basis, will be discharged outright. Dismissed on furloughs, to prevent utter demobilization of the Administration's administrative force, they will receive the accrued leave to which they are entitled.

A skeleton staff will be retained in any eventuality for the purpose of liquidating accounts and forming a nucleus for whatever other farm aid bureau may be set up by Congress in the AAA's stead.

It was brought out that 3,000 to 4,000 workers would be needed if Congress decides to fulfill its "moral obligation" to farmers and make payment of $283,000,000 still outstanding on contracts.

Meeting with representatives of the American Federation of Government Employes and the National Federation of Federal Employes, Administrator Davis assured them that every effort will be made to provide as adequately as possible for the clerks facing dismissal.

Because the query of Secretary

Maryland Extension Service Group Offered Idea by Symons.

Application of a plan similar to milk-marketing agreements used by co-operative dairy associations to other crops was suggested yesterday by Dr. T. B. Symons, University of Maryland Extension Service director, as a substitute for the AAA.

Addressing the annual Extension Service conference at College Park, Dr. Symons said the plan assured a producer a definite price for a certain basic amount of his production.

"He is free to produce as much more than his basic quota as he may desire, but must take his chance as to the price he may receive for any production beyond this base," the director pointed out.

The principal embodied in the plan is based upon the fact that a continuing supply must be given assurance of a basic price which will enable him to stay in business. The lower price received on surplus would serve as a brake on overproduction.

"I believe that a farm can be given a suitable quota for production of different major crops," he asserted, "and that the farmer can be assured a reasonable price based upon fair exchange, or parity, for his basic quota."

"He could produce in excess any quantity he desires, but would be given the difference between the general sale price and the parity price on his basic production only. Funds for such payments would be raised either by special or general taxes, or other constitutional means."

Other speakers on the day's program were Dr. H. J. Patterson, dean of the university's college of agriculture; Dr. C. W. Warburton, director of extension in the department of agriculture; George A. Finch, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; Dr. S. H. DeVault, head of the university's department of economics, and H. W. Hochbaum, of the Agriculture Department.

The movement to push the extension of New York avenue eastward from its intersection with Bladensburg road to a point near Tuxedo, Md., is gaining headway, according to Mayor Fred W. Gast, of Cheverly.

Traffic on the Defense highway would be greatly relieved by such a new route, it is claimed. The proposed thoroughfare would parallel the Pennsylvania Railroad for the greater part of the way, and connect with the suggested superhighway to Baltimore over the right of way of the abandoned Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis electric railway.

Gast and others who are working on the project are seeking the co-operation of the District of Columbia Commissioners and Maryland Congressional leaders in bringing about the early construction of the route.

Projects of the Rotary Club of College Park for 1936 include a modern recreation center for Prince Georges County, systematic planting of trees along the county's highways and co-operation in solving county problems and rendering international service.

T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission and a member of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is chairman of the club service committee.

This committee has suggested obtaining a plot of land nearest the center of population to establish a recreation center, to be equipped with an athletic field, tennis course and other facilities.

Dr. James I. Boyd, of Forestville, has been elected president of the Prince Georges County Medical Society, with Dr. W. B. Moyers, of Mount Rainier, vice president, and Dr. A. B. Hooton, of University Park, county health officer, secretary-treasurer. Dr. W. Allen Griffith, of Berwyn, was named censor for three years. Dr. H. T. Willis, of Hyattsville, was chosen delegate to the Maryland Medical and Chirurgical Faculty, with Dr. Griffith, alternate.

Mrs. Robert B. Morse has been elected president of the Rector's Aid of Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville, with Mrs. Stanleigh Jenkins, vice president; Mrs. Thom Hardester, secretary, and Mrs. G. Edward Lanhardt, treasurer.

Snyder-Farmer Post, No. 3, American Legion, of Hyattsville, will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m., in the National Guard Armory.

Mrs. J. Howard Hopkins, of Laurel, president of the Maryland Council of Federated Church Women, addressed the quarterly meeting of the Hyattsville Council yesterday in the Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church Parish Hall, Hyattsville.

Numbers Racket Probe Goes Outside Baltimore

Baltimore, Jan. 13 (AP).—A court-ordered inquiry into the "numbers" racket here began today to reach beyond the confines of the city as investigators prepared to lay evidence before the grand jury.

Charles C. Dipaula, assistant to State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells, left the city for an undisclosed destination. The purpose of Dipaula's mission was not revealed, but it was thought he had gone to question reported "numbers" syndicate heads who left the city after the investigation began or to examine certain bank deposits in other cities.

Liquor Law Revision Is Sought To Stimulate Montgomery Sales

Cut in State Tax, Change in Hours, and Other Amendments Proposed to Aid Competition With Washington Beverage Dispensers.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
1111 Oak Avenue, Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone, Shepherd 2363.

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board yesterday drafted a seven-point legislative program which it will ask the county commissioners to recommend for enactment at the special session of the State General Assembly next month.

Two suggested changes were designed to enable the county dispensaries and beer retailers to compete more equitably with Washington's liquor stores. They proposed reduction of the State tax on distilled spirits from $1.10 to 50 cents a gallon and the changing of "on sale" hours for beer from 6 a. m. until midnight, as at present, to from 8 a. m. until 2 a. m., except on Saturday night, when the midnight closing would be observed.

The other suggested changes were:

Amendment of the liquor law to permit brewers and distributors to sell directly to retailers, eliminating the bookkeeping necessary under the present setup where sales go through the dispensaries.

Amendment to permit the holders of wine licenses to sell wine with an alcoholic content up to 21 per cent, instead of the 14 per cent to which they are limited now.

Amendment to provide exemption of the receipts of the dispensaries from the State gross receipts tax.

Amendment to permit licensed retailers to change the type of their license without the advertisements and hearings required now.
